More About Peas

Some people imagine that Canadian packed Peas are not as good as peas from France. There was never a greater fallacy. French Peas are largely packed from seed grown in Canada. If you will compare the Canadian with the French pack Peas you will notice that the flavor of the imported Peas is killed by the use of green coloring.

A prominent grocer said that he never ate any Peas but the imported. He was asked if he had ever compared the French with the Canadian Peas. He confessed that he never had. A tin of very ordinary Canadian Standard Peas two or three years old was then opened against a tin of French Peas. The French Peas had the Canadian Peas beaten for color, but for flavor the Canadian pack Peas were much superior, and had a flavor that was entirely lacking in the French Peas. In fact the French Peas were quite unpalatable.

The Canadian Canners' Canned Peas are the finest in the world. They have the field to themselves as regards quality.

Talk Quality in Peas, and educate your customers to buy the better grades. Show them wherein the difference lies. It will pay you well.

The difference in cost is slight, and you can obtain a much larger profit on the better grades.

Try it for one week. Talk Canadian Canners' Sweet Wrinkle Peas at every opportunity, and note the results.

The 1908 Pack of

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND

Canned Fruits and Vegetables

is going to be right up to the high standard of quality which we have attained in the past. Our policy of giving REALLY GOOD VALUE is an unswerving one. Perhaps you haven't been very particular about your brand of canned goods in past seasons. Indifference like that doesn't pay. Grocers who handle Old Homestead Brand sell most canned goods because the quality of Old Homestead Brand not only CREATES but KEEPS good customers. Specify Old Homestead Brand when ordering canned goods and be sure of a successful business!

The Old Homestead Canning Co.

Picton, Ontario

TO THE GROCERY TRADE OF CANADA.

Gentlemen:

Suppose you undertook to sell cheap tomatoes, cheap corn, cheap salmon, cheap baking powder, cheap flour or in fact every article of poor quality at a low price. How long would you stay in business?

Haven't you noticed that the successful grocer is he who deals in high-class goods? People may buy goods at a low price but when eating or drinking them they forget the price paid and not only have a poor opinion of the goods but also of the seller.

The grocer who deals only in reliable goods, goods with a reputation for quality, secures a name for himself for reliability—a reputation that attracts and holds permanent trade.

The grocer who sells cheap goods, must of necessity sell goods of low quality. True he may attract the bargain hunters, temporarily, until they find out that goods of poor quality are not cheap at any price.

Moral:—Better let the other man catch the bargain hunters and yourself build up a reliable trade. Handle only good sound goods at a fair price and don't struggle to offer poor goods cheaper and make enemies.

"SALADA" is the standard of fine teas — the finest the world produces—and the grade we sell at 30c. per pound is absolutely unequalled by other houses at 10c. per pound more. It is cheaper than trashy 25c. teas because it goes much further, and better than this, it pleases your customers.

Yours for increasing business,

The "SALADA" Tea Co.

Western Boards of Trade Convention

This Year's Mercantile Parliament at Medicine Hat the Best Yet Held—Manitoba Admitted and Division into Provincial Associations Voted Down—Many Questions of Practical Interest to Merchants Discussed — To Meet at Saskatoon Next Year.

Medicine Hat, otherwise known as "The City of Eternal Light," was the scene last week of a gathering of hard headed Western business men whose harps and halos were not very much in evidence, but who are among the ablest and most public spirited of the business men of the West. The occasion of this notable gathering in the Western gas city was the fifth annual convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada, the assembling of the Western Business Men's Parliament. In every respect it was a big success. The attendance was fairly large, and it was representative of the best towns in the two Provinces, most of the resolutions were worthy of the serious and careful consideration of the best business men of the West, and the debates were of a high order of merit. As in former years, the various Boards of Trade of Saskatchewan and Alberta towns sent to the convention their best business men capable of giving expert information on most of the topics under consideration.

Transportation questions bulked large in the discussions, and, fortunately, there were present by special invitation W. B. Lanigan, of the C.P.R., and Geo. H. Shaw, of the Canadian Northern. Several misunderstandings were cleared up by the heart to heart talks that resulted, and, as a result of the conference, the business men and the railway officials each understand the other's position better than before.

The big debate of the convention was on a semi-political question, the advisability of the adoption of the policy of Government guarantee of railway construction bonds by the Governments of Saskatchewan and Alberta. This resolution was introduced by the Calgary Board and met with vigorous opposition. After a debate lasting nearly a day the resolution was amended so as to retain little resemblance to its original form, and passed unanimously. As amended, it merely states the crying necessity for more railways in the two Provinces, and calls upon the Provincial Governments to take steps to secure the early construction of colonization railways.

Group of Delegates in Attendance at the Fifth Annual Convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada.

Personnel of Conventions.

From year to year the personnel of the conventions necessarily changes very much, but there are several delegates who have attended all five conventions held, and others who have not missed more than one or two. R. J. Hutchings, Calgary; H. W. Laird, Regina, and K. W. Mackenzie, Edmonton, are at least three delegates who have not missed a convention, and they are among the leading debaters at every convention. A well-deserved honor was paid Mr. Mackenzie in his election to the Presidency, and he discharged the duties of presiding officer with tact and ability. William Short, of Edmonton, who was not at the Prince Albert convention last year, was one of the Edmonton representatives this year, and was given a warm welcome by his friends. E. M. Saunders, Moose Jaw, a familiar figure at previous conventions, was greatly missed this year. Being absent on his holidays he was unable to attend, but a well-deserved honor was done him in his election to the position of Second Vice-President. Another delegate greatly missed this year was William Pearce, of Calgary, who was prevented from attending by his absence in the north country on an important mission. At previous conventions his thorough knowledge of Western conditions and familiarity with Western problems was found of great value, and many expressions of regret at his absence were heard at the Medicine Hat convention.

An important step was taken looking to the widening of the scope of the association. Although known as the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada, the organization has never admitted the Provinces of Manitoba and British Columbia into full membership. It was decided to invite all the Manitoba Boards of Trade to send representatives to the next convention, at which the Province of Manitoba will be admitted into full membership.

As in former years, representatives from the Winnipeg and Brandon Boards attended the convention by special invitation, and took part in the proceedings. Jos. Cornell was present throughout the convention as a representative of the Brandon Board, and H. M. Belcher, President of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, was in attendance the first two days of the convention. His colleague the first day was A. L. Johnson, and on the second day C. N. Bell, Secretary of the Winnipeg Board.

THURSDAY SESSIONS.

The opening session on Thursday morning was purely of a formal character. Mayor Cousins on behalf of the city of Medicine Hat extended a cordial welcome to the convention delegates and his address was responded to in suitable manner by President McAra. Committees on credentials and resolutions were named and the convention then adjourned to meet at 2 p.m.

At the afternoon session the credentials committee reported the following list of delegates in attendance:

Balgonie—C. C. Rigby.

Brandon—Jos. Cornell.

Calgary—T. J. S. Skinner, C. W. Rowley, C. F. McQueen, R. J. Hutchings, A. E. Cross, Chas. H. Webster.

Cardston—D. E. Harris, jr., D. S. Beach.

Craik—Chas. S. Davis.

Edmonton—A. C. Fraser, A. G. Harrison, K. W. MacKenzie, A. B. Campbell, Wm. Short.

Gleichen—Emil Greisbach.

Indian Head—Walter Gordon, J. C. Davis, Joseph Gleun, H. H. Campkins, J. A. McCaul.

Medicine Hat—Wm. Cousins, C. S. Pingle, F. L. Crawford, D. G. White, W. Huckvale.

Milestone—J. Harris, Dr. Cook.

MacLeod—C. MacLeod, E. F. Brown.

Moose Jaw—Hugh McKellar, E. Stuart George, E. N. Hopkins.

Prince Albert—J. E. Bradshaw, N. W. Morton, R. S. Cook.

Regina—P. McAra, A. E. Whitmore, H. W. Laird, J. M. Young, W. P. Wells.

Rouleau—Harvey Ausley, William Ausley.

Strathcona—R. P. Lewis, J. M. Douglas.

Saskatoon—B. Chubb, M. Mansell, F. M. Schlanders, A. E. Young, P. Currie.

Winnipeg—H. M. Belcher and A. L. Johnson.

The committee on resolutions presented a report striking out one or two irrelevant resolutions and it was adopted unanimously.

President's Address.

President McAra then delivered the annual presidential address brimful of optimism as to the business situation and the work of the associated boards. He congratulated the convention on the large attendance of delegates and expressed his confidence that lasting benefits would result from their deliberations.

Referring to the business situation he though the country was to be congratulated on the return to normal conditions following the business crisis of 1907 and the disappointing crop of that year. He was of opinion that business henceforth would be on a sounder basis and that the net result of the trouble of recent months would be good.

"Crop prospects for the present year are the brightest in the history of the west," he declared amid applause. The returns for this year's crop would be very large, sufficiently large to restore the old-time business activity. The country was to be congratulated on the class of new settlers being obtained this year and these with the big crop would ensure prosperity.

The president congratulated the associated boards on the fact that definite governmental and legislative action had followed several of their resolutions last year. Government action had been taken to prevent a recurrence of the fuel famine. Regulation of telegraph and express charges was possible now through appeal to the Railway Commission and this was one of the most important topics discussed at the meeting in Prince Albert a year ago. Legislation regarding telephones and hospitals had followed the lines of resolutions passed a year ago by the associated boards. He was also pleased to note that a marked improvement in the postal service in the west had taken place during the past year and he believed that the representations of the Business Men's Parliament of Western Canada had had their due influence in bringing about this happy result.

These results had been obtained through bringing the resolutions repeatedly to the attention of the proper authorities, and he wished to express his appreciation of the efficient and painstaking work of Secretary B. W. Wallace, of Prince Albert.

Election of Officers.

After a hearty vote of thanks to the retiring president had been carried on motion of Hugh McKellar, of Moose Jaw, the election of officers was proceeded with and resulted as follows.

President—K. W. MacKenzie, Edmonton.

1st Vice-president—Wm. Cousins, Medicine Hat.

2nd Vice-president—E. M. Saunders. Moose Jaw.

Secretary-Treasurer—John T. Hull, Medicine Hat.

On motion of Hugh McKellar (Moose Jaw) and John T. Hall (Medicine Hat), a vote of thanks to retiring Secretary Wallace, of Prince Albert, was carried unanimously.

K. W. McKenzie, the newly elected president, then took the chair and expressed in suitable terms his appreciation of the honor done him and his city in his election to this important post of honor and responsibility.

On motion of H. W. Laird, Regina, the courtesies and privileges of the convention were extended to the railway representatives and the delegates from the Winnipeg and Brandon boards. These gentlemen were invited to take seats on the platform: H. M. Belcher, president of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, on behalf of the railway representatives and Winnipeg and Brandon delegates extended thanks for the courtesy of invitations to the convention. He commented upon the circumstance that the Province of Manitoba is not included in the association.

Tuberculosis Sanitarium.

The first resolution to engage the attention of the convention was introduced by R. J. Hutchings on behalf of the Calgary board and related to the establishment of a national consumptive park and tuberculosis sanitarium in the mountain district of Alberta. It was as follows:

Whereas, it is a well-known fact that the climatic conditions prevailing in Central Alberta have a favorable influence on the disease of tuberculosis, which attracts to this district many thus afflicted; and whereas, many others are advised to come by their medical attendants and will continue to come; and whereas, we are burdened with an invalid class that endanger the health of the community and appeal strongly to public sympathy; and whereas in the interest of humanity they cannot be allowed to mingle with the general public, but should be taken care of which can only be done at a hazardous risk to those with whom they associate; and whereas, a large percentage of these people arrive penniless and are unable to support themselves, they necessarily have to be provided for notwithstanding the fact that they have no rightful claim on this community for such support; therefore be it resolved, that the Alberta Government be memorialized to take the iniative in having the Dominion Government set apart land for a national consumptive park and establish a tuberculosis sanitarium somewhere in the Rocky Mountains by constructing and maintaining suitable buildings for the maintenance and care of all Canadians suffering from this disease.

Speaking to his resolution, Mr. Hutchings said that the problem had forced itself upon the attention of the Calgary board by reason of the large number of consumptives annually dumped into Calgary and vicinity by their relatives who pay their fare to Calgary and then leave them to shift for themselves. Last year a deputation waited on Hon. Frank Oliver and pointed out the danger of contagion from the presence of these consumptives and asked that the Dominion Government make a grant or land for a consumptive sanitarium. Mr. Oliver was favorable but suggested that the first move in the matter should come from the Alberta Government. The Alberta Government had given the deputation an encouraging reception and some action was expected to result.

A. E. Cross, Calgary, said that there was justification for asking the Dominion Government aid as consumptives come to Alberta from every part of Canada.

H. W. Laird, Regina, raised the point that the people of Ontario support an excellent institution of this nature in their own province and they might object to the Alberta sanitarium being a national undertaking with Dominion Government support. This view did not find favor with the convention and the resolution was carried.

Outside Patients in Hospitals.

C. P. McQueen, Calgary, fathered a resolution respecting the support of outside patients in hospitals when these patients are unable to make payment. He said it was the experience of most hospitals that at least seventy-five per cent. of their patients from outside municipalities were unable to pay for their treatment. The Calgary hospital loses at least $3,000 per annum in this way. He thought it only fair that there should be legislation by the Provinces compelling the outside municipalities to reimburse the hospitals for treatment given patients from their district in all cases where patients have not made payment.

A. L. Johnson, Winnipeg, expressed his sympathy with the purpose of this resolution. The Winnipeg General Hospital takes care of many outside patients and although the outside municipalities are asked to subscribe towards its maintenance they do not respond to the invitation as they should. He would not, however, favor making Government or municipalities entirely responsible as he thought it unwise to do anything to stifle private benefactions.

Hugh McKellar pointed out that the Associated Boards had taken a stand on the hospital question a year ago, and he thought they could not do better than reaffirm the principles then laid down. He moved in amendment that the resolution of last year be reaffirmed, and his amendment was seconded by Wm. Short, Edmonton.

Mr. McQueen contended that there was no conflict between the resolution of 1907 and that now proposed and in this view he was supported by A. L. Johnson, Winnipeg, who pointed out that the former referred only to the building of hospitals, whereas the latter referred to their maintenance.

Finally it was decided to let the resolution stand over until Friday to allow those interested to frame a motion satisfactory to all.

Indian Reserves.

In many parts of the west the presence of Indian reserves in the neighborhood of towns and white settlements is retarding the development of the country. By arrangement with the Indians the Dominion Government has put some of these reserves on the market and there is an agitation to have this policy pursued further. T. J. S. Skinner, Calgary, voiced the prevailing discontent of towns near Indian reserves by moving the adoption of the following resolution :

WILLIAM COUSINS, MEDICINE HAT

Whereas, large tracts of land adjacent to prosperous towns and progressive settlements throughout the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan are nonproductive as they are occupied by Indian reserves, and whereas, these reserves are, in the majority of instances, of greater extent than the requirements of the Indians demand and also cover larger areas than the treaty allows, and whereas, the money that could be realized from the investment of the amount that could be derived from the sale of the surplus portions would yield more annually in revenue to these Indians than the same land is yielding under the present system, and whereas, in a great many instances the bands of Indians occupying these reserves are in no way progressive, consequently keeping large tracts in their natural unproductive state, which are conditions that would not exist were these portions thrown open for settlement; therefore, be it resolved that this convention urgently requests the Dominion Government to exert strong influence with the Indians in securing their consent to the disposal to actual settlers of all such surplus territory that is not required or occupied by the Indians.

Speaking to his resolution Mr. Skinner pointed out that according to the treaty each Indian family of five was to have 640 acres of land. On that basis the Indians of the west now have 565,120 acres in excess of treaty rights. If divided according to population, each Indian family of five would have 1,315 acres. The Indian will not cultivate so much land as the white man and this big excess of treaty rights is of no use to him. If sold, the proceeds would bring more than five million dollars and the interest at five per cent. would provide each Indian family of five with an annual income of more than $200. Thousands of white settlers would come in and the result would be satisfactory to all concerned.

Wm. Short, of Edmonton, urged caution. "These Indians occupy reserves set apart for them by treaty," said he. "We must be careful not to nullify a treaty. It may be true that these reserves retard settlement in some districts, but that fact does not excuse the violation of a solemn treaty. The Indians should not be disturbed unless an amicable and satisfactory agreement can be made with them."

R. S. Cook, Prince Albert, pointed out that this policy was being followed without any friction in the Province of Saskatchewan and the results were satisfactory to Indian and white man. He could not support the resolution in its present form.

R. J. Hutchings, Calgary, was sure that it was the intention of the resolution to take care of the Indian. The red man was not being benefitted by the present condition of affairs and settlement was being retarded. Why could not an amicable settlement be made to the advantage of both ?

D. S. Beach, Cardston, said the question was a burning one in Cardston. "In my town we are only 90 feet away from a reserve 75 miles long by 20 wide. There are only 700 Indians and a few cayuse and cattle on this reserve, and our town is kept back by it."

Hugh McKellar, Moose Jaw, opposed the resolution. "The Indians were here first," he declared. "Because settlement has pushed up within 90 feet, is that any reason why the Indian must get out ? "

J. E. Bradshaw, Prince Albert, objected to government "influence" being exerted. No one knew just what form that "influence" would take. Probably he knew better than most what it might be. Mr. Bradshaw was opposition candidate at a Provincial bye-election in Prince Albert not long ago and his reference to government "influence" provoked some amusement.

On suggestion of Mr. McCaul, Indian Head, the last clause of the resolution was amended as follows :—

"That this convention request the Dominion Government to treat with the Indians to secure their consent to the disposal to actual settlers of all such surplus territory that is not required or occupied by the Indians."

This amendment was agreed to by Mr. Skinner and carried unanimously.

Executive Committee.

C. W. Rowley, Calgary, introduced a resolution favoring the appointment of an executive committee consisting of the president, secretary and two delegates from each province, to follow to their final conclusion all resolutions passed at this convention. Wm. Short favored the appointment of a permanent secretary. After some discussion, it was agreed to let this resolution stand over until it was settled whether or not the association should divide on provincial lines.

Exemption Ordinance and Insolvency Law.

Wm. Short, Edmonton, brought up the important question of the exemption ordinance and the need of the insolvency law. His resolution was as follows :—

Whereas, the Exemption Ordinance has in practice worked out in a manner unjust and unreasonable, and clearly in ways not intended and not in the interests of those whom it was intended to serve ;

Therefore be it resolved, that the Provincial Governments affected be, and they are hereby requested to amend the said ordinance so that while reasonable and fair protection is accorded to the farming and similar interests it shall not be possible for traders and others to dishonestly take advantage of a statute which should be calculated to afford settlers a reasonable opportunity of getting a fair and reasonable start in a new country ;

And whereas, in cases of assignment for the benefit of creditors, it has in the majority of cases been found impossible to prepare an adequate and proper statement of the affairs of the insolvent by reason of the failure of the insolvent to keep proper books or records of his transactions, and it has also been found impossible for creditors to adequately check or eliminate dishonest trading and sales by traders in fraud of the rights of their creditors ; Therefore it is resolved :

(1) That the Dominion Government be requested to enact an effectual and comprehensive insolvency law.

(2) That Provincial Governments be requested to amend the Assignments Act in such a manner as to provide for the keeping by traders of accurate and full records of all transactions, and in particular of all sales of property.

(3) To provide such legislation as will enable a proper judicial officer to hold a full and complete enquiry in every case, where an official assignee shall, from lack of proper records or other dearth of information, find it impossible to prepare an adequate statement of the affairs of the insolvent, showing the disposition of the insolvent's goods for at least six months before the date of assignment or insolvency.

Speaking to his resolution, Mr. Short said, "that a number of Edmonton wholesale houses find it difficult to keep track of small retail dealers." Most dealers are all right, but on the part of some, there has been dishonest trading. There have been dishonest sales with shirking of liabilities. For example, a trader owns a store and a farm ; he builds up and equips his farm at the expense of his store, the latter goes bankrupt and the farm is protected by the exemption laws. This was quite unfair, and it was never the intention that the exemption ordinance should protect fraud. The basis of all business is honesty and credit has been injured by dishonest practices allowed by the absence of an insolvency law and the unfairness of the exemption ordinance.

H. M. Belcher, President of the Winnipeg Board, expressed his approval of the resolution. It was not the intention to do away with exemptions on homesteads, but to prevent the unfair operation of the exemption laws. Credit was being weakened by the practice of dishonest merchants equipping their farms at the expense of bankrupting their stores, and the great majority of merchants who are honest suffer thereby. This country needs credit and the basis of credit is being destroyed by the dishonest practices against which this resolution is aimed.

P. McARA, Jr., REGINA.

Retiring President of the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada.

Regarding the request for an insolvency law, the great difficulty is that when business men approach the government, they don't know just what they want. The principle should be established, that when a man fails, his estate belongs to his creditors and should be at their disposal. Mr. Belcher also referred to the class of men appointed as official assignees in the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta. He claimed that many of them are incapable and some are dishonest. The resolution was carried.

Goods Damaged in Transit.

A resolution which provoked a warm debate was introduced by William Short, Edmonton. It dealt with the responsibility for goods damaged in transit by railway companies and was as follows :—

Whereas, wholesale dealers in the West, having to depend upon railway companies for transportation, suffer great damage from loss and breakage of goods in transit ;

And whereas, in some cases the conditions upon which goods are received by the railway companies, provide that the same are received at the owner's risk, and such is the case in respect of certain classes of goods which is manifestly unfair and unreasonable.

Therefore, in the opinion of this convention it is desirable :

(1) That the contracts relating to the classification of goods should first be submitted to wholesale merchants at all distributing points in the West, whose representations should be heard before such classification become effective.

(2) A special board of arbitration, similar in constitution and practice to the Board of Railway Commission, should be appointed to hear and determine all claims for damages against railway companies by reason of breakage, shortage, loss in transportation, overcharge in rates and weights, and other damage to goods in transit.

Mr. Short said, that while the railway companies are required by law to receive for transportation and to take proper care of goods on which the charges have been paid, they are in the habit of making contracts seriously limiting their liability for damages to freight. Finally, this matter came within the scope of legislation and it was provided that all contract forms should be first approved by the Railway Commission. The Edmonton wholesalers complain that they were not consulted by the Railway Commission in recent changes approved by that body, and they complain of unfair treatment in the classification of freight and some other matters. They complain that they are compelled to ship certain classes of freight at their own risk.

"Freight has disappeared off the face of the earth," declared Mr. Short, and under the present contracts the shippers have no redress, because they can't prove actual theft. No contract should be approved and no classification made that will relieve the railway companies of their responsibility to deliver freight or pay the value."

H. W. Laird, Regina, opposed the resolution in a strong speech. He contended that Mr. Short's remarks were extreme and not borne out by the facts. "We have so many real grievances," he declared, "that it is foolish to waste our time in the discussion of grievances that will not bear investigation."

He thought the clause relating to classification uncalled for, for the reason that it has to be passed by the Railway Commission, and all have a chance to be heard before that body. If the merchants of Edmonton made no objections before the Railway Commission, it was now too late to make complaints before the Associated Boards.

At one time the Claims Departments of the railways were poorly managed and there were many complaints, but during the last year or two there has been a great improvement and claims are being promptly met. The railways see that it is to their own interests to meet claims fairly. A shipper has redress in the courts if he can't get justice.

The last clause would simply mean a duplication of machinery now provided for. We are overgoverned already, and we don't want another Board of Arbitration. He considered the whole resolution uncalled for and unnecessary as it was based on wrong information.

G. H. Shaw, of the Canadian Northern, said that the resolution was evidently based upon a misapprehension of the conditions under which the railways transport goods. There was no intention on the part of the railways to contract themselves out of liabilities. All contracts were subject to approval by the Railway Commission, and all interests have a chance to be heard by that body. He had been in the traffic department of the C.P.R. and C.N.R. for twenty-six years and he had yet to learn of a legitimate claim which had been refused by either railway.

Hugh McKellar, Moose Jaw, could not understand how it was that the Edmonton Board had not heard of this matter as the Moose Jaw Board had been notified twice by the Railway Commission that the matter was to come up.

W. B. Lanigan, Asst. Freight Traffic Manager of C.P.R. western lines, said that he saw in the audience many of the largest shippers in the West and he could not recall a single instance in which the claims of these gentlemen had not been promptly adjusted. He contended that the classification schedules were as nearly perfect as possible, being the result of years of experience. Regarding claims for goods, he contended that the railways are as anxious to be on good terms with their patrons as any merchant to please his customers. There are, however, classes of goods which are fragile and are often improperly packed. Several instances of this kind were quoted in illustration of this point.

Claims are promptly paid by Canadian railway companies, he contended, but often they are not promptly paid by American connections. The damage is traced back to the American road and it refuses to pay. The claim is made to the Canadian road and it, being unable to collect, gets the blame.

After further discussion by A. L. Johnson, Winnipeg; Short, Edmonton; Cousins, Medicine Hat; Schlanders, Saskatoon; and Connell, Brandon; the resolution was voted on and declared lost.

The convention then adjourned to meet Friday morning.

FRIDAY MORNING SESSION.

At the Friday morning session, C. N. Bell, Secretary of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, was in attendance, taking the place of A. L. Johnson, who had returned to Winnipeg.

Hospital Resolution.

The first business of the morning session was the passing in amended form of the hospital resolution, introduced the day before. The resolution as amended was adopted unanimously and read as follows:

Whereas, efficient general hospitals have been established in the larger cities and towns throughout the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan at heavy expense to the individual communities; and, whereas, rural municipalities, having no accommodation for patients, send them to these hospitals, to the support of which they do not now contribute; and, whereas, the said municipalities have in the past refused to contribute to the support of these hospitals; therefore, this convention of Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada respectfully urges the Governments of Alberta and Saskatchewan to pass such legislation at their next sessions as will lead to reimbursing fully public hospitals for treatment given patients in all cases where patients have not made payment.

Guaranteeing Railway Bonds.

Then followed what proved to be the most contentious resolution introduced at the convention. This was a long resolution introduced by A. E. Cross, Calgary, pointing out the great need for further railway construction in the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, referring to the practice of the Manitoba and Ontario Governments in guaranteeing the bonds of railway companies to secure new roads, stating that these guarantees had not cost either Province anything, but had secured the desired results and calling upon the Alberta and Saskatchewan Governments to adopt the policy of Government guarantee of railway bonds.

In the course of a somewhat lengthy speech, Mr. Cross emphasized the crying need for new railways in the two Provinces. Manitoba has a network of railway lines, but there are vast areas of fertile country in the two new Provinces absolutely without railway accommodation of any kind. Because of this the development of vast areas is being retarded and immediate action is immediately required. There is no use in producing grain and cattle if we can't get them to market. The railways are doing all that they can and doubtless will get around to these roads some time, but we don't want to wait. The most feasible method of assistance seems to be by the guaranteeing of railway bonds. In this way the desired result can be attained without one cent of cost to the Provinces.

Using a map to illustrate his speech, Mr. Cross pointed out many lines of railway required and in each case had to reply to queries from H. W. Laird, Regina, as to the mileage of the proposed roads.

The resolution was reconded by F. M. Schlanders, Saskatoon.

R. S. Cook, Prince Albert, objected to the introduction of a question of practical politics. This resolution was simply an invitation to the railway companies to hurry in their paper for endorsement. It was not fair, he contended, to institute comparisons with Manitoba as conditions are different. Manitoba suffered from railway monopoly three years ago, but the Western Provinces have three railways. These lines most have feeders, and if the railways are left alone they will build them unaided. In Ontario the road aided by bond guarantee runs through a district not fit for settlement; there are no such districts in Alberta and Saskatchewan. "If we are to furnish the security," concluded Mr. Cook, "we might as well retain the assets."

H. W. Laird, Regina, referring to the many projected lines mentioned by Mr. Cross, said that the latter had offered a prize package to every delegate to vote for the resolution. He was of opinion that the only delegates overlooked were those from Balgonie. Mr. Cross had proposed about 5,000 miles of new railway, and the guarantee would amount to many million dollars. He objected to the resolution because it was too broad and because of the economic principle involved. It was unwise to endorse the general principle of guaranteeing bonds without restricting it to specific projects.

"If we are to be guarantors," continued Mr. Laird, "let us look at our financial position. We are not in the same position as other Provinces. We have no lands, no timber, but are given an annual subsidy in lieu of these assets. We are in the position of an office clerk at $65 per month, who undertakes to endorse a note for $75,000. The entire subsidy that Saskatchewan receives is required for current purposes, and that Province is undertaking capital expenditures of several million dollars for Parliament buildings and other public works, etc. Now we are asked to guarantee millions of bonds, when we require every available dollar of income to meet our current expenditures. Is this a reasonable proposition? Does it commend itself to a business man as a sane business proposition"?

Mr. Laird also objected to a guarantee of bonds without a quid pro quo in the way of control of rates. He admitted that railways were necessary, however, and submitted an amendment to the effect that the Provincial Governments of Saskatchewan and Alberta should be requested to proceed with the construction of such lines of railway as are more urgently required as Government undertakings, the said roads to be owned by the Provinces and to be leased for operation to existing railway companies on such conditions as to control of rates and interest on investment as will ensure the protection of the interest of the public for all time to come.

R. J. Hutchings, Calgary, supported the original motion in a moderate speech. He did not think that a tremendously big programme such as that outlined by Mr. Cross would necessarily follow. The principle of guaranteeing bonds would be observed within reasonable limits.

A long debate followed, participated in by Messrs. McKellar, Moose Jaw, Fraser, Edmonton, and McAra, Regina. When luncheon time arrived there seemed to be little prospect of an early ending to the debate.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

At the afternoon session the adjourned debate on the railway question was resumed. J. E. Bradshaw, Prince Albert, endeavored to have the discussion of the question shelved for another year. He urged that the resolution was one of the most important that could come before the convention, but it had received little consideration from the various boards and the delegates did not know the sentiments of those whom they were representing. He moved a twelve months' hoist, seconded by A. C. Fraser, Edmonton.

The popular "Billy" Cousins, Mayor of Medicine Hat, at this juncture interjected one of his characteristically humorous speeches. The whole opposition to the resolution seemed to proceed from an uneasy suspicion that some one was going to make a profit from the transaction. He had not intended speaking, and would not have done so had it not been for a conversation he had had a few minutes before with one of the old timers in Medicine Hat. He noticed that this old man had a magnificient garden full of rhubarb of which he was making no use whatever.

"Why don't you sell some of that rhubarb?"

"Well, it's here and if any one wants it, they can come and buy it."

"But plenty of people don't know anything about your rhubarb. Why don't you advertise in the papers that you have rhubarb to sell?"

"Now, you look here. I know what you are after. You want me to go down town and pay over some money to the newspapers. Not if I know it."

"No, I am not canvassing for an ad. If you don't want to do it that way, why don't you take your rhubarb down town and sell it to the stores."

"Now you look here, Mr. Cousins, I am not going to let anyone make a profit out of me. Not if I know it. If I sell my rhubarb to the stores at six pounds for a quarter, they will sell it at three pounds for a quarter. No sir, I'll let it waste first."

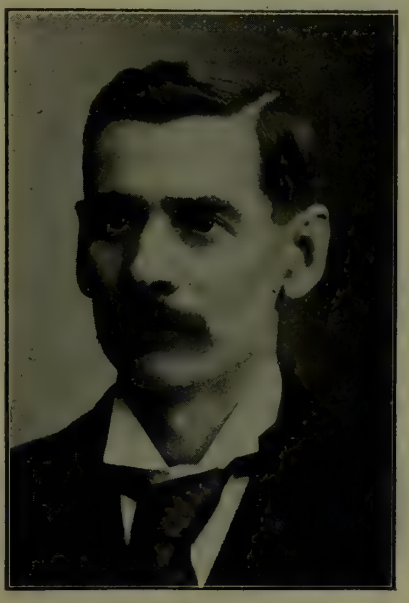
Mr. Cousins said he favored the resolution for the reason that the entire opposition seemed to proceed from the fear that some one might make a profit.

H. M. Belcher, Winnipeg, being called upon for an expression, said that it was not fair to quote the example of Manitoba in support of this resolution. Conditions were different, and moreover the Manitoba policy was inaugurated ten years ago. It was designed to overthrow a monopoly and to control rates. In this, it had been eminently successful, but this resolution did not propose any control of rates.

After a protracted debate the convention finally shirked the issue of a vote on the straight question on the guarantee of rates and Mr. Laird withdrew his amendment. On motion of Mr. Mansell, Saskatoon, a colorless resolution affirming the need of railways and calling for Provincial Government action was passed. The resolution did not indicate what form the government aid should take. As finally amended the resolution was as follows :—

Whereas, it is conceded that the general advancement of a country depends very largely on its transportation facilities ;

And whereas, it is obvious that the extensive areas of unpopulated lands in these two provinces are only awaiting transportation facilities to change them into well settled and abundantly producing districts;



JOHN T. HALL

Secretary Medicine Hat Board of Trade.

And whereas, in the Provinces of Alberta and Sasketchewan there is to be found the richest productive agricultural soil ;

Therefore be it resolved, that this convention of the Boards of Trade of Western Canada urgently requests the Governments of the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan to adopt a policy which will assure the early construction of colonization railroads in said provinces.

Freight Experts at Winnipeg.

The convention heaved a sigh of relief when it escaped from this highly contentious resolution and Mr. McKella, Moose Jaw, then introduced a resolution calling on the governments of the two provinces to appoint freight experts to reside in Winnipeg, and devote their whole time to the question of freight rates, in the interests of the western business men. This resolution was voted down after some discussion.

Freight and Express Rates.

R. S. Cook and J. E. Bradshaw, (Prince Albert), then introduced the following resolution regarding freight and express rates :—

Whereas, the railways of Canada, owned and operated by companies, have by subsidies, land grants and guarantee of bonds, added immensely to the debt of the Dominion and to the financial responsibilities both of the Dominion and of the several provinces ;

And whereas, the railway system of Canada, although divided between several companies, furnishes connection between any one point on the system and any other point on the system ;

And whereas, each railway company charges a higher rate proportionately for carrying freight a short distance than a long distance ;

And whereas, for instance, the charge for carrying freight two hundred miles, half of which distance is over the line of one company and half over the line of the other company, is much greater than the charge for carrying it the same gross distance over the line of one company only ;

And whereas, the railway companies carry freight at more favorable rates over lines known as main lines than over branch or feeding lines ;

Therefore be it resolved, that the Dominion Government be memorialized to take such action as will prevent any portion of Canada being placed at a disadvantage with any other portion of Canada equally distant from the trade centres of Montreal, Toronto, Halifax, Winnipeg, Vancouver, etc., and that such legislation will be enacted as will compel any two or more railway companies which have been assisted by bonuses, land grants or guarantees of bonds, to carry from any point on one of the lines to any point on another of the lines at a rate not higher than would be charged for the same gross distance over any one of the lines, and that the local mileage and other rates on all branch lines be the same as on the main line.

G. H. Shaw, of the Canadian Northern asked that the resolution be withdrawn, and defended the attitude of the railways and express companies in a lengthy speech. His views did not find favor with the convention, however, and the resolution was carried.

Transportation.

Another railway resolution was championed by J. E. Bradshaw, Prince Albert. It had to do with the right of a passenger to choose his route over several lines of railway and get return fare privileges. It was as follows :

Whereas, the railways of Canada, owned and operated by private companies, have come into existence largely through the generous subsidies, land grants and guarantees of bonds which have added largely to the debt and financial liabilities of the Dominion and its provinces ; and whereas, the traveling public should not be at any disadvantage owing to the fact that the railways are owned and operated by several companies instead of one company ; and whereas, the ramifications of the railways in many instances permit of different routes between one part of Canada and another ; and whereas, the railway companies at present do not consider themselves compelled to issue single or return tickets between any two points except by such route as suits their wish or convenience; therefore, be it resolved, that the proper authorities of the Dominion Government be memorialized to enact such legislation as will enable and compel railway companies to issue single or return tickets between points on the railway system of Canada at a uniform rate as to mileage and by such route as may suit the wish and convenience of the passenger paying for such transportation in advance.

G. H. Shaw opposed the resolution. He contended that the return ticket is a matter of privilege, not of right. It was natural that the railways should each want to get as much business as possible over their own lines. For instance, the C.N.R. do not want to sell tickets from Prince Albert to Winnipeg via the C.P.R. line from Regina to Winnipeg. If a passenger wants to go that way he can do so by paying the price, but he can't expect to get a return ticket as cheaply by that route as by the direct route.

W. B. Lanigan, on behalf of the C.P.R., said he sympathized with every effort on the part of Prince Albert people to travel via the C.P.R., but he considered the resolution was based upon a misapprehension. He made a strong speech against it and it was finally withdrawn.

At this juncture the railway representatives took leave of the convention, after being the recipients of a hearty vote of thanks for their attendance.

Union or Separation.

Each year some board introduces a resolution in favor of division on provincial lines, but the proposal has never been seriously considered. This year the motion came from Moose Jaw, and it was championed in half-hearted fashion by E. S. George and Hugh McKellar. It was opposed by P. McAra, Regina; R. S. Cook, Prince Albert, and A. G. Harrison, Edmonton, and was finally withdrawn amid loud cheers.

Manitoba Admitted.

Although the organization has been known as the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada, this has been a misnomer, for the reason that neither the Manitoba nor British Columbia boards have ever been admitted to membership. Representatives of one or two Manitoba boards have attended all the conventions since the first by special invitation but the B.C. boards have never shown any interest. There has been a strong feeling for some time in favor of the admission of Manitoba. One year's notice is required for a change in the constitution, and therefore no formal action could be taken at this convention admitting Manitoba boards to membership. It was quite evident, though, that there was a general desire to admit Manitoba, and accordingly it was decided to invite all the Manitoba boards to send representatives to the next convention, at which the necessary change in the constitution will undoubtedly be made.

Saskatoon Next Year.

Then followed the big contest of the convention, the selection of the next place of meeting. Invitations were extended by Moose Jaw, Indian Head and Saskatoon, representatives from each city pressing its claim. The first ballot showed a plurality for Indian Head, but not a clear majority. On a second ballot between Saskatoon and Indian Head the former town won out by a small margin of four votes.

The convention then adjourned to meet at 7 o'clock in the evening.

FRIDAY EVENING SESSION.

At the Friday evening session, First Vice-President, Mayor Cousins, of Medicine Hat, presided, in the absence of President MacKenzie.

Waste of Natural Gas.

W. Huckvale, Medicine Hat, championed a resolution calling for Government action to prevent the waste of natural gas. He pointed out that natural gas is going to waste near Medicine Hat and on the Athabasca river, near the Pelican rapids. His resolution, which was carried unanimously, was as follows:

Whereas at the fourth annual convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada, held in Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, on the 18th, 19th and 20th of June, 1907, a resolution was passed calling the attention of the Dominion Government to the waste of natural gas and memorializing them to use every endeavor to prevent the same, therefore be it resolved that this convention deems it advisable that the resolution referred to be re-enacted, and that a copy of the same be forwarded to the Department of the Interior urging upon them the necessity of the immediate action to prevent the unnecessary and extravagant waste of this valuable commodity.

R. J. HUTCHINGS, CALGARY.

A Prominent Delegate Who Was Always Listened to With Interest.

Prairie Fire Legislation.

Hugh McKellar, Moose Jaw, drew the attention of the convention to the large number of prairie fires which are due to the ignorance of new settlers as to the prairie fire regulations. He secured the unanimous adoption of the following resolution:

Whereas, the experiences of the present year have again demonstrated that the prairie fires ordinance is in a great measure ineffectual in preventing the starting of fires; and whereas, new settlers invariably plead ignorance of the provisions of the ordinance; therefore be it resolved that the Associated Boards of Trade would strongly urge upon our Governments the advisability of printing in convenient form a few of the most important provisions of the ordinance, and that copies of the same be placed in all Dominion lands offices and post offices for distribution to new settlers.

Reforestation.

The important question of the necessity for reforestation was brought up by A. C. Fraser, of Edmonton. He pointed out that, while the Dominion Government is giving some assistance to the Forestry Association, that assistance is quite unequal to the necessities of the case, and he urged the necessity of a definite and far-reaching policy on this question. The United States Federal Government is spending $2,000,000 per annum for this purpose and yet that is not enough, and the Republic will soon be denuded of all its timber if definite, decisive action is not taken. Germany is spending about $11,000,000 per year. The resolution, which was carried by a unanimous vote, was as follows:

Whereas, to a large extent, the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Southern Alberta are comprised of prairies largely devoid of building timber, of which an increasing amount is year by year necessarily required; and, whereas, along the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains and in parts, more particularly of northern Alberta, there is a very large area of land that would be more valuable for the cultivation of timber than for any other purpose, especially having in view the very great area of arable land situated in the said provinces; and, whereas, much of this territory is interspersed with rivers and creeks which form a natural protection against fire; and, whereas, the expense of providing fire rangers who could adequately protect the said areas from fire would be comparatively small and would be absolutely trifling in comparison to the value of the timber that would be secured by such protection; and, whereas, the climatic benefits of those matters incidental to the conversation of the water supply and the prevention of destruction by floods to be obtained by the preservation of the forests is of great value to the rest of the provinces; and, whereas, we recognize and approve of the action of the Federal Government in already setting apart tracts of land on the eastern slopes of the Rockies for forest reserves, we still think that there are timbered tracts of land adjacent to the Saskatchewan, Athabasca, McLeod, Pembina and MacKenzie and other northern rivers which are most suitable for forest reserves and for reforestation purposes; therefore, in the opinion of this convention it is highly essential that some concerted action should be taken for the preservation and reforestation of tracts of land suitable or expedient to be used and it is therefore recommended: (1) That timbered tracts of land should be set apart and the settlers prohibited from encroaching upon them while being used for timber areas. (2) That during the spring and fall at least an active and adequate corps of fire rangers should be provided, whose duty it should be to

DEATH OF HON. THOS. BALLANTYNE.

A Builder of Canada's Cheese and Dairy Industry and an Honored Canadian.

Hon. Thos. Ballantyne, who perhaps has done more than any other man in private life in Canada to develop the cheese and dairying industries of the country along scientific lines, passed away at his home in Stratford after a few weeks' illness. For the past few years he had not been in perfect health but his pluck and constant attention kept him able to be about his residence. He was confined to his room only a few weeks before his death.

The late Thos. Ballantyne was born at Peebles, Scotland, in 1829. His people were shepherds, but his father retired to Peebles and engaged in trade. Here he received an education, and in 1852 came to Canada, locating in Downie Township. He taught school for eight years and then engaged in farming. He was successively auditor, clerk and reeve of Downie.

In 1871 Mr. Ballantyne entered provincial politics, contesting North Perth unsuccessfully against Mr. Andrew Montieth. In 1872 he refused the nomination for the Commons, but in 1875 was elected to the Legislature and held the seat continuously till 1894, when he was defeated by Mr. McNeil. During the last four years in the Legislature he was Speaker of the House.

It was, however, more as a dairyman than as a farmer or politician that the deceased will be remembered. In co-operative dairying he fought alone to make the principle a success for many years. In 1867 he built the Black Creek cheese factory, which has long been recognized as a model, but for years his work was tedious and about 1870 he felt that he would have to forego the work as he had expended from his private funds all he could afford. He appealed to Hon. John Carling, then Minister of Agriculture, and received $800 per annum. This gave him new prospects and in 1877 he brought to Perth county the gold medal for the best cheese made on the American continent. During 1867 he attended the first dairy convention and was elected director and was subsequently elected nine times president, being also first honorary president.

Mr. Ballantyne was the first to suggest employing instructors to improve the quality of dairy products, and upon one occasion when the association was unwilling to retain the services of Prof. Arnold, then instructor, he retained him at his own expense for a year. Largely through his efforts he has seen the cheese factories of Canada increase to about a thousand, nearly all of which are managed by farmers themselves.

Co-operative dairying has been introduced in Scotland, and for this Mr. Ballantyne was directly responsible. In the south of Scotland several years ago he visited fairs and interested the Scottish farmers in the movement.

Outside his dairying interests Hon. Mr. Ballantyne led a busy life and filled several positions of trust. He was president of the British Mortgage Loan and vice-president of the Perth Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He was a patriot to the core, Canada for him being first, last and always. Mrs. Ballantyne daid in 1902. The family includes several names familiar to Canadians. For several years the business established by Mr. Ballantyne in Stratford has been carried on by his son, Thos., and in Montreal by R. M., who do a large export cheese and butter trade.

PACKING TEA IN CEYLON.

Arrangements have been completed whereby the "Salada" Tea Co. will have all their package tea sold in the Northwest and on the Pacific Coast packed in Colombo, Ceylon. It was found necessary to relieve the pressure at the Toronto office where every machine has been running at its fullest capacity for some time past. By this arrangement all the "Salada" sold in the West will arrive five or six weeks sooner than it could coming via England.

L. E. GEOFFRION,
Of L. Chaput Fils & Cie., Montreal, President-Elect of the Canada Wholesale Grocers' Exchange.

We have pleasure in presenting herewith the portrait of L. E. Geoffrion, of L. Chaput Fils & Cie., Montreal, who was elected president of the Canada Wholesale Grocers' Exchange at the recent meeting in Quebec. It was the intention that this photograph should have been inserted with the report of the Exchange meeting in last week's issue, but owing to mis-connection this was found to be impossible.

President Geoffrion has had a large acquaintance with the wholesale grocery business and this, with his experience as a member of the Board of Harbor Commissioners for Montreal and natural ability, should make him a particularly good presiding officer. His loyal remarks concerning the adoption of the word Canada in the Exchange's name at the Quebec meeting were highly appreciated.

RICE MILLERS' COMBINE.

New Orleans, June 29.—With a capital of $2,500,000, the five largest rice mills in Louisiana—Independent, at Crowley, the Abbeville, the Donaldsonville, the Eureka, the Estherwood and the Kueydan—have been merged into the United Irrigation & Rice Milling Co., with Henry Beer of New Orleans, president; I. M. Lichtenstein, 1st vice-president; Henry E. Bumbel, 2nd vice-president; and Edger H. Bright, secretary-treasurer.

The combine will control the Lichtenstein & Hechinger irrigating canal in the Crowley rice belt, and the Abbeville canal. The properties absorbed are valued at $2 000,000 and the remaining $500,000 of capital will be issued for cash to increase the company's working basis.—New York Commercial.

CHANGE IN GROCERY TERMS.

On and after July 1st, the terms of the Ontario wholesale grocery trade will be: Nett 30 days on all goods except tea and sugar.

Kent Whipple, representing the Beamsville Preserving Co., Beamsville, Ont., was in Montreal this week, and favored The Grocer with a call.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL CONVENTION.

Many important questions of particular interest to the people of western Canada were discussed by some of the best business men of the west at the fifth annual convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada, held in Medicine Hat recently; and the extended report of the proceedings appearing in this issue of The Canadian Grocer is worthy of the careful perusal, not only of our readers in western Canada, but of those of our readers in the east who desire to familiarize themselves with western thought and western problems. The best business men of the western provinces are sent to these conventions as delegates and the results of the serious deliberations of these men receive and deserve to receive careful consideration on the part of legislators, Dominion and Provincial.

Recognizing the importance of the deliberations of this convention and the duty of the trade press to report fully the proceedings at meetings of this kind at which business problems are discussed by the leading business men of the country, the MacLean Trade Newspapers have been represented at the last four conventions by a member of the regular staff. The most complete reports published have appeared each year in the MacLean Trade Newspapers. At this year's convention the Toronto Globe was the only other paper outside the Province of Alberta having special representation.

The influence and prestige of the Associated Boards will be greatly increased by the decision to admit into membership the boards of the Province of Manitoba. Retiring President McAra was able to point with satisfaction to several important reforms which had followed as a result of last year's deliberations and there can be no doubt that the resolutions passed by a body of representative business men, including also the important Province of Manitoba, will have even greater weight with Dominion and Provincial cabinets. The decision to include Manitoba is a decided step in advance.

TRAVELERS AND PROSPERITY.

The commercial travelers in the United States are to hold August 14 and 15 an interstate Prosperity Conference.

It is a commendable decision. Much of the present condition of business is due to lack of confidence. People are afraid that something may happen. They are pessimistic.

In Canada the crop conditions were probably never better; and agriculture being the backbone of the country, confidence is showing unmistakeable signs of reviving. But being afraid that something may happen the commercial body politic is still slightly nervous.

Tonics are good for nervousness. Next to the press, none are better qualified than commercial travelers to administer the necessary doses. If the commercial travelers of Canada can get together during the next few weeks and discuss how these tonics can be judiciously administered they will do the country good service.

There are about fifteen thousand commercial travelers in Canada. Each of these has his finger on the pulse of trade and should be able to advise and counsel his customers.

ISSUE THE BULLETIN EARLIER.

The fruit division of the Agricultural Department at Ottawa for some years has been issuing a fruit crop bulletin, giving prospects and the outlook on all lines of fruit in different sections of Canada. While useful, the bulletin, which is issued at the end of the month, and reaches the greater number of its readers from one to three weeks afterward, seems rather belated. It would seem that it would be of greater service if it were issued earlier in the month, say somewhere between the 1st and 10th. Another step in improvement could be made if a summary of the bulletin were issued for the use of the press a few days previous to the issue of the report.

IMPROVED CONDITIONS IN PACKING INDUSTRY.

The Canadian packing industry has shown a more encouraging condition the past week than for several months. The factories, which have been running at half and even quarter capacity since last fall, are most of them again on full time, and matters generally are very much more brisk.

Two or three reasons are given for the improved conditions. During the last week the British market has improved to the tune of at least two shillings and, owing, it is said, to lower stocks of Danish and American products, there is a healthy demand for Canadian bacon. This will provide for a brisk export trade. During the summer, also, there is always a heavier demand for bacon at home, and this is being felt already and is stimulating local demand.

The improved conditions are simply a part of what is usually expected during the summer but they are very welcome after the several months of quietness in this important Canadian industry.

PUSH CONDENSED MILK.

Considerable notice has been given in the daily papers recently regarding the high milk prices prevailing in various parts of Canada this summer. While the public are thinking of this, and because of the season itself, this appears to be an opportune time for the grocer to take a little advantage of his friend the milkman and to build up a nice trade in condensed milk.

Condensed milk, as it is now put up by several companies in Canada, offers several advantages over the fresh variety, particularly during the hot weather. First, it is very much easier to keep, and to those people who are not able to afford a supply of ice it is almost a necessity. Again, its purity is unquestioned, a fact of considerable importance in these days of questionable practices in various lines of food supplies. The plants of the condensing companies are, without exception, and from necessity situated in the heart of the dairying districts, where a supply of wholesome milk is available. The processes used are such as to preserve the purity of the product and to make it absolutely safe for use, particularly for babies and delicate appetites. Altogether condensed milk offers a very practical substitute for the milkman's offering and should provide a good opportunity for the energetic grocer to increase his sales.

TRAVELER'S FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY.

The responsibility of a traveler for advances obtained from a bank on a credit note issued by a firm, which before it liquidates its account with the bank goes into bankruptcy, is being tested in the courts in British Columbia, and referring to this question, which is one in whch every traveler wll be interested, the Vancouver World says:

"Say that while a commercial traveler is abroad on the business of his firm his employers go into liquidation, what is his position with respect to money drawn on their credit from banks at towns visited in the course of his work? This is the question which the courts will decide in at least some of its aspects in the course of the next few days. It has arisen in connection with the failure of a large Manitoba firm of millers, who employed a Vancouver man to travel through the province disposing of the product of their mills. The defendant in the suit under consideration was making his usual tour when he received a telegram instructing him to return home. He at once repaired to the nearest bank to draw the necessary funds, but was informed that his credit note was no longer good as his principals were in liquidation. Makng the best of the situation, he borrowed sufficient money to bring him home, consoled himself that the firm did not owe him more than a few weeks' salary and expenses, and promptly dropped into a new situation. During his trip, however, he had drawn several times on his employers and to his astonishment he speedily found that the banks which had cashed his drafts held him personally responsible, although the money was obtained on the strength of a credit note from the firm which employed him. As the case is sub judice, it would be improper to enter on a further discussion of its merits, but it is permissible to say that whatever the decision a prnciple of considerable importance to commercial travelers will be thereby established."

ONE CENT RATE ON CITY LETTERS.

Honorable Mr. Lemieux, Postmaster-General, in discussing in the House of Commons the other day the proposal to reduce the rate on city letters from two to one cent, said that Mr. Eaton, in Toronto, was one of the best clients the Post Office Department has. "He buys probably $100,000 of stamps in a year. All his postage is for the country districts." Mr. Amstrong. M.P., in making further reference to the matter stated: "In this proposal the Postmaster-General is most certainly discriminating against the rural districts. When he says that Mr. Eaton, of Toronto, is returning to the Postal Department a revenue of $100,000 per annum, he must remember that a large proportion of that comes from the people of the rural districts to whom he sends his goods and his circulars."

PRESS COLLECTIONS NOW.

With the business outlook brightening as a result of the splendid crop prospects in most districts, the present is an opportune time to press for the payment of outstanding accounts.

Much money is owing to merchants by farmers and others who have money hoarded up in savings banks. The bankers, of course, encourage depositors to leave their money in the bank, but it is not honest or fair for customers to allow accounts to remain unpaid when they have the money to meet the calls upon them.

Merchants, too, who do not press such customers for the money rightly due are lacking in the qualities necessary for business success. The man who wins to-day is he who sails close to the plan of buying and selling for cash.

A merchant cannot buy for cash when selling goods on credit and unless he buys for cash he loses the trade discounts which spell success or ruin for him.

The old-time dealer supplied goods on long credit at equally long prices. The modern merchant cannot get the big profits formerly obtainable. He must sell in competition with the catalogue house run on a cash basis. And he must sell for cash or on short term credit with note security or he will sooner or later get squeezed.

The grocer who has money tied up in overdue accounts will act wisely in trying to get this in now, and then follow by curtailing his credit sales. The outlook is bright and the crop outlook encourages the hope that trade will be good next winter. But it will be well to utilize the present opportunity to gather in money and adopt the cash system completely or in part.

ACTUAL CONDITIONS DESCRIBED.

The MacLean Trade Newspapers have been performing a practical service to all interested in Western Canada by the publication in its papers during the past few months of a weekly article on "the Situation in the West," written by one of the best informed newspaper writers in the west.

Instead of merely boosting the west and describing artificial conditions, the real situation has been outlined, as readers of trade newspapers require accurate information.

Now that the outlook is indeed brightening and the prospects are that western Canada will have the largest crop in its history, the statements made by our correspondent are given greater heed to than would be the writings of an over-optimistic space writer.

Absolute reliability can be placed on the articles on the western situation, published each week, as well as upon the market reports and editorial matter on other pages throughout the paper.

MAY DECLINE TO RATIFY TREATY

Advices received early in the week from Paris by the Government indicate that there is a strong probability of the French Senate declining to ratify the Franco-Canadian trade convention unless some modifications are made in it. Some opposition has arisen to the treaty among the agriculturalists of France, who fear the increased competition from Canada under the special preference granted by the treaty to Canadian products. Despite the criticisms of the Opposition to the provisions of the treaty when it was before the Commons, and their argument that Canada was reaping no very substantial benefit, it now appears that in France the opinion prevails that Hon. Messrs. Brodeur and Fielding negotiated a treaty that was unduly favorable to Canada.

Another reason that militates against the ratification of the treaty at present is the fact that negotiations are now on between France and the United States, looking to the passing of a trade treaty between the two Republics, and the French Senate fears that the concessions granted Canadian manufacturers in some lines and to Canadian agricultural products may be made the basis of demands by the American Government in drafting the new treaty.

The French Senate adjourned for two months on Wednesday.

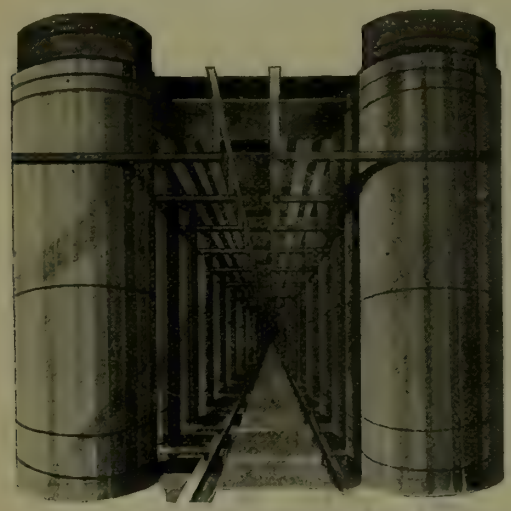
R. E. Holyoke has opened a new grocery store in Mr. Connell's new building at Woodstock, N.B. It is fitted up in first-class style and is probably one of the nicest stores in the province.

The general store of Moodie & Co., Canfield was entered recently and a quantity of jewelry, tobacco, fruit and some clothing stolen. The burglars entered by taking out the glass of a front window.

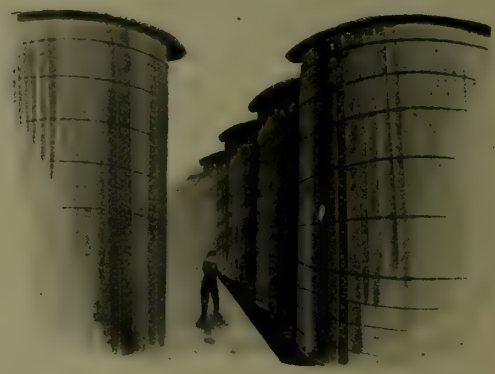
The Making of Vinegar and Pickles

Something About the Modern Methods in Use in Canadian Factories With Illustrations—The Fermenting and Maturing of Vinegars, "Processing" and Packing of Pickles and Treatment of Catsups and Jams.

Nearly every branch of Canadian industry has made rapid strides during the past few years—Canada's growing time—though this is perhaps nowhere more evident than in the manufacture of vinegar, pickles, jams, etc. It is not a great number of years since the greater part of the pickles and jams sold in Canadian stores were imported, and the idea prevailed that such goods made in this country could not be very satisfactory. Latterly, however, by reason of the development of the industry and the scientific attention given to it, this idea has largely disappeared and Canadian products are now competing successfully with almost every imported line.



Eng. No. 1—A Fermenting and Clarifying Room for Vinegar.



Eng. No. 2—Vinegar Maturing Warehouse.

The engravings shown herewith give a remarkably good idea of the modern and sanitary methods employed in the best Canadian factories in the manufacture of vinegar, pickles, jams, etc.

Making Vinegar.

In making vinegar for pickles, etc., it has been found that a blend of white wine and malt varieties brings out the most delicate flavor. An idea of how the vinegar is fermented and clarified may be obtained from engraving No. 1, where the long rows of deep wooden vats are seen in which the process takes place.

Engraving No. 2 shows the larger vats in a bonded warehouse where the vinegars are matured.

It might be interesting to note that for a pickling brine the best results have been found to come from a mixture of ordinary coarse salt and sea salt from the Mediterranean.

Processing Pickles.

Perhaps the most important feature in pickle manufacture is that of "processing." Besides the use of the best vinegar and spices the recipe, worked out along scientific lines with the purpose of achieving the most satisfactory results, must be followed with exactness. The pickle while being piquant and appetizing, must at the same time be perfect in texture, color and keeping qualities or it will not be assured of ready sale.

Eng. No. 3—Showing How Pickles are Packed.

Packing An Important Process.

The packing of pickles, seemingly a simple process, is also one of the most important. They must be packed in the bottle carefully and so as to present a tasty appearance. The bottle of pickles is more often than not placed directly on the household table and if it does not present an attractive and appetizing appearance the goods are not likely to prove very popular. Engraving No. 3 will give an idea of how this work is done and of the cleanliness and sanitation observed in a modern factory.

Catsups and Jams.

Another department to which considerable attention is given in several of the best pickle factories is the manufacture of catsup and jams. The processes gone through in making these products have been described quite fully in earlier issues of this paper but the engravings here shown will give a good idea of the application of modern methods to the industry. Engraving No. 4 shows the modern method of bottling catsup where it can be noticed that no uncleanly funnels or dippers are used, the work being done rapidly, exactly and in a cleanly way by specially adapted machinery.

Engraving No. 5 shows a battery of copper kettles in the jam-boiling room of a modern factory, giving an idea of the cleanliness and scientific method that prevails in every department.

Canadian Goods in Canadian Product.

It is an interesting fact that almost every variety of material used in the production and bottling of these Canadian goods comes in most cases from Canada itself. A list of the various goods used will show this: Fruit, Canadian grown; vegetables, Canadian grown; malt, Canadian grown; sugar, Canadian refined; vinegar, distilled in Canada; pails and cases, Canadian; glass, Canadian; paper wrappers, Canadian; tin caps and cans, Canadian; corks, Canadian cut; labels, Canadian; most herbs and spices, imported.

ADDITIONAL CORRESPONDENCE.

PETERBORO.

June 29.—During the past few weeks an agitation has been going on among the clerks of the retail stores for a Thursday half-holiday during the summer months. Some of the proprietors have announced that their stores will be closed every Thursday afternoon, but this does not apply to the grocers. Almost all of them keep their stores open on that afternoon, as well as on the others. J. T. Braund is the only grocer who closes. Sone of the merchants think that by taking the half-holiday the commercial men have not a fair opportunity of calling on them, should they happen to be in the city on that afternoon.

Chas. Rishor, wholesale grocer, is spending a couple of months at Stony Lake and is accompanied by his wife and children.

Barney Cain, of Burnt River, and formerly with M. Carton, wholesale grocer, is visiting friends in the city.

Although not definitely announced, it is practically assured that Wm. Campbell, local traveler for Perkins, Ince, wholesale grocers, will shortly sever his connection with that firm to enter the hardware business. He will become associated with the Best Stove and Hardware Co.

The three wholesale grocery establishments in the city close their stores every Saturday afternoon.

A fire broke out at midnight last Friday at the Quaker Oats Co.'s establishment, supposed to have been caused from an ignited cigar stub. The fire brigade arrived in quick time and very little damage was done.

STRATFORD.

June 30.—After a long and latterly a very painful illness, Hon. Thos. Ballantyne passed to rest at 7.30 o'clock Monday morning, June 29th. Stratford's Grand Old Man and the father of the Canadian cheese industry, was a beautiful character, and no death of recent date has caused such sorrow among our citizens as that of Hon. Mr. Ballantyne. For fifty years Mr. Ballantyne has been a man of prominence and high position, and the wealth he created for Canada, as father of its great cheese manufacturing and export trade, coupled with a fine presence, have made him known, not only throughout the Dominion, but other lands as well. Mr. Ballantyne up to the time of his death was president of the British Mortgage Loan Co., vice-president of the Perth Mutual Fire Insurance Co., chairman of the Hospital Trust, and honorary president of the Western Ontario Dairyman's Association.

In the death of Horace H. Felvus on Saturday morning Stratford lost one of its most esteemed and intelligent citizens. Mr. Felvus came to Stratford about seven years ago, as representative of Hodgson Bros. & Rowson, cheese exporters, Montreal, having been connected with that firm for five years previously. Death was very sudden and due to pneumonia.

MAKING A SUCCESS IN CANADA

A Story of the Building-up of a Growing Business—Pluck, Industry and Personal Attention to Details Give Almost Phenomenal Results.

Two and a half years ago an Englishman arrived in Canada. There is nothing very striking in this announcement, as Englishmen arrive in Canada daily and hourly. They come, many of them, to spy out the "blooming colony," a large number of them on pleasure bent. Some of them remain, others return home carrying with them impressions of Canada either good or bad, as conditions while in Canada affected them. Some come also with the laudable intention of establishing for themselves and families a business and a future home here. From the last mentioned class The Canadian Grocer has selected the name of James Wagstaffe, of Wagstaffe, Limited, Hamilton, Ontario, a name familiar not only to our readers, but also throughout the grocery trade of Canada as associated with the manufacture of jams, jellies, fruit preserves and other grocery and fruit products.

In writing a sketch of Mr. Wagstaffe's career since coming to Canada, it is difficult to get away from the idea that the success that has attended him in his new home was made with the aid of financial support or through fortuitous circumstances. When it is realized, however, that on landing in Hamilton his whole assets amounted to $22, $2 of which he applied to the purchase of an Enterprise Mince Meat Chopper, and the $20 for stock, it can be seen that his beginning was at the bottom of the ladder—and this was only two years and a half ago. It is not the purpose of this article, nor the policy of The Canadian Grocer in referring to sketches of this character, to allow the idea to obtain that the same is in the nature of an advertisement. It is merely to indicate to our readers and the interested trade what can be done by a man with a trained knowledge of his business and the determination to carry such knowledge and training into practical demonstration.

In order to place the career of Mr. Wagstaffe in Canada properly before our readers, it will be necessary to revert to his early years in England. It was first at Ashton-under-Lyne, near Manchester, that he, Wagstaffe, started the manufacture of pickles in a very small way. After devoting about five years to this business, he launched out into the manufacture of jams, candied peels and bottled fruits. During the years of his establishment at Ashton-under-Lyne, Mr. Wagstaffe had with him from time to time some of the finest English and Scotch experts, and in this way gained personally an advanced knowledge and experience. During his twenty years' establishment he succeeded in gaining a splendid reputation and became one of the largest Government contractors in the North of England, and during the South African War received contracts for over two million tins of jam from the British Government.

The query might arise as to why Mr. Wagstaffe forsook England to come to Canada. When Joseph Chamberlain signed the Brussels Sugar Convention and the war with South Africa cast a gloom over England, and the cotton trade was practically at a standstill, combined with a prolific season of fruits and large stocks from previous season, and in the combination of circumstances that forced many a much large concern to close its works, Mr. Wagstaffe's hard-earned business was swept away. In the financial depression Mr. Wagstaffe had offers from Germany and Switzerland to enter into the manufacture of similar products, but he, realizing that Canada was the youngest and most enterprising field, decided to come here.

JAMES WAGSTAFFE,
Of Wagstaffe, Limited, Hamilton.

He was here about eight months, looking over the field, visiting the fruit districts and finally located Hamilton as the best place in which to venture out in a similar business as that conducted by him in England. This was in October, 1905. After working in a small way he succeeded, through the quality of his output, in interesting a few local friends and with their aid he formed the concern, Wagstaffe, Limited. Such has been his success that the factory on Vine Street has had to be enlarged three times.

Mr. Wagstaffe has associated with him four of the best experts that have been cradled in the business, two sons and two daughters, all of whom take an active and personal interest in different branches of the business. There is nothing said in this article as to the quality of the goods, other than that Mr. Wagstaffe has put up high-class goods, and it is for the trade in Canada to judge whether he has realized his aim or object. It may be mentioned that the Dominion Government ordered supplies of Wagstaffe products to be forwarded to the Franco-British and Colonial Exhibition in London.

Mr. Wagstaffe is a comparatively young man, his age being 47. He is physically a well-set-up, sturdy, solid Englishman, full of energy, determined and plucky. He is a man that once he makes up his mind to do a thing, will stick to it to a finish. Coming to this country he had a lot to learn, and, as he expressed it to the writer, "I am learning all the time." His energy and activity is apparent in all that he does and the supervision of the plant makes it necessary to don the overalls at times, and his directing mind is in close touch with the manufacture of the smallest and least of his products as closely as with the most important and largest element of the business. Mr. Wagstaffe's success since coming to Canada is an evidence of what other Englishmen can do if they will size up the conditions in this country and adapt themselves.

THE BERLIN SUGAR REFINING CO.

One of the features of the week in the sugar market is the organization of a new company which will operate the Berlin sugar factory. The organization was completed on Monday, with the following directors j W. H. Breithaupt, Berlin; James Fowler, managing director; C. K. Hagedorn, R. Smyth, Casper Braun, Berlin; W. B. Rouse, Bay City, Mich., and E. W. B. Snider, St. Jacob's.

The new company is subsidiary to the Ontario Sugar Co., which formerly operated the plant.

Despatches from Berlin state that operations at the plant are to be resumed shortly. If this is so the factory will be operated in refining imported raw sugar, something which has not been done up to this time. In accordance with the preference granted to the sugar factories by the government, twice the amount of sugar manufactured may be imported in a raw state, and according to this the Berlin factory may bring in 29,000,000 pounds. It is stated that the new company purposes to make use of this privilege and to operate the factory all the year round. As the situation stands at present no contracts have been made for beets for the present season they cannot operate on beets until October, 1909, and consequently any work done before that must be with imported raws.

When in operation before, the factory was not strikingly successful. Two or three reasons are given for this, one that the proper extraction of sugar from the beets was not obtained and that the process could not be carried on economically, another that the necessary amount of beets could not be secured, and still another that the operations were carried on with too small a capital. The new company includes some active local capitalists and it is believed that the plant can be operated more successfully on a somewhat new basis.

Splendid Pure Food Show in Winnipeg

Second Grocers' Exhibition a Splendid Success Despite Unfavorable Weather—Visitors Included Best Class of City's Residents—Artistic Decorations Aid Materially in General Effect—Large Orders Taken for Goods Displayed—Some of the Exhibits.

One year ago when the first pure food show was held in Winnipeg, it was an experiment undertaken by the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada with grave doubts as to the financial outcome and the reception which the show would get from the Winnipeg public, to whom it was something entirely new. The success of the enterprise last year encouraged the management to make preparations for a better show this year and that their big expenditure of time and money was appreciated was proved by the large crowds that attended the show. The weather was against it as on seven days out of the twelve there were heavy rains, but the interest grew from day to day and the show closed on the night of June 20 with a record breaking crowd. An exhibitor remarked to The Canadian Grocer that the very best class of people in Winnipeg attended the show. In other cities where he had exhibited he had not found the same class of people in attendance, and he was therefore particularly gratified with the results in Winnipeg.

An Artistic Show.

Money was spent freely by the food show management in preparing a really artistic exhibition. A year ago every exhibitor decorated his own booth and consequently there was lack of harmony in the color schemes, but this year the food show management built and decorated every booth and consequently the result was very much better. A one-color scheme was used throughout. No bunting was used in the decorations and when the thousands of electric lights were turned on at night, the brilliant scene delighted crowds of visitors and the attendance increased from night to night.

Exhibitors expressed themselves to The Canadian Grocer as being well satisfied with the show. The indirect results of the demonstrations of the various products on exhibition are of course very great and cannot be estimated at once. Manufacturers will reap the benefit in an increased demand for their goods from the consuming public, and only the experience of the coming months can tell what indirect benefits have been received from their exhibits. But on the other hand, many exhibitors took orders for large quantities of goods to be supplied through Winnipeg retailers. Visitors were asked to sign orders for quantities of goods to be supplied through their own grocers. Grocers were glad to have substantial orders given them and in this way exhibitors got into touch with many new customers.

Was Well Advertised.

The food show management did not spare expense to ensure a good attendance. The show was well advertised in the newspapers, on the billboards and by means of a kite at the corner of Portage and Main Streets. On the opening days music was supplied by the Kilties' Band, and for the remainder of the exhibition by one of the best local bands. Baby shows, biscuit making contests, etc., did much to excite interest and bring visitors to the exhibition. A year ago the admission to the exhibition was 15 cents; this year the charge was 25 cents and the crowds were larger than ever before.

Much of the credit for the success of the show is due to E. B. Nixon, president of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada. He was untiring in his efforts to make the show a success and was to be found there at almost any time within the two weeks. But of course the man upon whose shoulders fell the chief responsibility for the success of the whole enterprise was Secretary W. A. Coulson. He was indefatigable in his efforts to keep the machinery running smoothly and the big success achieved is a tribute to his executive ability.

Carman-Escott Co.

W. H. Escott, of the Carman-Escott Co., wholesale brokers, Winnipeg, had a couple of booths devoted to an exhibition of three lines handled by them. These were Toasted Corn Flakes, White House Coffee and Wolverine Show Cases. These booths were tastily arranged and, as can be seen from the illustrations, presented a very attractive appearance.

CARMAN-ESCOTT CO.'S DISPLAY OF SANITAS CORN FLAKES.

"White House" coffee was served to many visitors and certainly gained in popularity as a result of the show. It is packed in one, two, and three-pound packages and looks well on store shelves as the packages are attractive in appearance. The Carman-Escott Co. sell this line to the wholesale trade exclusively, but the retail trade can obtain it from the Jobin Marrin Co., Winnipeg, Manitoba; Campbell, Wilson and Horne, Calgary, Alberta, or the Northwest Jobbing & Supply Co., Lethbridge, Alberta.

EXHIBIT OF PRODUCTS OF WESTERN CANADA FLOUR MILLS.

Toasted Corn Flakes in spite of increased competition in this line, are making rapid headway in the west. During the last month the sales have doubled. Made from the best white Georgia corn, Toasted Corn Flakes supply the demand for "something different" from other breakfast foods, and are rapidly coming into lasting popularity in the Canadian west. This food is put up in popular sized 10-cent packages.

The public showed great interest in the "Sea Crest" lobsters, packed by T. F. Smith & Co., Halifax, N.S. These lobsters are packed in glass and the customer can always see what he is buying. The goods present a particularly attractive appearance on a grocers' shelves.

Several lines of goods were displayed in a large Wolverine show case, manufactured by the Michigan Show Case Co., of Detroit. This is a line of which the Carman-Escott Co. recently became agents. It is a popular-priced case and, with the knockdown method of shipment employed by the manufacturers, can be shipped with small freight charges.

Mr. Escott devoted considerable time to the personal supervision of his booths and his work at the food show proved him a first-class specialty man. Having had some twenty years' experience in the grocery trade, he is a master of the salesman's art. Since coming to Winnipeg a little more than a year ago and going into partnership with Jos. Carman, he has gained a valuable connection with the Winnipeg wholesale trade, having been in charge of the sales department. In spite of the depression, the Carman-Escott Co., were able to show a gratifying increase in their sales last year.

Purity Flour.

Products made in the west received particularly favorable attention from the crowds of visitors at the fair, and the exhibit of Purity Flour, although made in St. Boniface, was satisfying to the pride of Winnipegers. The big mill in St. Boniface is an industry of which Winnipeg is proud and its products are popular in the Manitoba Capital City.

Purity flour, the flour that is recommended by its manufacturers because it "makes more bread and better bread," was the only line of flour shown at the exhibition, and occupied the same prominent position that it had last year—a double booth at the entrance confronting every visitor as soon as she got inside of the building. As may be seen from the illustration of the booth, there was an attractive display of flour in this booth and those in charge succeeded in interesting many visitors in the story of the manufacture of Purity flour.

In addition to the big mill at St. Boniface, the Western Canada Flour Mills Co. have large mills in Goderich, Ontario, and Brandon, Manitoba. Their largest mill is in St. Boniface, and it is one of the most modern and best equipped mills in the world. It has a capacity of 5,000 barrels per day, while the Goderich and Brandon mills have capacities of 1,800 and 400 barrels per day, making 7,200 in all.

The 'Purity" brand is the best known flour manufactured in these mills, and it is their highest grade. Only their highest grade flour is marketed by the Western Canada Flour Mills Co. under this brand. The other grades are also the products of the "Purity" mills and they are inferior only to the "Purity" patents. They are of high quality, even though not quite the equal of the "Purity" brand. In order of fineness, these are, "Five Stars," "Buffalo," "Medallion," "Three Stars," "Choice Bakers," "Maitland" and "Huron."

Perrin's Biscuits.

An attractive display of Perrin's biscuits was a centre of interest and among the thousands of visitors who were given a practical demonstration of the excellence of the Perrin products the company no doubt made many new friends. A capable demonstrator in charge of the booth tactfully explained to visitors the reasons why the Perrin biscuits are deserving of the favorable attention of the consuming public. The manufacturers have confidence that the quality of their goods will be their best advertisement if the public can be induced to test for themselves and the policy pursued at the food show was an effort to induce the Winnipeg housewives to investigate for themselves some of the Perrin lines with which they were not very familiar.

There is substantial reason for the excellence and purity of the Perrin biscuits. Expense is not spared in procuring the highest and best quality of flour, the sweetest butter and the purest flavoring and other ingredients. Skilled bakers only are employed and the most modern appliances are used in the bake shops. The biscuits are baked in the most modern traveling ovens, all under the most scrupulously clean conditions. Traveling ovens are employed for the reason that it is only by their use that the best results can be obtained in the baking of hard, sweet biscuits and the uniform rich color secured which is one of the distinguishing marks of the Perrin products.

The Perrin biscuits being made in Canada are adapted to the Canadian climate. This is a more important consideration than at first appears to the uninitiated for the percentage of butter shortening has to be changed according to the climate in which the biscuits are to be kept. Biscuits made for a foreign country have to be baked and dried so long in the oven to keep the quality from deteriorating in another climate that there is danger of the flavor being lost in the oven.

At the Winnipeg Food Show the demonstrator in charge was careful to draw attention to a few special lines, such as the "Cream Toast," the "Maple Sandwich," the "Leap Year" biscuit and the "Milk Chocolate Sandwich." Thousands of samples of "Leap Year" biscuits were given away during the show.

The D. S. Perrin Co. cover the entire country with their selling organization having branches at seven different points. Many jobbers also handle their lines exclusively. They have an important branch warehouse in Winnipeg in charge of Charles Grundy and Western orders can be filled promptly from Winnipeg.

H. J. Heinz Co.

Without an exhibit of the famous "Fifty-seven Varieties" any food show on this continent would be sadly incomplete and, as can be seen from the accompanying illustration, the H. J. Heinz Co. had a booth at this show unique in design and striking in appearance. It was a centre of interest for thousands of visitors during the progress of the show, and the housewives of Winnipeg displayed a lively interest in the various Heinz products and in the evidences of their purity and care taken in their preparation. Heinz pickles, relishes such as chutney sauce and Heinz evaporated horse radish, Heinz fruits, etc., were on exhibition and capable demonstrators were kept busily employed attending to the crowds who wanted to taste the Heinz products.

It is not, however, merely at exhibitions of this kind that the public have an opportunity of seeing evidences of the purity of the Heinz products. Last year over 30,000 visitors went through the Heinz factories in Pittsburg, visited the home of the famous 57, and saw with their own eyes the care, the precision and the marvelous equipment that have made the Heinz foods a standard of excellence and purity the world over. The doors of the factory are always open to visitors and it is there that the best exhibition of the purity of the Heinz product can be made.

Some idea of the magnitude of the Heinz business may be gained when it is remembered that the company now have over 4,000 employes and 400 traveling salesmen. There are twenty acres of floor space in the main plant at Pittsburg and there are in addition some 14 branch factories, with 32 acres of floor space. Some 30,000 acres are under cultivation annually to produce the raw material for the Heinz factories, and the labor of 40,000 persons is required annually to care for and harvest the crops. These figures give some idea of the magnitude of a business which has been built up from the smallest of beginnings in 1869. The H. J. Heinz Co. is one of the best illustrations of the rapid, substantial growth possible for a business on the American continent.

The Codville Co., Winnipeg, are agents for the Heinz products in the Provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and the Georgeson Co., Calgary, are agents for the Province of Alberta. These firms carry the Heinz products in stock and can fill orders promptly.

The exhibit at the Food Show was in charge of W. J. Sutton. He went west last week to exhibit at the Dominion Exhibition in Calgary.

Canadian Canners, Limited.

One of the most attractive displays at the Exhibition was that of the Canadian Canners, Hamilton, Ontario. A glance at the illustration of the booth will show the care and good taste exercised in its preparation. Two large "silent salesmen" were filled with a good assortment of glass goods, jams, marmalade, catsups, sauces and table relishes. Behind these, rising in conical shape to a point surmounted by an immense date palm was a really artistic arrangement of canned goods, showing a large variety of the different brands packed by this company. Among these were noticed the Aylmer, Auto, Canada First, Horseshoe, Log Cabin, Little Chief, Simcoe, Kent, Maple Leaf, Thistle, Grand River, Lion and Hygeian brands. In the centre of the cone-shaped exhibit was displayed a pyramid of condensed milk and evaporated cream, the white and gold labels of which stood out in pleasing contrast to the deeper colors of the labels on the canned fruits and vegetables.

The "Hygeian" brand was brought to the attention of the public and is worthy of special mention. The fruits and vegetables packed under this brand are put up in enamel-lined tins and the caps are clamped on. No solder is used in the packing of these goods and the product meets the requirements of the most critical consumers. The contents of the tins do not come in contact with the tin and they turn out with all their natural color and freshness. The label is one of the most attractive that Canadian art can furnish and special care is taken that the quality of the fruits and vegetables used is of the finest.

Demonstrators served cups of really delicious tomato soup to crowds of visitors who evidently appreciated very highly its excellent quality. At the other side of the booth, coffee was served to demonstrate the superiority of Aylmer Evaporated Cream. Tasty dishes of fruits, jams and "Faultless" peas lined both sides of the booth and attracted much favorable comment from numerous visitors. The "Faultless" brand of peas made many friends among discriminating visitors.

E. D. Smith's Pure Preserves and Vegetables.

Mason & Hickey, western agents for the E. D. Smith line of pure preserves, jams, etc., had a striking booth on the left corridor which could not fail to attract the attention of visitors immediately upon entering the building. A large sign emphasized the fact of the "absolute purity" of the Smith products, and booklets were distributed giving the result of a Government analysis of jams, jellies and preserves. Only 29 absolutely genuine and unadulterated samples containing no preservative were found among 182 samples collected and of these 29 it was found that 10 were the products of the E. D. Smith factory. Because of this demonstration of the absolute purity of the E. D. Smith jams, jellies and preserves there is a good reason for the advertising which proclaim them "the same that mother used to make."

THE CANADIAN CANNERS' BOOTH.

EXHIBIT OF E. D. SMITH'S PRESERVED AND CANNED GOODS.

Among the trade and consuming public the E. D. Smith goods have won an enviable reputation for purity and high quality—a reputation won and retained by merit only. The sealed bottled fruits and pure preserves and jams packed by this firm are as nearly perfect as the most modern methods and careful selection of fruits and sugar can make them. As is well known, E. D. Smith grows his own fruits on his 625-acre farm at Winona in the famous fruit-growing Niagara district. His factory is located on the farm, and, therefore, the fruits are preserved while still fresh and retain their fresh flavor.

As can be seen from the illustration, the Smith products were attractively displayed at the Winnipeg Pure Food show and many new friends were made for their products. They already have a very large sale throughout the Canadian west, having been energetically pushed among the trade by Mason & Hickey. This firm carry a stock in Winnipeg and can fill western orders promptly.

Display of Lipton's Products.

One of the most attractive as well as the busiest booths in the exhibition was that of Thomas J. Lipton. The booth was arranged to represent, so far as possible, a Ceylon tea garden and the backing display of jellies and puddings made from Gold Standard jelly powders and Gold Standard just-a-minute puddings, were also served by the lady demonstrators. Another attraction at this booth were the salads, which were served with ground of canvas was painted to carry out the general effect. In the front of the booth a display of the firm's teas was made and in the rear various products such as coffees, cocoas, jams, jellies, pickles, sauces and confectionery were attractively arranged. From the ceiling were hung a number of posters telling the good points of the various products.

An interesting feature of the exhibit was, of course, the demonstrating of the firm's products. Teas and coffees were served to visitors by native Cengalese from the Damlatenue gardens the largest estate in Ceylon and where the best tea is grown, one of the firm's plantations. A corps of demonstrators were also kept busy in serving visitors. This tea room was one of the most popular spots in the exhibition, it being used as a rest-room by thousands of ladies and gentlemen during the fair.

Both tea and coffee were sold at the booth and samples of the other products were given away in generous quantities.

J. J. Collyer, western representative for Thomas J. Lipton, was in charge of the exhibit and he and his assistants spared no pains to demonstrate the excellencies of the Lipton products.

"Gold Standard" Goods.

Probably one of the busiest spots in the food show was the large booth in the centre of the pavilion where Gold Standard Food Products were demonstrated.

Here the visitor was served with a cup of delicious Gold Standard "Chaffless Coffee," or a cup of fragrant Gold Standard tea and a dainty, toothsome biscuit baked with Gold Standard baking powder. A tempting display of jellies and puddings made from Gold Standard jelly powders and Gold Standard just-a-minute puddings, were also served by the lady demonstrators. Another attraction at this booth were the salads, which were served with mayonnaise dressing prepared from Gold Standard salad dressing powder, a new article which has just been placed on the market and which has met with instantaneous success.

The increasing popularity of Gold Standard goods was attested to by the number of interested ladies who visited the booth at different times during the show and six demonstrators were kept constantly busy serving them. Samples of "The Chaffless Coffee" and Gold Standard baking powder were freely distributed accompanied by a recipe book containing information regarding the goods as well as numerous successful recipes which are always of interest to the thrifty housewife.

Another feature of this exhibit was the biscuit baking contest which took place on Saturday night, the closing night of the show, and in which over 80 competitors were entered and the fact that three out of the four prize-winners used Gold Standard baking powder speaks volumes for the quality and popularity of this article, especially when it is taken into consideration that the judges had a most difficult task in selecting the prize-winners, as all the exhibits were of a very high quality.

Various Exhibits.

Tetley's teas were attractively displayed and their good qualities demonstrated to many visitors at the Food Show. High-class teas are popular in the West and the Tetley lines have many friends in Winnipeg.

Scott, Bathgate & Co. had two booths side by side exhibiting two of the lines for which they are agents in the West Dr. Price's Baking Powder and Christie's Biscuits—The management of each booth was in capable hands and no doubt the results were satisfactory.

E. L. Dreury, Winnipeg, had a striking exhibit of his soft drinks. The Dreury line is popular in the West.

THE CARMAN-ESCOTT CO'S DISPLAY OF WHITE HOUSE COFFEE.
For Description see Page 42.

White's chocolates and caramels occupied a booth at the extreme end of the show. The Stimpson Computing Scale Co. had an exhibit which was of interest mainly to those members of the trade who attended the Exhibition. Another exhibit of the same character was that of the National Cash Register Co.

Through the generosity of the Food Show management two booths were assigned to the Y.W.C.A. This organization have been conducting an aggressive campaign to secure funds for a new building. Different exhibitors provided the Y.W.C.A. booths with ice cream, candies, etc., and these were sold to the visitors to the show. The ladies of Winnipeg have been taking an active interest in the Y.W.C.A. campaign and there is no doubt that the action of the Food Show management in donating these two booths found its deserved reward in a largely increased attendance.

Milton's ice cream and confectionery were attractively displayed in a large booth and these popular local lines made many new friends.

The Royal Crown Co., Winnipeg had an attractive booth devoted to a display of their premiums given away with soap wrappers. The Royal Crown lines have a strong hold on the public in Winnipeg and the West.

Dyson's pickles were displayed in a well arranged booth near the entrance. A capable demonstrator explained to visitors the good qualities of pickles "made in Winnipeg" and hundreds stopped daily at the Dyson booth to taste the sweet pickles which were kept ready to serve.

The McCormick Manufacturing Co., London, Ont., had a popular booth in which their biscuits and confectionery were on exhibition. Dingle & Stewart, Winnipeg and Calgary, are agents for this firm in the Western Provinces.

Foley, Loch & Larson, Winnipeg, had a large double booth devoted to a popular display of their "Loch" brand biscuits, tea and other lines. Their brands are growing in popularity in the West.

The Genesee Pure Food Co. booth was one of the most popular at the show, housewives being particularly interested in the various "Jello-O" desserts which were on exhibition. The ice cream powder and jellies were in the hands of capable demonstrators and the entire staff were kept busily employed explaining the simple methods of preparing the many delicious Jello-O desserts.

The Odorkill Manufacturing Co., Winnipeg, had a booth devoted to an exhibition of "Odorkill," a new disinfectant and deodorant.

J. T. Griffin Co., had a good display of "Premium" hams, etc., which would habe been better had it not been for the fire that visited their plant while the booth was in process of preparation.

The Crescent Creamery Co. served cold buttermilk to many thirsty visitors and did some effective advertising of their creamery butter.

The British Columbia Sugar Refining Co., of Vancouver, B.C., had a large booth with samples of their pure cane sugars. During the progress of the show they gave away many copies of their Great West Cook Book, which were much appreciated by the lady visitors. Special emphasis was laid upon the fact that the products of the B.C. Sugar Refinery are manufactured from cane sugar only.

FREQUENT TURNOVERS.

The following table shows the immense advantage of quick sales. It is based on the careers of four $100 bills invested in business for the term of ten years at a profit of 20 per cent., and turned over with their respective profits at various intervals. The difference in earning power is almost incredible, but can be easily verified :

$100 turned every two years at 20 per cent. profit for ten years	$ 305.18
$100 turned every year, at 20 per cent. profit for ten years	931.00
$100 turned every six months at 20 per cent. profit for ten years	10,844.16
$100 turned every three mos. at 20 per cent. profit for ten years	891,752.50

NEW METHOD OF MAKING SALT.

We have heard a good deal recently about a new process of salt manufacture in which, instead of evaporating brine as is at present done, rock salt itself is melted and then purified whilst in a molten state. The most important points, commercially, are : (1) That the salts made by the Tee process are anhydrous, and even if sent to Africa or India, very little salt is wasted in transit, owing to small absorption of moisture from the atmosphere by the salt crystals, whereas by the evaporation process very much is lost ; and (2) that the salt, by the fire process, can be produced much more economically, as one ton of slack coal is sufficient to make 15 tons of salt, while under the process of evaporation one ton of slack coal can only produce two tons of salt, so that altogether there would seem to be a bright future for this method.—Produce Markets Review.

TO ENCOURAGE TEA DRINKING.

At the half-yearly meeting of the Indian Tea Cess Committee, held recently, it was resolved to continue the exisiting arrangement for advertising in the United States jointly with Ceylon, and the sum of $34,285, was voted for this purpose. The total to be contributed by India and Ceylon for the purpose indicated is $60,000. The committee also decided to maintain the separate India advertising fund which they started in the United States during 1905 and to allot to it a further sum of $20,000. To maintain and to extend the scheme which is in progress for pushing Indian tea in Belgium and Germany, $25,000 was voted. An Indian tea house is to be opened in Berlin shortly. The committee likewise agreed to continue the green tea bonus at the rate of 1 cent per pound on 2,000,000 pounds of green tea to be manufactured during the coming season.—Grocery World.

WINDING UP COMPANY'S AFFAIRS

List of Creditors of E. D. Marceau Co.—Chiefly Montreal Firms.

The affairs of the E. D. Marceau Company, which went into voluntary liquidation several weeks ago, are being rapidly wound up. W. H. Halford and Alex. Hendery, who were appointed inspectors of the estate, at the first meeting of creditors, report having sold the best part of the assets, realizing good prices.

At the meeting held in the first place, when the company went into voluntary liquidation, Mr. Marceau expressed the conviction that he could put the company upon its feet within sixty days, and the creditors agreed to give him a trial, appointing him as manager, and the gentlemen mentioned in the foregoing as inspectors. It was found impossible to get the business into shape, however, largely owing to the stringency of the money market, and at a subsequent meeting of creditors it was decided to close out the business.

"Men Who Sell Things"

The Ideal Salesman Always Ready to Learn Everything and From Everybody—The Air-gun Man Has No Place in Business—Temper in Selling Goods—The Salesman Who Boils Over.

By Walter D Moody—Serial right for Canada purchased by the MacLean Publishing Co. from the publishers, A. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

CHAPTER VII.

THE KNOW-IT-ALL SALESMAN.

The only shots that count are the shots that hit.—Roosevelt.

Many a man who takes himself very seriously is regarded as a huge joke by others.

Many a fool is vain and self-deceptive; many a man of great power is modest to the last degree.

It does not follow that because air is life that it has any application to salesmanship; but perhaps that is the reason why some salesmen blow so hard.

A noted and witty preacher once said: "The general pulpit style of America is about like this: 'Here I am, the Rev. Jeremiah Jones, D-o-c-t-o-r of D-i-v-i-n-i-t-y, saved by the grace of God, with a message to deliver. If you will repent and believe what I believe, you will be saved, and if you don't, you will be damned, and I don't care much if you are.'"

Self-assertiveness is an invaluable quality in salesmanship when properly harnessed, but it can be overworked.

The Know-it-all Salesman claims a large share of the limelight wherever possible. He seeks to impress everyone with whom he comes in contact with an idea of his astonishing zeal, and by a melodramatic display of activity.

If a man is going to be efficient and successful, he must think more about his work than about himself. The salesman who wants to get to the top by intelligent devotion to work has no time for self-worship.

Salesmanship is like a great river coursing its way onward through the innumerable channels and branches of the world's activities, the shores of which are strewn with wrecks and failures, who held their own personalities as paramount to their work. If the quality of a salesman's work will pass muster with the head of his house, his personality will shine through it unushered by any effort on his part.

Salesmen that talk as though they were well pleased with themselves do not find many in their neighborhood that are well pleased with them. Whenever a salesman gets more self-consciousness than he has sense, he's going to talk foolishness most of the time. Selling-talk and foolishness do not mix well, the one must suffer at the expense of the other.

You associate with salesmanship thought, wisdom, and a reasonable amount of self-restraint, don't you? Now, some salesmen say that they do not have to study, and they do not need the advice of their sales manager. They can paddle their own canoes.

The president of a great house traveling many men appropriated a large sum to be invested in the education of his corps of salesmen through the organization and equipment of a class in scientific salesmanship.

A few weeks after the study had been installed, he went to one of his salesmen and inquired how he was getting along with the work. The reply was: "The author of that course don't know anything about our line. He can't learn me nothing."

And sure enough he could not.

No Use for An Air Gun.

When selling goods, that salesman just opened his mouth and let come out of it what would, and it was generally filled with air. That is all such a mouth can be filled with. There is many an old air-gun salesman shooting around over his territory. You can't bring down big game with an air-gun.

Three things are necessary to enable a salesman to put up a good selling-talk—knowledge, judgment and enthusiasm. Buyers associate those qualities with every good selling-talk they hear.

No one will ever do anything for you that you can do for yourself. The sales manager in your house has too much to do to go running around posting lazy salesmen that have no disposition to learn anything new.

You show me a salesman that feels he is all-sufficient in his own knowledge, one who doesn't have to keep posted on the latest and best of everything that will aid him in holding and gaining prestige with his trade and with his house, and I will show you an Air-gun. I write with safety, for of course there are no Air-guns around your house. I refer to those in the house of your neighbor down in the next block.

The Powder-gun Salesman.

The next thing to an Air-gun is an old Powder-gun—one with nothing in it but powder. No trade is ever secured with that. The Powder-gun Salesman shoots at his trade without any shot. His customers enjoy it as much as he does—none of them ever get bagged. But whenever a salesman puts a shell filled with shot into the magazine of his selling-talk and lays the barrel on solid judgment, and takes careful aim, training the sight on the sale he is bent on securing, and fires, he is sure to hit the bull's eye.

After his shot tells, he can stop and apologize: "I didn't mean to hit you there. I aimed here." That is a salesman who aims where he hits and hits where he aims.

The greatest power any house ever had is a game salesman—never afraid of competition. And the greatest drawback is the Shotless Salesman, who aims at nothing in particular, and misses everything. He is in the same category with his fussy friend who is afraid of hurting somebody's feelings if he takes careful aim.

Don't let anyone say of you that you talk too much of yourself and your affairs.

A reasonable degree of self-assurance is a good thing; the best of salesmen practise and live self-confidence and self-assertiveness to a certain measure; but the overworking of these qualities is the cause of the failure of many a bright salesman. You are obliged to have something more.

Salesmanship does not consist of what you profess, but it consists of what you are, what you do, and how well you do it. When the doing follows the being, the result swells your sales, increases your chances for ultimate success.

Practice Self-forgetfulness.

There is no objection to a man professing salesmanship. There is no quarrel with a salesman as long as he lives on a level with what he professes; but when he gets down below that, the sales manager should go for him. When the salesman mixes too much of himself with what he is trying to sell, he is not living on a level with his profession. Self-sufficiency does not secure efficiency.

The real worker must forget self; business is the main thing.

It is hard for the Know-it-all Salesman to realize that nobody is always right.

The man who either will not or cannot efface himself enough in performing his duties will find it exceedingly difficult to get along. He cannot hope to win the approval of those above him in authority, or to make lasting friends of his customers. He is like a man toiling up an icy glacier without the aid of an alpenstock. The most arduous effort too often means a sudden plunge into the yawning abyss.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE QUICK-TEMPERED SALESMAN.

If a man opens his door, his dog runs out in the street before he knows it.

Your tongue is a sort of revolving fan to a fire, and the first time you let your tongue go, you are gone.

It is astonishing how many things will come up to the salesman, and come when he least expects them, upon his tongue.

Someone has told us that we get our idea of the word "temper" from the blacksmith's shop, where the blacksmith is shaping an ax, for instance, and upsetting the blade of it. He heats the blade and pushes it down into the water, and, taking it out, he watches it take its color, and again he pushes it into the water and takes it out and watches it take its color, and then directly he passes it to the hand of the farmer, and says: "I think that is tempered, but I don't know. If you will grind it and take it out to that knotty log and throw it in a time or two, I shall be able to tell you whether it is tempered or not."

And the farmer takes up the axe and goes out to the log and strikes it a time or two, and the axe is full of notches. He takes it back to the blacksmith, and says: "You missed it this time. Looke here! It is notched all over with gaps." And the blacksmith takes it and puts it in the fire again and tests it, and when the owner next takes it out to the log, the edge is all right, and he says: "This edge is perfect." That is where we get our idea of temper.

Hang on to the "Edge."

Many a time the salesman has his disposition upset and tempered, and then he goes out and says: "Well, now, I will never get that way any more. I have got the edge all right this time. I have got it tempered up in every respect." But the first old knotty customer he gets to, away it goes, and the notches are made in it, and the edge is destroyed, and he says: "Dear me! It's of no use for me to try at all. I did worse this time than I ever did before."

Haven't you ever felt that?

A good temper will stand anything without the breaking out of a gap or the turning of an edge.

There is a great difference between the good-natured salesman and the good-tempered salesman.

We hear people say, "Oh, that person has less temper than anybody I ever saw." Well, he is of less account than anybody you ever saw, if you mean by that that he is simply good-natured.

Given a man with immense temper, and when that temper is of the right sort, then it is you've got the finest character this world ever saw.

We can have good tempers only with vigilant, watchful care over them. Did you ever manage your temper by clinching your teeth together and not letting your tongue run a bit? Your tongue is a sort of revolving fan to a fire, and the first time you let your tongue go, you are gone. Did you ever try to curb your tongue once? If you'll do it, you will be astonished.

If you are a Quick-tempered Salesman, begin now by saying, "I will watch my temper; I will watch my tongue; I will watch my disposition; I will watch within; I will watch without; I will be vigilant; I won't be surprised by anything. I am going to see my enemy approach; I am going to watch him as he comes, and I am going to meet him as he comes."

Flying Still Under Fire.

A soldier in the last war said: "One of the hardest things I had to do was to lie still under fire."

Humanity wants to fight back, and kick back. But the salesman never fought back, or kicked back, or talked back in his life that he was not sorry that he did it. The best thing is to stand and hold out and let your enemy kick himself to death, and he will soon do that if you will hold right still.

Speaking on the subject of self-control, a noted reformer once said: "If a man called me a liar, I would not get mad and fight him. I would say to him, 'If I am a liar I ought to be ashamed of myself, and if I'm not a liar, you are a liar.'"

It is a mighty good plan to combat insult and injury with wit or a smile. These quickly disarm our adversary.

The value to the salesman of self-control in meeting the selfishness or insults of a customer, or of managers, is demonstrated over and over again in the life of every man on the road. Many instances occur in the career of every salesman where righteous indignation seems justifiable, but if used at all as an antidote, it should be in homoeopathic doses only.

While traveling on the road, long before embarking in business for myself, I once lost my temper under very trying circumstances in dealing with the buyer of a large firm.

Years afterwards I secured the services of a traveler who was intimately acquainted with that buyer. The first time our new man called on him he was surprised at the reception he received upon presenting the firm's card. The man with whom I had quarrelled opened up on our new representative with, "We have been good friends, and you have always given me a square deal. It would be a real pleasure to continue my business relations with you personally, but you can go back and tell your employer that I will see him in Hades before he gets another dollar's worth of business from my firm."

During the years that followed, our firm was deprived of thousands of dollars' worth of business from him because I had lost my self-control just once.

Keep Away From the Danger Line.

Get the habit of self-control, and never part with it. When temped by weakness, keep away as far as possible from the danger-line. There is always a fascination in seeing how near we can go to the edge of a precipice without toppling over.

A wealthy man, owning a fine country home far up on a mountain side, desired the services of a coachman. The road leading to his place was very dangerous. It skirted the edge of great caverns and made many sharp turns. Several applicants sought the position; the same question was asked each, "How near can you drive to the edge of the precipice without going over?"

The first replied, "I think I could go within two inches."

The wealthy man said, "You will not do."

The second one thought he could go within an inch, and was promptly refused.

The third man was an Irishman. His reply was, 'Begorra, I'd kape as far away as I could."

Promptly came the answer. "You're the man I'm looking for. The place is yours."

Merryman & Warmgrasp.

Thomas De Witt Talmage, in one of his most popular lectures, "Big Blunders," speaking of indulgence in bad temper, said:

"Good humor will sell the most goods, plead the best argument, effect the best cure. The poorest business firm in town is Growl, Spitfire & Brothers.

"They blow their clerks. They insult their customers. They quarrel with the draymen. They write impudent duns. They kick the beggars. The children shy off as they pass the street and the dogs with wild yelps clear the path as they come. Acrid, waspish, fretful, explosive, saturnine, suddenly the money market will be astounded with the defalcation of Growl, Spitfire & Brothers.

"Merryman & Warmgrasp were poor boys when they came from the country. They brought all their possessions in one little pack slung over their shoulders. Two socks, two collars, one jackknife, a paper of pins, and a hunk of gingerbread which their mother gave them when she kissed them good-bye and told them to be good boys and mind the boss.

"They smiled and laughed and bowed, and worked themselves up higher and higher in the estimation of their employers. They soon had a store on the corner. They were obliging men, and people from the country left their carpet bags in that store when they came to town.

"Henceforth, when the farmers wanted hardware or clothing or books, they went to buy it at the place where their carpet bags had been treated so kindly. The firm had a way of holding up a yard of cloth and 'shining on' it so that plain cassimere would look almost as well as broadcloth, and an earthen pitcher would glisten like porcelain.

AGITATED BY AN AD.

The traveler of a well-known silverware company had for years made strong efforts to interest a Cornwall retailer in his goods. The retailer was most friendly, but though the traveler spent many musical evenings at the retailer's house, he never could get business. One time the silverware firm advertised a special line in a trade newspaper. Much to their surprise, a letter was received from the Cornwall retailer asking for more particulars about the line advertised, requesting that the next time Mr. B. was in town he should make a point of showing it. Mr. B. did not waste any time in getting there and added a new customer to his list. This little incident, the like of which is quite common, goes to prove that a regular trade paper ad is of great value to travelers for the simple reason that it works while the traveler is absent. An ad in a good trade newspaper gets the right proposition before the right dealers at the right moment. It simmers in a dealer's mind, and when the traveler arrives with his samples and persuasion an order is the result.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Italian Olive Oils—Very high.
Cheese—Higher.
Eggs—Decline in receipts.

Montreal, July 2.

The week has been rather duller than for some time, taken altogether. Feed and rolled oats have eased off a little in price, and flour remains the same as last week. Rice, tapioca, canned fruits, vegetables and the lines which are essentially summer foods, have shown an improvement in demand. Fish has also been in good demand. It is reported that at the present time stocks of Italian and French olive oil are about exhausted and prices are therefore almost prohibitive.

In spite of the dullness there seems to be a general feeling of optimism owing to the good crop prospects here and the favorable reports which are coming from the west.

SUGAR—There is nothing of any importance to report about sugar this week. The demand, which has not been up to what it should have been at this time of the year, has improved slightly but still leaves much to be desired. Prices are the same as at last quotation.

TEA—There has not been a great deal of change in the Japan market since last report. Present values appear to be worth investigation, as to-day's prices are apt to be advanced while the quality of teas obtainable later on will not be as good, owing to the naturally restricted range there will be to choose from as buyers' wants are gradually filled. A letter from the New York office of one of the large houses doing business in Japan says in part: "Conditions in Japan this season on low grade teas are unprecedented. It is not generally realized here that the Japanese use a very large quantity of tea, principally low grade, for home consumption, and that a considerable quantity of Japan tea is exported to Manchuria and Korea, so this market is not the only factor in regulating prices in Japan. We do not remember ever hearing of a time when stocks for home consumption were as low as at present, and in consequence of a large demand to replenish these stocks, prices for low grade teas are unusually high. Second crop teas are reported to be dearer and poorer quality than first crop, and this is going to make it difficult to secure satisfactory teas costing the retail grocer 23c to 25c and below. Prospects now indicate a smaller crop than last year and the market is firm." This letter is dated June 27 and it gives the actual state of affairs in Japan at present. Ceylon and Indian teas have not changed perceptibly locally since last week. Nothing extra is being done in Chinas.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—The new pack of asparagus tips, spinach, rhubarb and strawberries are now on sale. The advent of these new lines has depressed the prices somewhat. Demand for canned fruit and vegetables remains good, while fish and meats are neglected. The news that French sardines are to be offered again has been received with interest. Reports are that the pack of French peas will be average.

TORONTO.—Little interest is yet evidenced in 1908 pack goods, and, with present conditions in the trade, retailers seem anxious to hold off to see what may happen later. Last year's goods are passing off fairly well under good demand, and the prospects for getting rid of the stocks held seems brighter.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—
Sugar—New second grade brands quoted.
Beans—Stiff.
Provisions—Firmer, bacon prices advancing.
Collections—Fair.

Toronto, July 2, 1908.

The grocery markets continue generally quiet this week, with only a staple business being done, and with few price changes. Almost every line, indeed, presents the same features as a week ago. The provision markets have shown some brightness, as is expected during the summer months, and the outlook for a continuance of this is good.

The only feature of particular interest in the staple grocery markets is the placing on the market by the Redpath and St. Lawrence sugar refineries of new brands of sugar of a second grade.

The financial side of the business is fair, though complaints are heard in other quarters than from the jobbers of poor returns from the retailers. Everyone is looking toward the end of the harvest for an easier condition of money all round.

SUGAR—The market generally continues fairly steady on its continued firm basis, though a temporary feeling of weakness is noticeable in some quarters. This is evidenced in Willett & Gray's weekly report, as follows:

"The week under review developed a weakening tendency resulting in a comparatively large business at 1-16c per lb. decline to 4¼c per lb. for 96 degrees test basis. At this price buyers took all offerings and are still in the market for more sugar, showing that for the time at least the decline is checked, and the market is likely to hold steady under the influence of an increased demand for refined which is likely to come in the near future, but only after a possible reduction in refined quotations, temporarily. The difference in parity between old crop cane and new crop beet is now 13c per 100 lbs., against 17c per 100 lbs. last week. Arrivals were unusually large again, sugar coming in from all quarters of the sugar world indicating a visible supply on Sept. 1 larger than anticipated. This change in forecast is necessary from the fact that the consumers in both the United States and United Kingdom are drawing largely on the so-called invisible stocks and a continuation of this policy will not show in statistics for the year the usual normal increase of consumption. Receipts for the week were 47,634 tons, meltings 43,000 tons. Total stocks in the United States and Cuba together 438,362 tons, against 417,728 tons last week and 677,878 last year. Nothing new is said about the influence of the Russian crop exports, such influence being already well discounted."

Willett & Gray also note the visible supply as follows:

"Total stock of Europe and America, 2,321,362 tons, against 2,704,878 tons last year at the same uneven dates. The decrease of stock is 383,516 tons, against a decrease of 379,518 tons last week. Total stocks and afloats together show a visible supply of 2,511,362 tons, against 2,844,878 tons last year, or a decrease of 333,516 tons."

Business locally continues of the hand-to-mouth variety, though it is expected that with the opening of the preserving season, business will soon brighten up. As it is, retailers' stocks are thought to be getting pretty low.

An interesting move this week was the introduction by the Redpath and St. Lawrence refineries of a new second grade brand each, as is shown quoted in the price list below. This is said to be an attempt to meet the competition of the Wallaceburg refinery, and if the sugar is delivered freely, a large business will likely be done. As it is, however, prompt shipment of the new brands, Redpath's Imperial and the St. Lawrence's Beaver is not guaranteed, and it will be an interesting question as to just how much of this sugar will be supplied. Samples of the new brands do not reveal much difference, except, perhaps, the presence of a little more water, and the demand for them under the present situation in sugar is bound to be very active. The new grades are quoted 20 cents below the standard, as is shown in the price list given herewith, and at such offer good value.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Emile Chaput, of L. Chaput, Fils & Co., Montreal was in Toronto several days this week and made a pleasant call at The Grocer office.

C. H. Gerbig, representing the Nickel Plate Stove Polish Co. (Black Jack), of Chicago, was calling on the trade in Toronto this week. Mr. Gerbig is quite familiar with the trade, having conducted a store here for many years.

H. E. Gieger, who has been occupying the chair of T. H. Kinnear in the sample-room of T. Kinnear & Co., Toronto, since the latter's absence in England, has gone to Peterboro to take the position on the firm's traveling staff recently vacated by E. J. Peters.

WHAT TO DO IN JULY

Hints and Suggestions for Conducting the Store During the Mid-Summer Month —How to Build up New Business While Holding Old Customers.

Usually during the summer months, and especially during July, the grocery store does not give that spick and span appearance that it does during the other months of the year. But there is no reason in the world why the store should not have as attractive an appearance during the hot July days as at some more favorable time of the year. Some stores are shrouded with netting and shelves and windows lose the picturesqueness they have at other seasons. Not that netting is at all objectionable—sometimes it serves a very useful purpose, and when it does so it can be made ornamental as well.

Some Old-time Conditions.

Look at the way the whole grocery trade has changed during the past. Once upon a time the grocer had to use his scoop and scales for almost everything a customer wanted and a paper bag was continually in his hand. In fact, scoop, scales and paper bags were his tools. The sugar was raw and it was a tough job to grind it in the sugar mill. He made his own paper bags and the flour paste with which they were gummed. Oatmeal, tea and flour were sold in bulk and matches were put up in blocks. Currants had to be cleaned and soap and tallow candles wrapped in paper. And so it might go on. Conditions have changed since then and some grocers were wise enough to follow the conditions. They are rich men to-day.

Now, if the grocery conditions of some years ago are different from what they are to-day and they are still changing, doesn't it stand to reason that conditions about the arrangement of goods in the store should change also? The goods that sold well last winter may not be asked for so frequently during the hot summer days.

Try to anticipate the wants of your customers. Make your store just as attractive now as you did a few months ago, and make your customers comfortable and let them feel at home when they visit your store.

An Example of Enterprise.

The picture of an inviting store arises when one considers what has been done by a grocer in a fairly large town in the midst of a farming community in Ontario. This grocer's store is the result of the merchant's thinking and planning for many months. In the first place, his store is built so as to give the greatest convenience for receiving and shipping goods, and for attending to the wants of his patrons. Large prominent windows display the seasonable lines in attractive forms, and one is enticed to enter the roomy store with lofty ceilings. The shop is cool and scrupulously clean; not a sign of a fly or insect to be seen. Shopping stools are placed at convenient intervals about the place, and the clerks in white coats look neat and cool as they attend the wants of the customers.

Of course this is an almost ideal grocery store, and not every grocer can afford to begin at the top of the ladder, but there are general rules that apply to all trades and without following these rules a merchant's chances of success are not very great.

It is to be presumed that every grocer is polite and that his chief desire is to please and serve the best interests of his customers. With these qualifications, and every merchant should be endowed with them, a grocer may reasonably hope for success. But that is not all.

Attractiveness a Big Feature.

So far as his business is concerned he should study his customers and cater to the trade he studies. By his courteous treatment he already has secured a fair custom. He should keep this custom and try to enlarge his trade. One of the chief steps in this direction is the attractiveness he places about his store. A nice clean fresh store front with changing and picturesque window displays of seasonable goods will do this. There are so many goods sold by grocers nowadays which are put up in useful and attractive packages and tins that they can be worked into many unique and pretty designs.

Hints on Window Displays.

Then many of them, too, are as well very seasonable goods. Take condensed milk, for example. The Medical Association recently met in Toronto and among other resolutions passed was one calling attention to the unwholesomeness of milk and the unsanitary conditions surrounding the handling of it. Could not this fact be used to advantage by the grocer pushing the sale of condensed milk? A neat window display of these goods would call attention to your business and show you were alive to what is passing around you. A canned meats display would give inspiration to the camper and excursionist. Early greens and small vegetables make a very striking window, the various colors being set out in some attractive design or picture. Then there are the berries and small fruits. All these give some individuality to a store and they could be used for display purposes in rotation. It may not be possible for you to attract all the people all the time, but you would surely attract all the passersby some of the time, and some of the passersby all the time. It certainly pays to study your business and try to anticipate the wishes of the people you are trying to serve.

Other Timely Hints.

Then the grocery store itself should be an inviting place—a place where he or she who enters will linger longer than intended. Butter, cheese, eggs and soft drinks, provisions and other perishable lines should be in a cool place. A little refrigerator with a glass front for the display of your wares will make sales for you. There are so many ways of attracting and enticing customers that a mere hint should suffice. How many grocery stores have added departments and lines to their business which while they may not be staple grocery lines, yet give a seasonableness and a freshness to the store that well repays the investment.

Flowers and plants are good sellers at all times, and while they are perishable to some extent, the careful grocer may use them advantageously for the bringing forward of other wares as well as to help on a profitable line. Seeds in the spring and cut flowers in the summer and fall give a freshness to your establishment that is sure to bring in the customer you have seen go by your store so often in the past.

Fresh vegetables and early greens make a very pretty color scheme for setting off your stock, and fruit and berries, too, add much to the attractiveness of the store. Confectionery should be a staple line and effective displays can readily be made of the more fancy lines. All these are seasonable July lines and will help carry along the customers who were good patrons during the cold winter days, but who might otherwise buy these lines elsewhere.

Soft drinks on ice are a taking line, and may give more life to your business than you think. Try it and you will see. Provisions are a summer line and should be made somewhat prominent. Then the various summer canned goods may be grouped on your shelves and set off to advantage by some little scheme or plan you already have in mind.

Change the Store's Appearance.

Your store in July should be just the opposite to what it appears in January. Change your window displays at least once a week, bringing forward some special summer line, and notify your customers and patrons every little while that you are putting forward some one particular line of goods.

Try to enlarge the circle of those who already know your store, but never at the expense of old friends and patrons.

TRADE NOTES.

M. F. Goddard, of the Maple Tree Producers' Association, Waterloo, P.Q., was in Toronto several days during the week, and with W. J. Dack, the Toronto representative, called at The Grocer office.

J. Bradbeer & Co., are taking over the grocery business of Nelson & Fraser, Lethbridge, on July 1st. The business will be conducted at the old stand until September 1st, when the stock will be moved to the new Stafford block.

The new grocery of Budd & Co., in the Looker block, Barrie, opened under very favorable conditions on Saturday, June 20. It was a busy place during the early hours of the day, when the farmers were exchanging their fresh eggs and butter for current coin of the realm.

The creditors of Carscadden & Mullen, grocers of Lindsay, who assigned to N. L. Martin & Co., met in the offices of the assignees in Toronto and gave the necessary instructions for the winding up of the business. The liabilities are estimated at $3,000, with assets of about $1,000.

James Thompson, of Warner, and his two sons, W. E. and Ed, formerly composing the firm of Thompson Bros., general merchants, were in Lethbridge the other day, winding up the affairs connected with the sale of their business in Warner to J. A. Jochem, a recent arrival from Minnesota.

MANITOBA MARKETS

Since the announcement of new canned goods prices for 1908 pack of vegetables and fruits, there have been no quotable changes of importance. Prices are steady in most lines.

Business is showing increased activity. Money is not much more plentiful than it was, but all prospects point to the biggest crop in the history of the west and there is an optimistic feeling among all branches of the trade.

CANNED GOODS—There is general satisfaction among the retail trade at the lower price schedule for fruits and vegetables of this year's pack. Quotations are :

EXTENDS THANKS FOR KINDNESS

Among the floral tributes received after the death of the late W. C. Adams, of Davidson-Hay, Toronto, were two handsome wreaths, one from fellow-travelers in Barrie and another from travelers and friends in Sudbury. In neither case were any names attached. Capt. Jas. Adams, father of the late traveler, being unable to reach the senders in any other way wishes to extend Mrs. Adams' and his own thanks through The Grocer for the sympathy and appreciation shown in this kindly act. No doubt the travelers and customers who so kindly remembered Mr. Adams will note this item.

$200,000 of Canned Lobsters Shipped From Nova Scotia to London—Montreal Grocers Planning Picnic for July 15.

ST. JOHN.

The most important change in the markets here for some time past was announced last week, when the McDonald Tobacco Company advanced the price of their tobaccos 8 to 10 cents a pound. The change in prices does not affect the jobbers or retailers profit, but it cuts down the size of the plug for the consumer. The 5-cent pieces of black tobacco are done away with altogether.

Oatmeal dropped 50 cents a barrel on Thursday last. Business has been rather quiet of late both in wholesale and retail circles.

St. John lost one of its best citizens last week in the death of J. S. Boies De Veber, county treasurer. Mr. De Veber filled a prominent place in the life of St. John as a merchant, as mayor, as Liberal representative in parliament and latterly as county treasurer. He was a member of the old-time firm of W. H. De Veber & Sons, general merchants.

The Beaver Harbor Trading Co.—of which Connors Bros. were the principal owners—have sold out to John D. Thompson, Will. Barry and Daniel Thompson. It is understood that the business will be conducted on a more extensive scale. The company will deal largely with canned clams and kippered herring.

The spring school of sardine herring along the bay coast has been almost a total failure this year and packers do not look for many fish before August. Mackerel have been plentiful at Magdalen Island, lately.

Rev. E. E. England, of Bermuda, who arrived in the city last week on the steamer Dahome, said that the onion crop, a staple product of the island, has been almost a total failure this year.

A monster lobster, measuring four feet in length, was caught one day last week by Frank Burchell, at Tiner's Point. The lobster, it is stated, is the largest ever caught in the Bay of Fundy. The big crustacean was sold to an Eastport buyer for $35.

HALIFAX.

June 27.—The commission men have all the business they can handle at the present time, Native strawberries are now coming in in large quantities, and are crowding the American berries off the market. Nova Scotia berries are selling at 20c, and American at 18c. The prices of eggs and butter are unchanged. The jobbers are still looking for a drop in butter, but at present there is no indication of any change. The grocerymen both wholesale and retail, say that business is fully up to the average season. Collections, on the whole, are considered to be fair.

The special refrigerator service on the Intercolonial Railway has been discontinued, the Marine and Fisheries Department having notified the railwat of its intention to withdraw its assistance. The department guaranteed to compensate the I.C.R. for any deficit which might result from the operation of a fresh fish refrigerator service from Halifax and Mulgrave to Montreal. The car was attached to the Maritime express for several days a week. It was a financial failure and the support given the movement was so meagre that the Marine and Fisheries Department decided to discontinue it. Fresh fish will, when sufficient quantities offer, be sent in a car attached to the fast freight.

The Furness line steamers St. John City and Mimda, which sailed from here for London last week, took away a large shipment of canned lobsters. The whole consignment consisted of 12,000 cases, valued at $200,000. All these lobsters were caught in Nova Scotia waters and were packed in the canneries along this coast. A large portion of the shipment was for the French and German markets. The above gives some idea of the extent of the fishing industry on the Nova Scotia coast.

J. H. Bertram, who has conducted a large grocery business on Charlotte St., Sydney, for the past eight years, made a complete transfer of the business this week to J. F. Miles. Mr. Miles thoroughly understands the grocery business, having spent the last ten years of his life as manager of one of the largest grocery stores in Boston. He intends to renovate the entire store, making it one of the finest in Sydney. The new proprietor states that he intends to carry on a strictly cash business, which will enable him to sell at reasonable prices the finest class of goods on the market. T. H. Allison, who is exceedingly popular in Sydney, is also associated with the new store, and the services of Jas. Booth are also retained.

W. T. Cleary, grocer, has purchased the corner property, where he is now doing business in Sydney, from the Farquharson estate.

MONTREAL.

June 30.—A. Racicot, corner St. Dominique and Prince Arthur Streets, is probably one of the oldest retail grocers in business at the present time. He states he has been selling groceries in the present store for twenty-seven years. All this betokens the proper principle in selling goods, otherwise his success would not have been so enduring.

All sorts and kinds of methods are resorted to to gain custom by means of advertising, and a certain grocer states that he obtains very good results from writing special bargains on a large plate glass window in his store. Of course, it must be remembered this must be very carefully done, otherwise it gives the window a most unattractive appearance.

The Montreal grocers are looking forward to a good time at their picnic, July 15, at Highgate Springs, Vt. These events in the past have always been occasions of great conviviality, and it is expected the coming event will be no exception to the rule.

J. D. Desrochers, for many years with Fraser, Viger & Co., is doing a very good business at his store, 472 St. Denis Street. The general impression gained upon entering this store is a good one, and this is due, perhaps, to the high ceiling and spotless white interior furnishings. These advantages, combined with plenty of light, give a fine appearance to the store as a whole.

Willson Brothers, corner Elgin and Prince Arthur Streets, are at the old stand doing business as usual, having returned from their wanderings, which, perhaps, were not extensive, but served to remove a familiar name from a familiar corner.

J. D. Phillips, for some time with Thompson & Co., has opened a grocery at the north corner of Elgin and Prince Arthur Streets.

Considerable skill has been displayed in the decoration of a side window in a small grocery in the East End. As this window is not depended on to any extent for light, the display is at an angle of about 75 or 80 degrees, and, therefore, shows off to good advantage. This window on one day will have an arrangement to represent the Union Jack, and various other national flags, and geometrical designs are wrought with the products kept in a grocery store. This bedding style of decorating a window is very effective when well done, otherwise the result is not good.

A. H. Brittain is among those elected to the executive board of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. This is a well-placed honor, as Mr. Brittain is a young man of already excellent attainments in the business world and admirable prospects for the future.

TRADE NOTES.

A. G. Snowden is in Quebec at present.

R. Gowlland, representing Mansell, Hunt, Cutty & Co., in Canada, is on a trip to Western Canada at present.

J. B. Lagare, of Quebec, has purchased the Caledonia Biscuit Works, Montreal, and will conduct the business along new and broader lines. The old premises are being changed and brightened up, while there is noticeable quite a perceptible increase in the business of the concern already. W. F. Clough is covering the city for the company at present.

News From the Coast

First Carload Lots of Strawberries Shipped to Winnipeg—Lady Traveler for Confectionery House—Canadian Wheat for Australia.

VANCOUVER.

June 27.—Strawberry season is here in earnest at last. Even yet the weather is cool and backward and the berries are ripening slowly, but this is not to the disadvantage of the grower. A feature has been the first shipment ever made out of British Columbia in carload lots of strawberries to Winnipeg, a car having been sent forward a few days ago. R. Robertson & Co., of this city were the nominal shippers and they were assisted by the cooperation of the growers in the vicinity of Victoria. The berries were handled by the Fruit and Produce Exchange, of Revelstoke. Other shipments have followed the first, and the result is watched with interest, as it means the opening up of a new market.

Eighteen cars a month contain a very large amount of biscuits and the fact that the Mooney Co., the well known Stratford manufacturers, ship this quantity to British Columbia, shows what a hold they have secured on the market; this too, when many other lines are offered to the retailer and the public, all of which have good sale. The demand for biscuits in this part of Canada is rapidly increasing. Local manufacturers at both Victoria and Vancouver are doing well, and that there is room for first-class products is indicated in the success which has followed the introduction here of the various lines of Mooney biscuits.

Banton, Daggett & Company have a nice line of candy confections in the stores here. They are the local people who have started recently in this line, and their goods are introduced by an enterprising and popular lady traveler.

Eastern creamery butter is being offered here for July delivery at 26½c. Evidently no rise or very little is expected in price as the retailers are guaranteed that there will be no increase in price, and if there is a decline they will get the benefit of it. Local eggs are stiffening in price, being jobbed at 30c, though eastern remain the same, selected stock at 23c.

The Vancouver market, much talked of, and from which great things are expected, was formally opened last Saturday with good success. From present indications, a daily market would soon develop, though just now Saturday will be the main day. W. H. Kelly, the market clerk, thinks that from the interest taken tri-weekly days will be necessary in a very short time. The institution is being largely patronized by growers as far away as Mission Junction, and it should not lack for support from these people, for when the subject was first mooted, they expressed themselves strongly in favor of it.

The Chilliwack Fruit Canning and Preserving Company is ready to receive fruit, and a considerable quantity should be put up in that district this season. The industry will be a valuable asset to the valley, and a market will be found for a large amount of fruit of various kinds which has heretofore been wasted, as transportation facilities are not particularly convenient. The main building is 100x60 feet, with a warehouse 60x40, and a couple of outbuildings 16x24, boiler room 18x24, and evaporating plant 55x28. Extensive labor saving devices have been added to keep down the cost of manufacture.

The starting of new towns is the opportunity for the man who has the opening of a store in view, and the man is lucky who is the first to locate. A townsite has just been laid out on the west side of Okanagan Lake, almost directly opposite Kelowna, and has been called Westbank. Wesley M. Collins, formerly an employe of the B. C. Sugar Refining Company in this city, has a general store established there, being the first on the ground. One hundred and twenty-five lots have already been sold, and some of the owners have located. Others will come west in the fall after the crops are harvested, so there will be quite a settlement there by the close of the year.

C. W. Shideler has taken advantage of an opportunity at Fruitvale, a new subdivision in the vicinity of Nelson. He is manufacturing brooms, on a small scale, perhaps, but as they can be produced there at a smaller price than they can be imported, there is a chance for him to enlarge the business. He is able to turn out twelve daily, and finds a ready sale among the dealers in Nelson and neighborhood.

Canadian wheat may soon be sent in large quantities to Australia. D. McCorquodale, of Sydney, is here on his way to Winnipeg, where he will try and secure No. 1 hard. If the price is reasonable enough, he will charter boats to carry the grain to the south. Up to the present, Mr. McCorquodale, who is a large miller, has been importing the grain from South Australia, but prefers the Canadian wheat if the price is not too high.

R. W. Timmins has taken over the management of the Columbia Flour Mills Company in Vernon. The company is preparing to extend its business in that locality and numerous improvements are now being carried out. It is the intention to operate the mill again at that point, as soon as cheap power can be obtained.

A large oil factory has been established at Skidegate, Queen Charlotte Islands, which is in the neighborhood of large fishing grounds. The livers of dogfish are used, and two dozen boats are employed by the factory in catching the fish. A cent apiece is paid for the fish to be used for fertilizer, but a higher price is paid for the livers.

J. C. Eaton, head of the T. Eaton Company, of Toronto and Winnipeg, who reached here this week from the east, gave an emphatic denial to the story that the firm was about to locate here. This rumor has circulated at different times, and this should put a quietus to it.

Chatham Grocers Are Cutting in Sugar—Barrie Merchants Have a Fruit Buying Association—Ingersoll Discusses Trade Questions.

BARRIE.

June 30.—The biggest crop of strawberries for a large number of years is being harvested here, and merchants are getting enough local berries to fill nearly all their wants. The buyers are paying six to eight cents this week as to quality.

Budd & Company is the name of our new grocers of the sixth ward. Mr. Budd has fitted up the old Looker property and made the place look fine. They report their first week's business to be ahead of their expectations.

Thomas Hatley has taken charge of J. M. Bothwell's sixth ward branch lately vacated by E. Budd.

The clerks this year by all appearances will have no Wednesday afternoon holidays during July and August, the dry goods men being responsible, they all having agreed not to close. This will be quite a blow to the boys behind the counter, as they have had these holidays for the past seven years.

Business here is now in full blast, particularly the summer tourist trade, which our town has been very slow in previous years in catering to—but has wakened up to the last couple of years. The merchants have now a regular delivery all around the bay for six or eight miles to the summer cottagers and they seem to think it pays. These people in former years brought in nearly all their goods from Toronto.

The merchants have gotten their heads together and are now buying their fruits in carloads, especially bananas and dividing up amongst themselves, thus saving a great deal on the prices of fruit and the expense of bringing to town. Each merchant in the association has his turn in buying and his expenses are figured in with freight, cartage, etc. Last week was the trial week and it proved a grand success, not only were the bananas extra good value, but they came in in their original ventilated car and required only one handling, whereas buying otherwise they would be handled five or six times before being shipped by the wholesaler. Other towns would do well to try this scheme.

The price of butter took a big jump on Saturday's market when it reached the 20c a pound mark, while not very long ago it could be bought for 14c and 15c. The farmers packing very heavily is the cause of this rise. Eggs also have been very scarce, several merchants having to import from neighboring towns. The prices are, however, a little easier at time of writing.

The first spring chickens appeared on the market here Saturday and brought twenty-five cents a pound.

CHATHAM.

June 29.—The berry season is now in full swing, and grocers are very busy in consequence. So far, however, the crop has not come up to anything near what was expected. Expectations were, however, unusually bright; and this year is probably better than last year, On account of the continued warm, dry weather of the past two weeks, the strawberry crop has fallen somewhat short. Prices have remained pretty well at 10c per box. To-day's rain will probably help the raspberries, while the cherry crop looks pretty good. New raspberries made their first appearance on the market on Saturday, selling at 12c per box.

Prices on the market took a slight upward trend last Saturday, eggs being 17c, and butter 22c.

A few grocers here are signalizing the arrival of the berry and canning season by cutting on sugar. The movement began with a grocer who is retiring from business, and, to help move his goods, offered for a couple of days 20 pounds of Redpath's granulated with every order for $2 and upwards of groceries. Another grocer followed suit by advertising 20 pounds of sugar for $1, while a third has gone further and offers 22 pounds for $1, also giving that amount free with every $1.50 order for groceries. Here the movement seems to have stopped short, the other grocers being very well satisfied to keep out of the "game of give-away." As sugar costs $5.02 per cwt. in carload lots, and the cost of handl.ng, selling, etc., will be not less than 13c per 100, it can readily be seen that grocers who cut are practically losing 15c per cwt. on their sugar when they sell at 20 pounds for $1. Grocers outside the cutting line declare themselves perfectly content to stay there. "I am convinced," said one to The Grocer representative, "that in this price-cutting game, we lose less and the cutters gain less than we are sometimes inclined to think. Their cut prices draw only a small coterie of barga n hunters—people who take advantage of the bargains, and go away, never to return. This class of people we can do without; their trade never made anyone rich, and never will. Give them bargains once, and they'll expect them all the time—and if you haven't got them, they'll go elsewhere." Another noteworthy feature of price-cutting is the manner in which a large number of housewives "pricked up their ears" the moment the cut price in sugar was announced. "It must be some inferior kind of sugar," was the way one voiced her suspicions. "I can't afford to lose all my strawberries, just to save a few cents." Which only goes to show that price-cutting sometimes works both ways.

John McCorvie and wife left on July 1 for a summer's tour to the Old Country, where they will visit many points of interest, also taking in the Edinburgh exposition. Miss Lillian McCorvie has just graduated from St. Margaret's College, Toronto, with high honors. Mr. McCorvie sailed from New York for Liverpool on July 1 via the steamer Campania.

There has been a little talk here about a weekly half holiday during the summer months. It seems to have simmerdown, however, and there is little likelihood that any action will be taken.

Lou Downing, formerly of Tilbury, has severed his connection with the M.C.R. and is now traveling for the Mooney Biscuit Company of Stratford.

Geo. Miller, of the Kent Farmers' Produce Company, Blenheim,, has successfully passed his primary examination for chartered accountant, being near the head of a large class.

A Leamington correspondent writes: "The rumor comes from authentic sources that notice has been received by H. Wigle and others who were purchasing agents of the Empire Tobacco Co., that their services were no longer desired. This is doubtless owing to the change in the company and its absorption by the Imperial Tobacco Co. It also looks as if there would be no tobacco purchased this season."

The amount paid by the Wallaceburg Sugar Company in customs duties during the past two months was over $90,000. Another shipment of raw sugar is on its way.

H. Pelett, grocer, Queen Street, lost a plate glass window the other night, some boys smashing it while wrestling in the doorway. The police have been notified. Incidentally, any hints with regard to successful methods of eliminating the genus loafer from stores on side streets would prove of value.

Russell Betts has severed his connection with the Essex creamery, and taken a position in that of J. H. Allan, at Wheatley.

A. J. Holland, Blenheim, announces that he intends removing from that town. He is selling off his grocery stock at a considerable reduction, the sale commencing June 20.

E. G. Thompson, the Blenheim general merchant, was in Montreal on business last week.

Miss Ruby Holland, of E. G. Thompson's store, Blenheim, was one of a party of twenty-one hustlers recently sent by the Chatham News on a two weeks' trip to Montreal and return. Miss Holland had nearly everyone in Blenheim working for her during the contest which preceded the trip.

INGERSOLL.

June 29.—The questions submitted by the Guelph correspondent and on which discussion has been invited are of vital importance to the grocers and should receive their earnest and careful consideration if the desired progress of this busy, methodical twentieth century is to be achieved. Taking the first question as to the number of hours that a clerk should work, it probably would be difficult to introduce a more debatable subject or one of greater mutual interest. This is a problem which capital and labor have been hammering away at for a long time and with no uncertain measure of success. The hours of mechanics, in fact, of almost all tradesmen, are limited.

Human nature has placed itself upon a higher plane than that of a mere piece of machinery that will keep under motion until it breaks down and is finally out of commission entirely. If ten hours are generally recognized as constituting a day's work why should a grocer or his clerks be compelled to put in from twelve to fifteen hours a day. If a general system of shortening the hours were adopted the volume of business would not likely decrease and the clerks and the grocers would go about their duties with greater vim and cheerfulness and they would have an opportunity of reaping some of the enjoyment of recreation instead of being slaves to their trade. The trend of sentiment with many of the merchants of the large cities is to shorten their hours, with which the centralization movement is also keeping pace. In the early days it was customary to keep all stores open both early and late. This system has gradually died out before the march of modern enterprise. Twelve hours at the most, in my opinion should constitute a day's work behind the counter with the exception of Saturdays and ten o'clock should then prove a popular closing hour. The remedy is with the grocers themselves.

"Should a clerk have any holidays?" He certainly should. Constant devotion to duties induces listlessness, and it is commonly known that when work becomes monotonous the interest is gone. It has been said that "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." It is difficult to refute this statement and grocers certainly do not want "dull boys" in their employ. Vacation not only invigorates one physically but brightens the intellect so that the resumption of work is really a pleasure.

As to the manner in which the clerks should be paid. The fairest way is probably on a weekly basis. It is difficult to estimate the value of a clerk, and the same method of calculation cannot be applied to all cases. One clerk may be a most successful salesman, but he may be untidy as far as the condition of the store is concerned and he may not show any particular amount of energy in taking to the different kinds of work that confronts the clerks in an average grocery store. The evil of the "commission system" as the paying according to sales might be termed is that clerks would not exercise the usual precaution in giving credit; again the favorite clerk would be monopolizing the sales and the inevitable result would be that there would doubtless be continual friction between the employes. Where straight salaries are paid that is regarded as the employer's business and does not create the jealousy that would likely occur if the other plan were followed.

Knowledge of the cost of an article would doubtless be of much benefit to a clerk. The fact that the cost mark is kept secret might be taken as indicating that the employer did not have sufficient confidence in his staff. Then again, as long as the "cutting system" is in vogue, the clerk should be in a position to talk business as intelligently as the proprietor. It creates a better impression with the buyers.

As to the marking of goods, plain marking is always popular with the buying public. It is undoubtedly a great convenience to a prospective purchaser to be able to satisfy himself or herself as to prices without asking so much information, which sometimes becomes embarrassing. With the prices in plain figures many people hunt up the article that suits them, and being aware of the price, take up very little time of the clerk or proprietor. In such a case as this it is certainly to the interest of the dealer to mark in plain figures, and viewed from another standpoint it means that the price is practically the same to everyone.

OTTAWA.

June 29.—Bate & Company have added a motor delivery car to their outfit, and also the E. B. Eddy Co., of Hull, has placed another big motor truck in commission.

John M. Dowdall, grocer, corner of Rideau and Cumberland Streets, has gone out of business.

I. A. Wackid, who keeps a candy and fruit store on corner Bank and Gloucester Streets, has had his store enlarged by about double the floor space, and has opened an ice cream parlor.

A. Lafleur has opened a grocery store at J. M. Dowdall's old stand, 237 Rideau Street.

A new grocery and provision store has been opened by F. Burgess & Co., under the name of "The Corner Store," situated at the corner Laurier Avenue and Nicholas Street.

Foster Woodward, the older of the two young men who were drowned above the Chaudiere rapids Monday night, was a clerk for F. A. Scott & Sons in their grocery at Wellington Street, having been with them only four months. He resided at 83 Vittoria Street. He was 32 years of age and leaves a wife and two children.

Forbes Bros., in their Bank Street store, had a very fine window display of groceries that are used at picnics. The window consisted of pickles, canned goods, etc., placed at the bottom of the window, and an inscription hung from the ceiling, with ribbons tied from it to the necks of the bottles, etc. On the inscription was written, "Get your picnic basket filled here."

Lavigne Bros. have opened a grocery store at the corner of Queen and Broad Streets.

A fire which did damage of about $2,000 occurred last Friday afternoon, when the grocery store belonging to Mrs. E. Leroux, 161 Rochester Street, was gutted. The cause of the fire is not known, though it is thought to have started in the grocery during the absence of Mrs. Leroux. The damage is partially covered by insurance.

Dr. MacCarthy, of this city, called attention to the necessity for bakers delivering bread in paper bags. He brought the matter before the recent medical convention, and it was agreed that the move would be a good one from a health point of view. The only objection the bakers had was to the extra expense necessitated by the employment of extra labor. The question of paper was not such a large item. Dr. MacCarthy also urged that no foodstuffs should be wrapped in newspapers. On motion of Mayor Scott, seconded by Dr. MacCarthy, it was agreed to recommend to council that a by-law be passed providing for bread being delivered in paper bags and that no foodstuffs be wrapped in newspapers.

Business last week was as good as could be expected during the warm weather. Thursday and Saturday's market were very large ones, both as regards the number of sellers and the number of buyers on hand.

The delegates from the Retail Grocers' Association who went to Toronto and Hamilton to sell space for the food show which will be held in a short time here, reported before the association at a meeting Thursday afternoon. President Wm. York, and Duncan Bell and H. C. Ellis reported that one-half of the space for sale to outside firms is already taken. The best firms in Canada and the Old Country, it is said, will be represented at the show.

The regular meeting of the Bakers' and Confectioners' Union last week was largely attended. A considerable amount of business arising out of settlement made with the master bakers was dealt with, and everything is now in a satisfactory condition. Several vacancies in offices and committees were filled, and the union will at its next regular meeting, on the first Saturday in July, hold an election for a delegate to the national convention to be held in Quebec on July 28. A full attendance and a keen contest are expected.

LONDON.

Wholesale trade shows signs of improvement and the outlook is considered most encouraging. Prices are well maintained except perhaps in the case of sugars, raws being, if anything, in buyers' favor. Sugar continues slow of sale, but when the preserving season is well on, as it soon will be, goods will begin to move more actively. Very little is doing in canned goods, which is all the more aggravating in view of the fact that wholesalers have unusually large stocks on hand and that new vegetables are now coming in quite freely.

The excursion which is usually run to Niagara Falls under the auspices of a number of local grocers, is to be held this year on July 15th. This excursion is always well patronized and there is no reason to suppose this year's event will be an exception to the rule.

The Wholesale Grocers' Exchange's new terms go into effect on July 1st, after which date all goods will be net, no cash discounts and interest on all overdue accounts. Retailers doubt very much that the change will last long.

Canners are keeping up the price of strawberries, having a standing offer. For one day only they sold at 8c to 9c per box; to-day they sell at 11c to 12c, although they have been coming in quite freely. The first ripe raspberries of the season appeared on the market on Saturday, selling at 15c. Here, too, the canner was in evidence. Cherries are also beginning to come in.

Arthur Mitchell who recently bought out the grocery business of Frank H. Robinson, corner of Craig St. and the Worthy Road, takes possession on July 1st.

John McLean, formerly of McCutcheon & Co., and who some time ago opened in the grocery business at the corner of Dundas and Rectory Sts., has made an assignment.

Members of the Retail Grocers' Association are talking of an outing at Dorchester, where last summer they spent a most enjoyable half-holiday. Dorchester is an ideal place for "a time," and one of these fine Wednesday afternoons the grocery men will be found disporting themselves there.

Western Man for Railway Commission.

There is a strong desire in the west for the appointment of a western man on the Railway Commission, and this sentiment found expression in the following resolution, moved in a strong speech by W. P. Wells, Regina,:

Whereas, a bill is now before the House of Commons making provision for increasing the number of Commissioners comprising the Railway Commission; therefore be it resolved that the Federal Government be requested to appoint as a member of said commission, when enlarged, a western man, whose knowledge of western conditions would be of material assistance to the board in dealing with western problems.

In support of this resolution, P. McAra, Regina, referred to several complaints from the west which have been before the Railway Commission for a year without any action being taken. He submitted that there is urgent need for western representation on the Commission.

Wm. Ausley, Rouleau, referred to some grievances of the people on the Soo line south of Moose Jaw. These grievances would never receive proper attention until there was on the Railway Commission a western man who would be able to appreciate the importance of the complaints made.

The resolution was carried.

Grazing Lands.

A resolution was introduced by A. E. Whitmore, Regina, calling upon the Dominion Government to set aside for grazing purposes those areas in the provinces better adopted for grazing than for grain growing purposes. In support of the resolution, Mr. Whitmore said that the stock interests of Saskatchewan amount to about $50,000,000, and that they get little consideration from the Governments. Homesteaders encroach on the ranches and there is little encouragement to the rancher to improve his property. The motion was finally amended to provide for ten year leases and was then carried without opposition.

Navigation of the Saskatchewan.

There is every reason to believe that, with very little expense, the Saskatchewan river could be made a very important artery of commerce. Mayor Cook, of Prince Albert, pointed out that it is navigable from Edmonton to Grand Rapids a distance of more than 1,000 miles. Two years ago the Dominion Government undertook a survey, but it was not completed. Mr. Cook secured the adoption of a strong resolution calling on the Dominion Government to complete that survey.

Hudson's Bay Railway.

A. C. Fraser, Edmonton, is a strong believer in the feasibility of the Hudson's Bay route. He secured the adoption of the following resolution:

That in the opinion of this convention the future prosperity of this great western country, and of Canada as a whole, largely depends on cheap transportation, and that as Hudson's Bay is the natural outlet, and in our opinion is a perfectly feasible route, the Dominion Government be requested to build a road from some point on the North Saskatchewan river to Fort Churchill as a national undertaking.

A resolution relating to insurance and stock companies introduced by A. C. Fraser, Edmonton, was responsible for a long discussion. It was finally passed in the following amended form:

Whereas, since the establishment of the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan a large number of Provincially incorporated fire, guarantee and live stock insurance companies have, in the absence of an insurance act, become incorporated and licensed to carry on their business in the said Provinces under the provisions of the foreign companies and joint stock companies ordinances of the Northwest Territories of 1901 and 1903, and, whereas, the said ordinances make no provision for a deposit with the Government for the protection of policy holders, and, whereas, likewise no provision is made for the inspection of the affairs of the said companies by the Governments of the Provinces, named, and, whereas, no provision is made whatever compelling the said companies to render an annual statement to the Governments showing their financial standing and ability, to cover any losses which may occur; therefore be it resolved that the Associated Boards of Trade of the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan in convention assembled at the City of Medicine Hat on the 18th, 19th and 20th days of June, 1908, hereby expresses its strong disapproval of the present unsatisfactory conditions affecting the insuring public, and that the attention of the Provincial Legislatures be drawn to the urgent necessity of immediately enacting such legislation as will ensure a reasonable degree of security to policy holders, and that in the granting of charters to companies seeking incorporation for the purpose of carrying on insurance business or any other business wherein the credit of the public is used, the Legislature be asked to insert and enforce the following, among other conditions: 1. The deposit of an amount of cash or approved securities with the Provincial Government before such charters be issued. 2. That where an unsafe proportion of such stock is held by parties residing outside of the Province or without any proper securities in the Province, such deposit shall be proportionately increased. 3. That as the liabilities of such companies to the public increase, as revealed by their annual statements to the Provincial Government, the deposit of such companies should be proportionately increased. 4. That in no case may a fire insurance company insert in their policy any clause limiting their liability to any proportion of the face value of such policy except as provided in the ordinance to secure uniform conditions on policies of fire insurance, of 1903, of N.W.T. 5. That the securities to be authorized by the Provincial Government shall be submitted for inspection by and approval of the Provincial Government annually and at such other times as an inspection may be called for.

SATURDAY MORNING SESSION.

At the Saturday morning session, A. C. Fraser, Edmonton, brought up another grievance against the railways. It appears that they are in the habit of filing plans of survey tying up certain properties for their use and delaying paying for those properties. Often the plans are changed after long delays, and the owners of the property receive no compensation. The resolution was as follows:

Whereas, the filing of a plan of survey of a line of railway fixes the rate of compensation obtainable from a company and thus prevents the value of the property rising, even where the adjacent property continues to rise in price; and, whereas, in some cases the company deviates from the line of the original survey, and fails to purchase the property affected by said survey; and, whereas, an unreasonable and indefinite time often intervenes before a railway company completes the purchase of land required for railway purposes; and, whereas, such action is a great injustice to the individual owners, and at times the means of causing them financial embarrassment by sacrificing their personal interests to the advantage of wealthy corporations; and, whereas, great loss and inconvenience is caused to the owners of land by companies filing in lands titles offices surveys of proposed railway lines; We, the convention of the Boards of Trade of Alberta and Saskatchewan, meeting in the City of Medicine Hat, respectfully petition that an Act be passed to compel the companies to make full settlement of the payment of the compensation or purchase price of the lands affected by the registering or filing of plans of survey as aforesaid within three months of the date of filing or registering the same, and that the rate of compensation or purchase price be fixed according to the value at the time of such settlement by a permanent Board of Arbitrators to be established for the express purpose of making prompt and satisfactory settlement in such cases.

Speaking to his motion, Mr. Fraser said that while Edmonton had a particular grievance of this kind he had no doubt that other towns had had the same experience. In 1905 one railway company filed plans tying up property in Edmonton and as yet they have neither paid for the property nor abandoned the plans. He cited the case of a widow in Edmonton whose property had been tied up by the railway company. She could have sold several times had it not been for the action of the company. Now conditions have changed, and if the company takes the property it will be at a lower figure than she could have obtained two or three years ago. If the company abandon the plans she has no redress.

The resolution was carried.

Registered Agreements of Sale.

William Short, Edmonton, moved, seconded by J. E. Bradshaw, Prince Albert, the adoption of the following important resolution:

That it is the opinion of this convention that some provision should be made for the registration of agreements for sale in the same or like manner as transfers may now be registered, only a nominal fee to be charged for such registration. Further, that a judge's order to the registrar be sufficient for the cancellation of such registration.

Mr. Short said that fully nine-tenths of the land transactions of the last five years have not been registered at all, and it was imperatively necessary that there should be some system whereby agreements of sale should be registered. The rights of creditors are affected by men selling out their equity in property without appearing on the face of the transaction at all.

The resolution was carried.

Traffic Bridges.

Bridges are urgently required in many parts of the West. Settlement follows the railways and often the new settlers find a railway bridge over the rivers along which they settle, but it is a long time before provision can be made to secure bridges for foot and vehicular traffic. The convention passed a resolution to the effect that in its opinion the railway companies on all bridges hereafter constructed should, wherever the same is necessary, be required to provide traffic facilities across all streams and rivers, the additional cost of construction and maintenance thereof to be borne by the local Government or municipality within whose jurisdiction the same may be.

Commercial Education.

The woes of the business man afflicted with incompetent office help and stenographers who are unable to spell, found expression in a strong resolution moved by A. G. Harrison, Edmonton, calling on the educational authorities to provide better commercial education in the public and high schools. This resolution was amended on motion of Mr. McAra to provide for education along agricultural lines also.

Homesteads.

The homestead grievance was ventilated by the Medicine Hat delegates. Many people who have applied for homesteads have never completed their homestead duties. They tie up vast areas of land of which they make no use. The Medicine Hat resolution called for an annual inspection of homestead lands by the Department of the Interior, and it was carried unanimously.

Permanent Secretary.

It was felt that a permanent secretary is required to follow up the work of the convention, and the executive were empowered on motion of Mr. McAra to appoint such a secretary in case satisfactory financial arrangements can be made.

Railway Charters.

The last resolution referred to the failure of railways to live up to their charters. It was moved by N. W. Martin, of Prince Albert, seconded by R. S. Cook, Mayor of that city, and carried unanimously. It was as follows:

Whereas, great hardships have resulted to settlers in Western Canada through the failure of railways to live up to their charters in the matter of completing their roads within the time specified by those charters; and, whereas, settlement in Canada takes place in advance of railway construction on the faith that the railways will be built in accordance with the terms of charters granted by the Governments of the Dominion or the Provinces: therefore be it resolved, that we memorialize the Governments of Canada and the Provinces that extensions of time and other alterations in the terms of railway charters be not granted, except after a full investigation, after the interested settlers have been duly notified and given an opportunity to oppose or approve of such extension.

Votes of Thanks.

Enthusiastic votes of thanks to Medicine Hat Board of Trade, the retiring President and the Press were carried, presented and responded to, after which the convention was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

CONVENTION NOTES.

Saskatoon next year.

Indian Head made a big effort to secure the convention next year but lost by a very close vote.

Medicine Hat hospitality is of the truly Western kind. The town certainly belonged to the delegates.

Medicine Hat—"The City of Eternal Light," and "The Town That Was Born Lucky"—does not lack picturesque names.

Wm. Pearce, Calgary and E. M. Saunders, Moose Jaw, familiar figures at previous conventions were greatly missed this year.

Secretary Hall was the hardest worked man at the convention. He was untiring in his efforts to keep the machinery running smoothly and he certainly succeeded well.

The attendance of the railway men was very much appreciated. Several misunderstandings were cleared up as the result of heart to heart talks.

Delegates and press representatives were given the privileges of the Cypress Club. A courtesy which was very much appreciated.

The influence of the Associated Boards should be greatly increased by the inclusion of Manitoba.

President MacKenzie is a winner at billiards.

"Welcome to the City of Eternal Light. This certifies that the town is yours," was printed on the badges presented to each delegate.

A smoker on Thursday night and an entertainment in the Opera House on Friday night, contributed to the gaiety of the convention nights.

SOME HINTS ON CARD WRITING.

Advertising cards on articles which are being displayed are always a source of gratifying results. Of course it is necessary to have some skill in handling a brush, otherwise the cards will present an inharmonious effect, and will detract from the general appearance of the display. There are a few simple rules to be followed in making these cards, and if they are adhered to a nice neat card will be the result. Do not try to see how much you can get onto a card, but how little to make the announcement. Be direct and to the point, avoiding ambiguity and superfluity. Lay out what is to be written on the card and estimate the space, so that as much of the announcement comes on one side as the other; in other words, preserve the balance. A little practice with the brush will enable the grocer to produce good letters. As a rule, good white cardboard, or bristol board, is the best to use, and India black ink for marking. It looks very bad, indeed, to see a serious lack of uniformity in the size of the letters. Perhaps the most unnecessary feature is speed, as sometimes these cards may have to be changed twice in the same day.

As such a large number of cards are required, it will be seen considerable speed is required, otherwise the grocer would spend most of his time writing cards. A little practice overcomes this difficulty completely.

SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

One day a wire basket fell off the top of the clerk's desk and scratched his cheek. Not having any court plaster at hand, he slapped on three two-cent postage stamps and continued his work. Later he took some papers to his employer's private office. The "old man," observing the postage stamps, exclaimed: "Look here, Jenkins! You are carrying too much postage for second-class matter!"

The Town That Was Born Lucky

Rudyard Kipling's Description of Medicine Hat Well Chosen—Wonderful Natural Advantages—Good Location for Foundrymen and Manufacturers—Alberta to Become a Manufacturing Province and Medicine Hat A Centre of Industry.

When Kipling described Medicine Hat as "the town that was born lucky," he expressed in picturesque and striking phrase the simple fact about the wonderful gas city in South-eastern Alberta. Sometimes it is a handicap to be born lucky, as witness the prevailing belief as to the lack of success of rich men's sons. But Medicine Hat is determined to make the most of the good fortune with which bountiful nature has supplied her and her people are of the class who would make a success of the building up of a town with less natural advantages than those possessed by the city of which they have every reason to be proud. Situated in the middle west, about halfway between Winnipeg and Vancouver, in the heart of the most rapidly developing section of the Dominion, this ambitious young city with its wealth of natural gas supplies is in an admirable position to become a manufacturing centre of the first importance. That this is the future of Medicine Hat not one of the citizens has any doubts and eastern skeptics who come to scoff are now remaining to investigate. The opportunities of the place, the future which it offers, grip the attention of the honest investigator.

The Natural Gas Asset.

The natural gas field in South-eastern Alberta covers, as nearly as can be ascertained, an area of about 100 miles in length by 50 miles in breadth and bids fair to be one of the best natural gas fields in the world. It is one of the largest gas areas known. One of the Medicine Hat wells shows the highest rock pressure in America with the exception of some of the West Virginian wells. On the day the flow was struck the well accumulated a pressure of 400 pounds in twelve minutes. Several weeks later this well accumulated the same pressure in eight minutes, showing an increase in the flow. The pressure in this well is now more than 500 feet and it is supplying the whole city and the water works pumping station. The other four wells on the municipal system have been shut off as their supply was not needed. Ten wells have been drilled in Medicine Hat, and in every one gas has been found, showing that the supply is practically inexhaustible.

A good flow is found in any part of this district at a depth of 650 feet, but by boring for 1,000 feet the best dry gas in America is struck. When it is remembered that the gas area has been explored and proved over the immense area indicated above and that gas can be obtained by boring in practically all parts of this area it can readily be understood that South-eastern Alberta possesses in this gift of nature one of the most valuable assets.

The gas is almost pure methane (swamp gas) the analyis being as follows:

Methane, 99.49 per cent.
Hydrogen, .51 per cent.
Oxygen, trace.

The British Thermal Units (B.T.U.) per 1,000 feet of Medicine Hat natural gas are as follows, shown in comparison with other gas areas in America:

Medicine Hat gas	1,100,000
West Virginia	1,145,000
Ohio and Indiana	1,095,000
Kansas	1,100 000
Gas made from coal	755,000
Water gas	350,000
Producer gas from bituminous coal	155,000

The above figures show conclusively the value of the Medicine Hat gas as a fuel in comparison with the gas obtained in other fields or manufactured in various ways.

Will It Last?

But will this last? is the question asked by every skeptic. No, it is not likely to last forever, but there is little probability of the supply being exhausted during the life-time of the questioner. The coal areas will not last forever, they must some day be exhausted; but that day is so far remote that there need be no cause for anxiety for many years to come. Similarly there need be no cause for anxiety about the Medicine Hat gas field. As yet the vast gas field has been tapped in only a few places and it extends over a vast area. The fact that a great reservoir exists under the city of Medicine Hat and district is shown by the way in which the wells in that city have stood for years the drain made upon them without showing any diminution in the pressure or volume. The engineer in charge of the C.P.R. well and shops assured the writer that there has not been one ounce of diminution in the maximum pressure of that well since the day it was started, about three and one-half years ago.

The C.P.R. Shops.

That this particular well is subject to constant drain is soon seen by an inspection of the C.P.R. shops and roundhouse. These shops afford an agreeable contrast to most shops of the kind. Except for the coal for the locomotives there is not a pound of coal or a stick of kindling wood to be seen in the place. Consequently there is no smoke and no dirt. Natural gas from the company's own well furnishes all the light, heat and power required and it is estimated that the saving to the company amounts at least to $60,000 per year.

Formerly in firing up their engines hundreds of cords of wood and a large quantity of oil and waste were used, the operation requiring a long time. Today a few inches of coal are thrown into the fire box of the locomotive, a burner in the shape of the letter U about six feet in length, made of iron tubing, perforated and attached to a rubber hose is thrown in on top of this coal and ignited. The coal is quickly kindled from the top down and at the same time steam is made in the boiler. Under the old system it took from three to four hours to have an engine ready for the road but with the use of gas a cold engine can be got under steam and ready for the road in one and one-half hours. This one item means a saving to the company of six thousand dollars a year.

Locomotive and car springs for the entire division are made in the Medicine Hat shops in a small furnace operated with natural gas. With crude appliances the engineer in charge is demonstrating what can be done in making brass castings. There is plenty of molding sand in the immediate vicinity and with gas at hand for the furnaces there is a splendid opening in Medicine Hat for a foundry.

The Cost of Power.

With a small initial capital expense any manufacturing plant locating in Medicine Hat can secure light, heat and power practically free for all time to come. That is, the items of light, heat and power can be practically eliminated from the manufacturers cost sheets and every manufacturer who has figured what these three items cost him must know what an important saving this represents.

In the course of a very interesting paper on "The Cost of Power," delivered before the Canadian Manufacturers' Association last September by L. G. Reid, consulting engineer, Montreal, it was pointed out that very few manufacturers know what their power is really costing them. He said:

Let us take for an illustration a moderate-sized ordinary steam plant and let us assume that it operates on the basis of ten hours per day for 300 days in the year and that the actual average power required throughout each day of ten hours is 200 horse-power and let us take coal at $3.50 per ton.

"It is safe to say that the coal bill for one year in such a plant will not be less than $4,500; that you will pay your engineer $1,000, and after the incidentals have been added for oil, packing, waste, etc., the total amount will be $6 200. Then additions for interest and depreciation will usually bring this amount up to at least $7,000, or say, $35 per horse-power and the average of 200 horse-power.

"It is probably safe to say that not one manufacturing plant in fifty is making its own power for so low a cost as $35.

"Now let us see what this $7,000 per year as a fixed charge for power really stands for.

"$7,000 represents the net profits on perhaps $75,000 to $100,000 of finished product.

"It represents a fixed charge against your business equivalent to $140,000 of 5 per cent. bonds, and it is needless to say you would give much thought to the question of the issuance of such an amount of bonds."

The whole purpose of Mr. Reid's paper was to point out the importance of watching the cost of the power department and to suggest economies whereby the cost of steam power might be reduced to $25 per horse power per annum upon the average load used. He did not think it could be reduced to any lower figure and he is a man who ought to know. On the other hand, the lowest price at which it is expected that Niagara power can be delivered in Ontario towns is about $17 per horse-power per annum and it has yet to be demonstrated that this can be done.

What a Comparison Shows.

In comparison with the above what can the gas city of the west offer to the manufacturer?

Mr. Reid estimated the average cost of 200 horse-power per annum for the plant used in his illustration to be at least $7,000. A manufacturer can drill his own well in Medicine Hat and thus secure a supply of light, heat and power (not power alone) in perpetuity for much less than it would cost him for steam power for one year only. Drilling costs $2.50 per foot for the first 700 feet and $3 per foot beyond that up to 1,000 feet. Including the cost of the necessary piping the entire cost of a well 1,000 feet deep is about $4 500. That is, for an expenditure of $4,500 a manufacturer can obtain in perpetuity a supply of light, heat and power as compared with an expenditure of $7,000 per annum for power alone. This comparison does not do justice to Medicine Hat for an unlimited supply of power can be obtained from the one well, not merely 200 horse-power.

Municipally Owned Wells.

On the other hand, if the manufacturer does not want to go to the expense of sinking his own well he can buy his gas from the city. Medicine Hat controls its own gas supply as a municipal enterprise and the price to manufacturers is only 5 cents per thousand cubic feet.

Taking a 200 horse-power engine as the basis of calculation the cost of power then works out about as follows: Natural gas consumed at the rate of sixteen cubic feet per horse-power per hour at five cents per thousand feet makes $1.60 per day for ten hours, which, multiplied by the three hundred working days in the year, gives the cost for operating a 200 horse-power engine in so far as fuel is concerned, $480 per annum or $2.40 per horse-power per annum. No stokers are required, no coal being freighted from mines to be used under your boilers, and no refuse or ashes to be carted away. Every foot of gas paid for can be used and the manufacturer pays only for what he uses. If the load during the day is fifty horse-power you pay for the amount of fuel required to produce fifty horse-power. If at any time during the day, the peak load reaches your maximum of 200 horse-power you pay for that and no more, no less. To those who have never investigated the merits of natural gas as a power producer this may seem almost incredible, but investigation will show the correctness of these figures. It should also, be borne in mind that the gas will supply light and heat as well as power—the same commodity that drives the engine will also light and heat the plant and buildings.

The Call to Manufacturers.

This, then, is the why and wherefore of Medicine Hat's right to the name "The town that was born lucky." During the severe winter of 1906-7 when there was so great distress throughout Western Canada because of the fuel famine, Medicine Hat had no trouble Her fuel supply was at hand. While other cities are at work on schemes for securing cheap hydro-electric power Medicine Hat has the cheapest power on the continent. With justice, therefore, does she extend an invitation to outside manufacturers to locate in the gas city. Nowhere else can they secure power at anything like the price.

The market is a growing one. At this late day it is not necessary to point to the rapid growth of the Canadian West. The Western Provinces are receiving the bulk of the immigration to Canada and there is room for millions more. This will soon be the largest market in Canada and just as manufacturing has followed the westward trend in the United States, so it is bound to do in Canada. Some province in the west is going to be a manufacturing province and the people of Alberta believe that theirs is the province fitted by nature to fulfil that destiny. Medicine Hat with its cheap light, heat and power believes that among the manufacturing cities of the west it is to have first place.

HOME-MADE FIRE EXTINGUISHER

An inexpensive fire extinguisher may be made by taking twenty parts of common lime; salt, five parts, and water, seventy-five parts. Mix well and put in thin bottles. In case of fire a bottle should be thrown so that it will break in or near the fire, when the gases liberated from the water—salt and lime solution—will put it out. This mixture is said to be better and cheaper than that used in many of the high-priced fire extinguishers installed for fire protection.

TO KEEP TAB ON FLOATING FAMILIES.

Toledo Grocers' Association Institutes Scheme to Follow Frequent Movers.

The Toledo, O., Grocers' Association has hit upon a novel plan to keep track of removals of families in which the members of the organization may be interested through uncollected bills. There, as in every large city, it has often been hard to keep a close "tab" on what are termed "floaters" in the retail business, a name applied to those who often find it cheaper to move than pay rent and grocery bills.

In the smaller towns it is comparatively easy to know of the goings and comings of the householders, but in large cities it is often the case that people move between two days and it is long before the creditors know either of the move or where the delinquents moved to.

The Toledo plan to keep track of such moves is in the shape of a municipal ordinance which provides that every drayman or person who is engaged in the moving of persons from one house to another shall make a regular report of the moving to the proper authorities, the report being made a matter of public record.

The association is fostering the plan and has arranged to have the following ordinance introduced at an early day, with each of the members pledged to work hard for its passage:

"An ordinance concerning the removal of the habitation of families and other persons in the city of Toledo, and providing penalties for the violation of said ordinance.

"Section 1. Be it ordained by the Mayor and common council of the city of Toledo, that hereafter all draymen and other persons who remove or assist in removing any family or person into any building or room in said city, or from any building or any room in said city, shall immediately after such removal report such removal to the superintendent of police of said city, giving the name of the person or family so removed, from where and to where removed removed, giving the street and number of the building from which and to which such removal takes place, and the date of such removal, which report shall be made upon cards provided for that purpose by the superintendent of police, and signed by the drayman or other persons engaged in such removal.

"Section 2. Any person failing or refusing to comply with the provisions of this ordinance, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than one dollar, nor more than five dollars, with costs of prosecution."

The Twin Cities of Alberta

A. G. Harrison, Secretary Edmonton Board of Trade, Describes Some of the Advantages of the Adjoining Cities of Edmonton and Strathcona.

Edmonton is beautifully located on the north bank of the North Saskatchewan River with Strathcona on the south bank. The population of Edmonton is approximately 20,000, and that of Strathcona 5,000, making a joint population of the twin cities of 25,000. This rapidly-growing city is very unlike the prairie towns, being 150 feet above the river bed, and has wooded and park-like surroundings. The term "Northern Alberta" so often used as applying to Edmonton is a mis-nomer, as the city is in reality 50 miles south of the geographical centre of the province.

One of Edmonton's New Business Blocks.

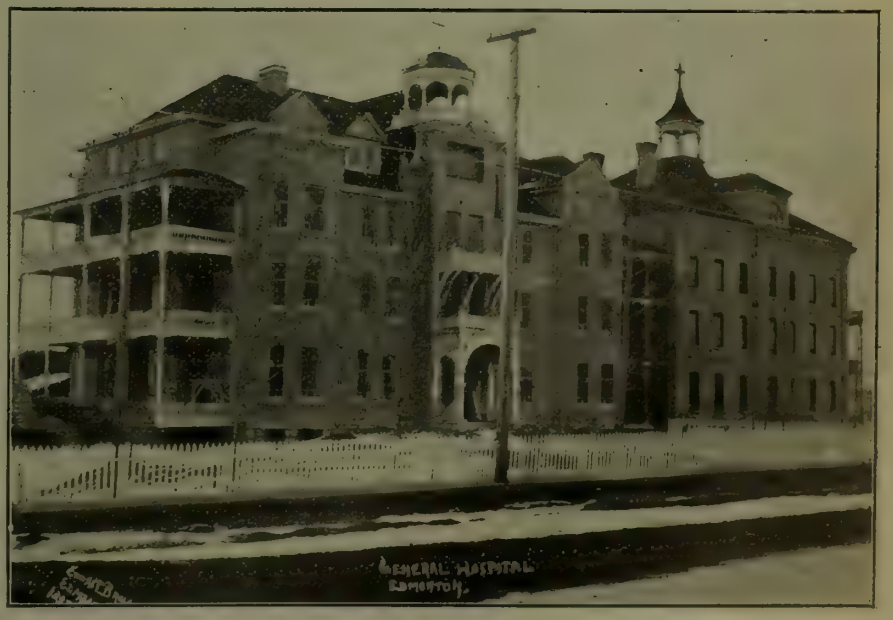
The city owns and operates its own water service, has electric light and an up-to-date sewage system lately installed and has also discarded the old telephone and installed the automatic Strowger telephone throughout the city. It has also fine pavements and boulevardes while street car tracks are in course of construction through the main thoroughfares, the street railway franchise being owned by the city. Natural gas has recently been discovered at Morinville 18 miles north of the city. This will be piped to Edmonton and will be of great commercial value.

Edmonton has fourteen chartered banks (which fact alone demonstrates stability), twenty-two hotels, two daily, five weekly and three monthly newspapers, four saw mills and planing mills, one modern brewery, two aerated water factories, a seven-storey packing and storage plant costing over $1,000,000 to erect, tent and mattress factories, three brick yards, steam laundries, etc., and many of the chief eastern wholesale houses are represented here with branch warehouses or agents.

The Provincial Parliament buildings are being erected at a cost of $1,250,000, five banks have erected handsome brick buildings, the Swift Co. packing plant is drawing near to completion, a four-storey building, 100x60 feet, is being erected on Main St. for apartments and stores, while there are also several large business blocks being erected throughout the various business portions of the city. How the city is going ahead is shown by the record of building permits, as follows; 1905, $750,000; 1906, $1,868,069; 1907, $2,280,210; and for 1908 up to May 15, $1,602,980.

Edmonton is practically built on an enormous coal bed, it being impossible to walk up or down the river without seeing the huge seams exposed. Hundreds of tons are shipped annually, the price at the pit mouth being about $1 per ton, and delivered in the city at $3.50. Modern mining machinery is being installed and the coal industry is only in its infancy. Then, it has a rich territory extending at least 400 miles to the east, 300 miles south and 500 miles to the west and north in which the local industries have a practical monopoly.

By the end of the year Edmonton will have no less than three transcontinental railways. As soon as the Canadian Northern Railway reached Edmonton the city became a permanent distributing centre. Freight rates were adjusted and Edmonton placed on an equal footing with other distributing centres of Western Canada. Then the Canadian Pacific Railway have definitely announced it to be part of their policy to make Edmonton a wholesale and distributing centre, while then the Grand Trunk Pacific will further add to the city's advantages, and bring it to the fore as a distributing centre.



New General Hospital Building, Edmonton.

With its surrounding country containing ... ural resources, such as coal, timber, clay and marl deposits, natural gas supply and petroleum fields, iron ore deposits, quartz mining claims, etc.. Edmonton offers excellent openings for factories and mills, the following being the chief industries for which there are opportunities: Woolen mills, pickle factories, cereal mills, box factories, furniture factories, soap factories, cement works, paper mills, oatmeal mills, malting houses, wholesale fur house, terra cotta and ornamental brick factories and others. Edmonton does not offer bonuses to factories because the location is too good to make it necessary. It does, however, offer water, light and power at cost and a fixed rate of taxation for a number of years.

Edmonton being the capital city, with the Government House located here, makes it a social centre. The University across the river in Strathcona, and the Alberta College at Edmonton shows it to be an educational centre.

Edmonton is in a mixed farming district, having a rich black soil, on which wild vegetation thrives wonderfully, producing good hay for the winter at the mere cost of labor. Wheat averages from 25 to 50 bushels per acre, oats from 30 to 80, and barley from 40 to 60. There is an unlimited choice of free homestead lands from 50 to 60 miles out of the city and further.

The beautiful autumns, the mild winters and the cool nights in summer (no matter how warm the day) have won for the province the name of "Sunny Alberta."

A LIVE BOARD OF TRADE.

This year the Saskatoon Board of Trade did a very wise thing, which, though costing the city a considerable amount, will in the near future amply repay the outlay.

Early in the year the executive, or council, of the board, saw that some live advertising ought to be done in order to induce manufacturing concerns and wholesale houses to locate here. With keen penetration into the future, and with the knowledge that Saskatoon was fast becoming a railway centre in the middle west, they cast about for a responsible, competent and trustworthy man to manage their affairs. They could also see that two additional transcontinental railways were making this a divisional point, with stations, shops, and roundhouses. They had in mind a power scheme now on foot to harness the waters of the Saskatchewan River for power purposes.

The fact that the city is situated in the heart of the hard wheat belt, too, destined it to become a wholesale centre and distributing point, with railways radiating in all directions, thus making shipping facilities all that could be desired.

With the object in view of bringing the advantages of Saskatoon to the notice of the general public, merchants, wholesalers and manufacturers in all parts of Canada and the States, F. Maclure Sclanders, St. John, N.B., was chosen commissioner to the board, with instructions to conduct a wide advertising campaign. M. Isbister, president of the board, himself an alert and keen business man, and a hardwareman, with his executive have been most fortunate in their choice, and Mr. Sclanders has been very successful in conducting the work under their directions.

A special pamphlet has been compiled overflowing with illustrations and information of a nature that is convincing, with statistics, data and other matter. Stationery has been secured with maps of the surrounding country shown on the back and advertising space has been taken in the leading papers and magazines.

Not content with advertising from this end merely, the board decided to send a delegate to St. Paul, on the south side of the line, armed with samples of wheat and the necessary literature. This delegate, S. G. Lawson, remained in St. Paul one month, addressing meetings of farmers, merchants and manufacturers. He also secured an interview with Senator J. J. Hill and interested the great railway magnate in this part of the northwest.

Nor have the labors of the board stopped here. On the opening of the new Canadian Pacific Railway from Winnipeg west, the board seized the opportunity, with the co-operation of Mayor Wilson, to charter a special train from the latter place, and invited the jobbers and manufacturers of Winnipeg to take a trip to the "hub" of the hard wheat belt. Quite a number availed themselves of the opportunity the trip afforded and were entertained by the city authorities.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, July 2, 1908.

The continuance of warm weather and those conditions which lead to perfect pasturage in the country, is having an obvious effect on the volume of cheese which is arriving daily. The outlook is optimistic for the trade, as the practical assurance of good crops throughout Canada this year will render it possible for farmers to keep their cows during the winter, and not be obliged to kill them off owing to a scarcity of feed. Such a condition as the latter is certainly deplorable, as its effects are so lasting, being felt for some few years.

A rather gratifying feature of the market this week is the increasing strength in the price in England. This is especially the case at London, while Bristol and Liverpool have been somewhat slower to react.

It was thought that the continuance of the high prices which are ruling here would put the product beyond the export basis, but if a sympathetic movement has set in over in England, and the demand increases in proportion, the margin of profit to the exporters will remain the same, although the prices are higher all around. The long-standing difference between the Montreal exporters and the Belleville board has at last been arranged amicably. The bone of contention has been the day of meeting, but now this difficulty has been surmounted and the board will meet on Thursdays, which day it is expected will result satisfactorily to the interests of both the exporters and the farmers. High prices are certainly being asked in the country. At St. Hyacinthe as high as 12 1-16c was asked for colored, and 12c for white. Local reaction to these prices is not quite complete yet, but will be shortly. The local price stands around 11¼c to 11½c for new and 11¼c to 11⅝c for twins. The receipts for the week were 99,442 boxes, as compared with 103,442 boxes for the corresponding week of last year. These figures show a deficit of 3,576 boxes, as compared with last year's figures. Receipts since May 1 are 387,182 boxes, as compared with 465,568 boxes for the season of last year for the corresponding length of time. These figures show an improvement, and each week the difference for corresponding periods becomes less. It is thought by the trade that prices have about reached the top notch.

The butter market continues high in price, with a good local demand, and enquiries arriving from England. The price has not changed since our last bulletin. Finest Eastern Townships is worth 24c to 24¼c; Quebec sections, 23½c to 23¾c; Ontario dairies, 20c to 21c. Supplies are arriving in generous quantities, but the quality has fallen off slightly, which may be a result of the prevailing high temperature. Receipts of butter for the week were 23,510 packages, as compared with 17,959 packages for the same period last year. The comparison of the season's receipts is as follows: 1908, 99,513 packages, as compared with 108,301 packages for 1907.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, July 2, 1908.

With factories running full time, deliveries of hogs fairly heavy, and a brisk demand for their products, both at home and abroad, the Canadian packers are feeling considerably better this week. Business is in better condition than it has been for several months and a better general tone is felt throughout the industry.

The advance on Canadian bacon in the British market noted last week has continued and now 60s are being paid with a brisker demand than has been felt for some time. The advances during the week amounted to at least 2s.

Various causes have contributed to the improvement, but the main reason assigned by the packers is the great improvement in demand for bacon and other hog products during the summer months. A well known packer made the statement this week that the summer demand for bacon, not only in Canada, but also abroad, is three times that of any other season. Another reason given is the lighter shipments recently of products to the British market. While Canadian exports have been exceedingly light for some time Danish shippers have kept themselves exceedingly busy and have been sending over large supplies to the British market, so that this reason can scarcely be given much credence. Last week, for instance, the Danish "killings" aggregated 42,000, and they have been running at this and higher, with the exception of a few weeks, all this year. The American shipments, however, have been rather lighter lately and last week was only a fair one. The situation existing in the United States markets is summarized in the following report from the New York Journal of Commerce: "The past week has witnessed a continuation of the packers' efforts to bull hog products of which they are the owners, and of which they wish to reduce the stocks, which are still accumulating, except of meats, and these have been advanced on the usual improvement in demand at this season of the year until prices are now checking that demand. Lard is almost unsalable in any volume, though pressure of cash is not noticeable as the city cutters are nearly out of the market, owing to the high cost of hogs due to their producing nothing beyond the wants of their retail trade in meats, which makes the supply of city lard very light and throws demand onto western, which the packers are not pressing. The supply of hogs has been moderately good and somewhat large for the past week, with the restoration of transportation in the late flooded districts, but the average weight is still running light, due largely to the high prices of corn, as explained in our last week's review."

With the brisker business in Canadian packing houses noted above, prices have advanced another notch. $6.25 to $6.35 is being paid this week for hogs f.o.b. country points, and $6.55 to $6.60 for fed and watered animals. At these prices deliveries have been pretty brisk, though they fell off somewhat later in the week. The quality of hogs coming in has been somewhat better, fewer fat animals being offered.

This improved condition of affairs seems likely to be more than temporary. It is part of the usual good summer's business and should continue with more or less activity, till late in the year.

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—The provision market is stronger this week, owing, no doubt, to the advance in the market in England. The demand has been very good during the week and the change has not been large in any individual case, but has been fairly comprehensive, embracing the majority of lines.

PROVISIONS—Very fair business is being done in all lines, especially in smoked meats, and hams and bacon have advanced half a cent a pound. Lard is slightly firmer, in sympathy with butter, and if the export demand for bacon and other provision lines keeps up, the local market will feel the impetus and increased prices will prevail. A few of the Toronto packing concerns are already working full time on export orders, and an optimistic feeling pervades the trade.

BUTTER—A speculative demand appears to be keeping up the price of butter. The quality, of course, is A1, but dealers cannot understand why in the face of the enormous make of butter, prices should be as high as they are. Last year the few butter-makers made some money and this year nearly every farmer is making butter, expecting to repeat the performance of a year ago, and they seem to be reaping a harvest at that. Dealers and retailers are vieing with each other in offering good prices to the farmer right at his door, and he (the farmer) is taking advantage of the largest price offering. Dealers do not now anticipate a lowering of butter prices, but there is no telling what may happen if there is a let-up in the present demand, for there are surely some people with stocks of butter on their hands. In the meantime butter quotations are higher than a week ago.

EGGS—Supplies are very scarce and shrinkage just at this season is very great, owing to the warm weather. Prices, therefore, have firmed up somewhat. One dealer reports having received but one-fifth the number of eggs to date that he did a year ago. For extra choice eggs 20c a dozen is the price, while for new laid 19c to 19½c is the quotation.

CHEESE—Old cheese is practically off the local market, and what little there is has advanced a cent in price. New cheese is fairly plentiful and with the exit of old and the export feeling, this, too, has developed a firmer tone.

RETURNED FROM EUROPE.

Henri Jonas, of Henri Jonas & Co., Montreal, has just returned from a fourteen week trip to Europe, where he visited several countries, including France, Spain, Italy and Switzerland. Mr. Jonas was over in the interests of his business and closely observed conditions governing the European markets while there.

"People of Brittany are rejoiced," said Mr. Jonas to The Grocer, "over the fact that the sardine industry is likely to be revived. It is three years since sardines stopped frequenting the coast of France, and the famous French sardines became so scarce as to be absolutely off the market. We ought to know pretty soon now what the pack this year is, as the run is at its height in June. Prices will be very high, naturally, as the supply will not nearly fill the demand, and figures will not be as low as they were four years ago for an indefinite period.

"Yes, olive oil is scarce. French and Italian olive oil is very high in price. Within six weeks, while I was there, there was a rise in the price asked of from 15 to 25 francs per 100 kilos. And the worst of it is there will be no more oil until after the crop is harvested next March.

"In Spain the olive business is very brisk. Eight or ten years ago there were not more than three or four packers, but now some forty houses are shipping. The Spanish olives are coming down to normal figures again, and they will soon be in the neighborhood in price of what they were three or four years ago. They had a large stock on hand and then there was a big crop, so that lower prices were but natural. The combine being no more, there are more sellers on the market, and prices are now more likely to be cut for a sale than heretofore.

"French peas are likely to be an average crop, but there will be no surplus, and late orders will not be filled completely. Prunes are looking well, and ought to turn out satisfactorily, in fact, all fruits looked good to me, but we shall have to wait to see what develops.

"Mushrooms are lower, being $2.50 to $3 a case below what they were at this time last year, but the demand there is for this line will soon eat up the stocks, when prices will again climb."

Mr. Jonas says that there was a very cold spell on the continent at the end of May. He was in Switzerland on May 26, when eight to ten inches of snow fell, something which rarely occurs in that country at so late a date. Toward the first of June a depressing heat wave brought on the other extreme. In Paris the first few days in June the temperature was around 93 degrees in the shade.

Mr. Jonas will leave for Europe again on a five week trip, on July 21.

Thos. J. Lipton is demonstrating Lipton's teas in Mayrand & Pouliot's store, in Quebec, this week. Beginning July 8, for two months, this company will run a tea room at 107 St. John Street, for the tercentenary celebrations. D. F. Carter, the firm's Quebec Province representative, will be in charge, while Lipton's Cingalese will be there during the whole time in full force.

THE GROCER'S EAR

We want it for a few moments to tell him how much easier it is to sell

Shredded Wheat Biscuit

than it is to sell any other breakfast cereal. Here are a few of the "selling arguments" for Shredded Wheat:

1 Shredded Wheat is the whole wheat—nothing added, nothing taken away—cleaned, steam-cooked, shredded and baked.

2 The porous shreds are quickly penetrated by the digestive juices, making it more easily digested than mushy porridges or other breakfast foods.

3 Pound for pound, it contains more muscle-making, brain-building material than beef-steak or eggs, and costs much less.

4 Being in biscuit form, it has many more culinary uses than the ordinary breakfast cereal, forming delicious combinations with fruits, creamed vegetables or creamed meats.

5 It is the cleanest, purest cereal food in the world, and is made in the cleanest, finest, most hygienic food factory in this country or in any other country.

Cut this out, commit it to memory, and be "ready" for the next customer who asks you anything about breakfast cereals.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Situation Generally Easy With Outlook for Quiet Summer Business—Price Changes in a Few Lines.

The situation in the flour and cereal markets remains similar to that reported last week. Business in nearly all lines is feeling the effects of the usual summer's dullness and the continued favorable crop reports are tending to force down prices of grains and thus produce an easier feeling in manufactured products.

The local market for Manitoba flour is dead, but a reviving export demand at the lower prices is helping to keep the situation steadier.

In Quebec markets oatmeal prices have varied a little as a result of purely local conditions. In Ontario prices are on the same level as at last week's reports.

Supplies of grain are being brought in in fairly heavy quantities and are plenty large enough for present demand.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Nothing of any importance has taken place in the flour market during the week. The demand has been decidedly dull and there has been no change in prices since last week.

FEED—"Not much demand" seems to be the general opinion in this market. A few orders of the hand-to-mouth variety constituted the week's business. Prices remain the same with the exception of shorts and bran, which are slightly easier.

ROLLED OATS—Fine standard and granulated oatmeal are a little stronger this week, having gone forward 5c a bag. Rolled oats in 90-pound bags is easier at $2.90 minimum; also 80-pound bags, which are quoted at $2.60, instead of $2.75. Barrels have dropped slightly, now being $5.75 minimum, instead of $5.85. The demand during the week has been only fair.

Pennock's grist mill, situated at Milltown, near Belleville, Ont., was burned lately. Loss about $4,000; partially insured.

The Brampton, Ont., Milling Co. have sold their business to George Brett, of Tottenham, who has been engaged in the grain and coal business.

A fire destroyed P. Kyle's sawmill and contents. His flour mill, immediately adjoining, sustained considerable damage from fire and water. The loss is about $5,000.

The Okanagan Flour Mills Co., at Armstrong, which has been in liquidation, ratified an arrangement, made last month, whereby the property and assets of the company were sold to Donald Matheson, Donald Graham, Mark Hill, Thos. Clinton and Geo. Parkinson for the sum of $35,000. The purchasers assume all obligations and agree to discharge the outstanding liabilities of the company, both before and after liquidation.

EASTERN OARSMEN AT ST. CATHARINES.

Several members of the grocery and provision trade from Halifax were in St. Catharines last week, competing in the trials for the Olympic four-oars at the Canadian regatta course.

William Hopgood, junior member of W. J. Hopgood & Son, Halifax, rowed as a member of the Northwest Arms crew. James Turner, provision dealer, was a member of the same crew. Patrick J. Meagher, another Halifax provision dealer, was stroke of the St. Mary's four. While the Halifax crews were outrowed by the Toronto oarsmen, they made a good impression among the oarsmen present.

DON'T BE TOO NECESSARY.

A man's value to a business is not always in proportion to the influence of his personal presence, writes Waldo Pondray Warren. Sometimes the ability to leave a business for a time and have it go on as smoothly as ever is the best test of a man's control over it.

A factory manager was taking an extra hour away from his work one noon, and remarked to a friend, with apparent pride :

"I must be going back, or everything will be at a standstill. I can't leave the shop for two hours without causing a difference in the work. It doesn't take long for things to be going at loose ends unless I am right there to watch them."

This man, trying indirectly to raise himself in his friend's estimation, was really confessing his own weakness, and laying bare his secret misconception of the functions of a manager. The humor of the situation is apparent when we remember that many of the owners and managers of vast business establishments are able to be absent from their offices for weeks and even months at a time.

The good organizer, unless he is limited to very poor material, is usually the man who makes his own personal presence less and less of a necessity to the harmonious working of the system.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Large Importations of Fancy Fruits—Canadian Berries Displacing Pines—Southern Tomatoes Holding Front Rank—Old and New Potatoes Scarce —Fish Lines in Great Variety.

Reports from all over the country indicate that splendid business has been done in all lines. In the larger centres daily car arrivals of fancy imported fruits from California and vegetables from the Southern States are the order of the day, and this fact is passed by without comment, so accustomed have dealers and frequenters of the market become with the sight. All imported fruit has declined in price with the advent of Canadian strawberries, gooseberries and cherries, and especially are these home fruits displacing pineapples. Although there are large quantities of pines to be had, very few are arriving here.

Great quantities of all lines of fruit have been sent to the smaller towns all over Canada in anticipation of holiday sales. Summer oranges and lemons are coming in fairly free and later on may be expected to take the place of lines which have a selling season of but a few weeks. Southern early apples are a new line offering.

Tomatoes still hold the front rank among vegetables. They are quite up to the standard and are now arriving from Tennessee. Potatoes old and new are firming up; the old because of depleted stocks, and the new because the demand is greater than the supply. Canadian greens and early vegetables of good quality are coming on the markets freely and early cabbage in fancy packages are to be seen in various parts of Ontario.

Of fish, both salt and fresh water lines, the demand greatly exceeds the supply. In the east experiments are being made with importations from Europe, and in the west, while fresh lines are being exported to the States, consumers are getting a variety of, to them, new lines of sea fish.

MONTREAL.

FRUITS—Good crated bananas remain around $1.95 and $2.10, for which there is a good demand. Strawberries are quoted at 9c to 10c per basket, and there are a few dealers offering 3 baskets for 25c. Apricots and peaches are lower by 25c this week, now being quoted at $1.75 and $1.50 maximum price. Plums are slightly higher going up 25c per crate. Demand has been good during the week.

FISH—Haddock and halibut continue in good supply, and the prices remain low. Lake fish are scarce, also brook trout. Owing to the warm weather haddies are practically out of the market and other lines are very slow, except smoked herring. There were two fish days this week, so trade was good. Gaspe salmon is 2c cheaper this week.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—All the Toronto fruit commission houses report excellent business. The hot weather of the past week has induced buyers to take larger quantities of all lines of fruit and the coming of the holiday prompted the laying in of bigger stocks. California fancy fruit is coming in freely and some price reductions are noted. Canadian berries are rapidly displacing southern pines. The Cuban season is practically over. The first car of verdilli lemons from California arrived this week and some nice summer oranges and limes are coming in. Canadian cherries of all grades—white and black, eating and sour—are arriving in fair quantities, and so are home-grown gooseberries.

VEGETABLES—The firming up of potato prices is perhaps the feature in the vegetable market. The new potatoes did not at all bring down the price of the old varieties. The dealers who were loaded up a month ago, and who were making as large sales as possible, hoping thereby to deplete their stocks, evidently succeeded, for at the present time stocks are hard to obtain and the supply of new potatoes is not at all as great as anticipated. Home-grown peas, beets, carrots and cucumbers are arriving freely and some Canadian hothouse tomatoes are being shown as well as fair quantities of cabbage from the vicinity of Leamington.

FISH—Unchanged prices prevail and a splendid market exists. Locally, supplies are not at all sufficient to meet the good demand existing, and stocks as they arrive go quickly into the hands of retailers and restaurateurs. Some pretty large samples of sea sturgeon are to be seen on the market, and all fish, large and small, find equally ready sale.

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Information for Grocers and Clerks—How Chewing Gum is Made—Something About Shrimps—Sauterne Wines.

The Manufacture of Gum.

Few persons know what chewing gum is made of. Now and then someone speaks of the horses' hoofs and cows' horns that are by some secret process transformed into a delicious lot of gum. But these are detractors of the popular product. There is no foundation in fact for such tales. The chief ingredient of chewing gum is chicle, a substance procured from the sapodilla tree in Mexico and tropical countries of South America. Chicle is a resin-like sap that oozes from the sapodilla tree when it is tapped as are maples in Canada. It is sent from these tropical lands to the colder climate of Canada to be cleaned and refined. It leaves the factory looking very much like red clay. This is the body of chewing gum. Chicle is absolutely insoluble. No liquid has ever been found that will dissolve it. Alcohol will not affect it, nor will any acid. It might be chewed for 999 years and more and still lose none of its volume.

The manufacture of chewing gum is a very simple process. A quantity of chicle is put in a vat with about an equal quantity of glucose made from corn. This is heated by steam and churned or beaten until thoroughly mixed. Then peppermint, wintergreen, banana, orange, and other flavors are added to give it the desired taste. The whole mass—500 pounds at a time—is steamed and churned by machinery until it begins to harden. It is then placed on working tables, where girls and women shape it into squares. It is then run through rollers, which press it into thin sheets the thickness of cakes sold at retail. These sheets are about six feet long by two feet wide. Another machine cuts the sheets into cakes the size we buy. Wrapping, boxing, and crating are done by hand. Chewing gum never grows smaller from chewing. After a cake of gum has been chewed for awhile the glucose and flavoring work from it. Everyone has noticed that gum is sweetest and best when it is fresh. After it has been chewed for a certain time nothing is left but the chicle and it is harmless. However, there is little or no taste to it. The durability of gum would limit its sale were it not discarded soon after it loses its sweetness and fresh flavor. Then, too, many a treasured "quid" is misplaced. Who could estimate the number of millions of these that are even now sticking to the under side of tables, mantels, chairs, and on the headboards of beds? An ordinary sized factory will produce several tons of gum in a day. Nimble-fingered girls wrap it. And everyone in the factory chews the product. From the mixer down to the smallest girl wrapping the gum in papers the jaws are working.—The Storekeeper.

Shrimps.

The true shrimp is a salt water long-tailed crustacean, about two inches long, of the order decapoda, or ten-footed animals. It is closely related to the prawn, and the latter are, in fact, often sold as shrimps. The shrimp feeds on slugs, worms, and other small objects, and is itself liable to be eaten by other fishes and birds. There are two species, the brown and the red. The brown are the most plentiful, larger, and more highly flavored. They swim near the shore and are termed "buntings;" but the red are considered the most delicate. These carry a sword-like horn in their heads. They are in season all the year, though used most in the summer months, and are always sold ready cooked.

Sauterne Wines.

These are sweet, white wines, produced in the Bordeaux district, and particularly around the village of Sauterne, whence they derive their name. Sauterne Barsac, vin de Grace, Chateau Sudurant, La Tour Blanche, and the noted Chateau d'Yquem, etc., which are from the "Blanches," or dry, white wine districts of France, are all considered Sauternes. They usually contain about 5 per cent. of alcohol. As a rule the white wines of the Bordeaux district are finer flavored and have a more delicate perfume than the red wines, and gradually lose their sweetness with age.

Nickerson & Hart, fruit and produce merchants, Halifax, have been going ahead in good shape lately, as evidenced by the recent alterations and additions to their premises. They have two banana rooms now, which will hold 500 bunches, while they have secured more room for the handling of a greater number of cases of oranges and lemons, and other case goods.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

Concentrate Your Energies

Down through the ages comes this warning:

"Do not talk a little on many subjects, but much on a few."

In some instances you needn't talk at all. Our brands are "a few," but they are inarticulate, and yet "do their own talking."

The only necessary preliminary is the introduction by the grocer to the consumer of each selection by its name, and "the rest is easy."

Natural Gas sold to Manufacturers at Five Cents per 1,000 Cubic Feet is the Cheapest Light, Fuel and Power in Existence To-day.

If you want the truth, ask the other fellow.

A FEW EXTRACTS AS TO WHAT THE OTHER FELLOW SAYS ABOUT MEDICINE HAT

Here it is that Natural Gas has been found in quantities which settles the question as to the future industrial hub of the last West.

CHICAGO CHRONICLE,
July 5th, 1906.

Whatever may be the agricultural future of the country, Medicine Hat is certain to be a manufacturing town of importance.

THEO. M. KNAPPEN,
Special Correspondent
Chicago "Inter-Ocean."

I was particularly struck with the natural advantages about Medicine Hat, where we spent a few days. It would appear that this town is destined to become a city of great importance.

ADMIRAL LORD CHARLES BERESFORD.

Cheap Power is, after all, the greatest gift of Nature to the district.

"CANADA," London, Eng.
Nov. 30th, 1907.

Medicine Hat is perhaps the only city in the world that keeps its lamps lighted day and night, month after month, year after year.

F. A. ACKLAND,
Special Correspondent
Toronto Globe.

This part of the country seems to have all hell for a basement, and the trap door appears to be in Medicine Hat.

RUDYARD KIPLING,
Oct. 13th, 1907.

We are confidently looking forward to the city of Medicine Hat becoming the manufacturing centre of that enormous territory lying between Winnipeg and the Pacific, and Northward from the United States boundary line, and feel that natural gas as a source of power will be a very important feature in the establishment and developing of industrial concerns in this locality.

Isn't It True?

that it's mighty poor business to sell poor quality at any price?

Take Canned Goods for example. You have to trust absolutely to the reputation of the packer. Therefore, it's a shortsighted policy to buy unknown brands of inexperienced packers, when you can obtain the very best brands at a slight advance.

Isn't it very satisfactory to know, that when you buy Canadian Canners' Brands you are guaranteed as to quality?

Isn't it satisfactory to know that you are buying Canadian Canners' Brands at the same price as your neighbor?

If you buy other brands how do you know that your neighbor is not in a position to undersell you with the same brands?

Isn't it satisfactory to know that you buy Canadian Canners' Brands at the same price as the largest Departmental Stores in the country?

Did you ever notice that the Retail Grocers who cater to the best class of trade always handle Canadian Canners' Brands?

Remember the brands!—(Aylmer) "Canada First," "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," (Bowlby) "Horseshoe," (Canadian Canners) "Auto," "Kent," (Simcoe) "Lynnvalley," (Delhi) "Maple Leaf," (Boulter) "Lion." "Thistle," (Lalor) "Grand River," (Lakeport) "White Rose."

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR PROFITS?

DID IT EVER OCCUR TO YOU to think how much money you could make in the course of the year just by pushing the sale of some of the smaller items of your stock?

Take JELLY POWDERS and FLAVORING EXTRACTS for example, goods that never aggregate much money in your stock, but which pay handsome profit in the selling. Try it and see how many packages and bottles you can sell in a day just by suggesting it to the customers in your store. The result will be, ever so much larger profits than can be obtained from the same effort used in selling heavy goods, on which your margin is so light. Particularly so, if you push high-grade lines like "Greig's White Swan Jellies and Flavors." Their quality is such that your patrons want more. Your profit on these is especially attractive. Try a sample lot at our risk and see how they go.

It was a thirty mile trip to town and the instructions of Mrs. Smith to husband John were to get a dollar's worth of Windsor Salt at the grocer's—naturally husband John secured his entire list of groceries at the store that was stocked with "Windsor." He spent twenty-five dollars in that particular store.

The reason why Mrs. Smith was determined to have Windsor Salt was and is plainly evident - its uniform excellence, purity, whiteness and dryness. It pays to sell the salt that helps to sell other goods in the store.

Advertising for the Retail Grocer

Persistency a Very Essential Feature—Reasons for No Results—Salesmanship and Advertising Intimately Related—Price an Important Factor—Criticism of Ads Submitted and Suggestions for Improvement, by W. F. Ralph.

The essence of good advertising is persistency. Spasmodic advertising is all right for a man in a spasmodic business. It would be next to useless for the iceman to advertise his cool commodity in December, which is probably why so many icemen become coalmen in the winter. But for a man in the hardware business, which is essentially an all-the-year-round business, all-the-year-round advertising is the thing that pays.

This is a fact that is fast becoming recognized by the business world. Future generations of merchants—or at least those who go into business with downright seriousness of purpose—will reckon on so much capital as being requisite for advertising as naturally as they will for so much capital to provide fixtures and stock. The small merchant, no less than the great manufacturer, will then set aside his yearly "appropriation" in advance.

In these days, to evince a doubt as to whether advertising pays or not, is to label oneself as a "back number." One has only to look at the leaders of any line of business—yes, and the leaders of private life—to become convinced of the fact that advertising pays as surely as the sun rises and sets.

Persistency Essential.

All kinds of arguments can easily be brought to prove that persistent advertising is essential to success in business; but the greatest of them all is the indisputable fact that the leaders of commerce, the captains of industry, the men in the forefront of the learned professions, and those on the band-wagon of politics, are everlastingly persistent in some one or other of the various methods of advertising.

Non-advertisers are usually found congregated on the bottom rungs of the ladder of success in company with a scattering of men who have got soured through advertising the wrong way.

Among these latter the majority are those who "tried out" advertising, but quit too soon. They lacked the element of persistency without which they might as well have stayed among the hand-to-mouthers of the commercial world and not advertised at all.

Reasons for Failure.

Among the scattering of soured ex-advertisers on the bottom rungs are other kinds than those who lacked in persistence. There is, for instance, the dishonest advertiser; the man who considered that advertising meant bunco. Then there is the man who tried the wrong method or who didn't discriminate between mediums. Again there is the man who bought space in good mediums, but didn't spend any time getting up his "copy."

If you have salable goods, buy space in a newspaper which gets to the consumer and spend a little time in persistently filling that space with sane, seasonable, truthful offerings of good value, your advertising will unfailingly increase your sales.

Advertising and Salesmanship.

Harvey R. Young, during a recent address delivered at the Pacific Coast Advertising Men's Association meeting at Portland, Oregon, said: It must be admitted that in this age of business energy and activity it is absolutely indispensable that the merchant, the manufacturer, the banker, the broker, in short all engaged in industrial pursuits shall by some efficient means be kept constantly before the public eye.

Experience has taught the business world that the most effective and economical way is by advertising in our great daily newspapers and periodicals. I have spent considerable time watching how stores arrange and display merchandise—how advertised sales are conducted and how salespeople receive and wait upon the trade; and some of my experiences lead me to believe that there is much truth in the statement of Manly M. Gilliam, who is quoted as saying, "If all retailers were to give the same slip-shod attention to the advertising that many do to store management and salesmanship, the poor houses of America would be the retiring homes of a great many of them."

The many failures among retailers are, I believe, partly due to the fact that so few really understand the principles upon which a successful business is built. Nathanial Fowler, of national fame, says the five points of trade are as follows:

"1st—Something to sell.

"2nd—A place to sell it.

"3rd—Proper business management and sufficient working capital.

"4th—Good salesmanship, and efficient courteous employes.

"5th—ADVERTISING.

"And the strength of the whole is in the harmony of the parts."

Advertising only brings people into contact with the goods and there its power ends—salesmanship begins.

If the advertising is good, the probability of a sale is begun.

If the reputation of the firm is one of reliability, the shopper advances a step toward the purchasing point.

If the goods are as represented still another advance is made.

The final step in the consummation of the sale is controlled by the salesman, and an incompetent salesman can ruin the work of the highest priced advertising manager in America. In the making of a sale there is almost as much importance in the way a prospective customer is received and treated as there is the goods offered for his selection.

When you enter some stores you are met at the door by a sour-faced, cross-voiced man, who says, "What do you want?" with the rising inflection which makes the question sound as if he meant, "What business have you here?" When you are drawn to such a store by an alluring, coaxing advertisement, and receive such a greeting, at once without buying, you feel like leaving, never to go there again.

There is no doubt but that in a great majority of the stores in this country such conditions exist—yet when the business doesn't pay, the advertising usually and unjustly receives the blame.

Price an Important Factor.

Henry Siegle, of the Siegle-Cooper stores, assures us that out of the ninety million people in the United States the largest majority of them are interested in the price of everything wanted. Price counts and will count as long as money is used.

In a few cases it might be advisable for the salesman to be the first price teller, but as a rule, whether the prospective customer is a poor man, or one in comfortable circumstances, or wealthy, invariably the first question asked of the salesman is, "How much is it?" Then why not advertise the price, place it on the goods in the display window and in the store, and thereby shorten the business transaction?

The Look of Prosperity.

Look and talk prosperity. The store that looks as if it were doing business, is the store that will do business. The one that looks dead and dull can be depended upon to be all that it looks. Never talk discouragingly to a customer.

Montreal, 1st June, 1908.

Canadian Grocer,
Toronto.

Dear Sirs—Acting on your suggestions as contained in a criticism of my style of advertisements, I have made a change and the enclosed is a result of getting copy a day in advance. Minute directions were given the compositor and in my opinion he worked out a neat job. This ad. appeared in "The Montreal Star," the most expensive advertising medium in Montreal, but yet the cheapest in the end.

The advertisement was a pronounced success.

Yours truly,
CO-OPERATIVE GROCERY CO.
293 St. Antoine St.,
(Sgd.) A. Girard, Jr.

Not over sixty days ago I had the proprietor of one of the largest furniture houses in Ohio relate to me that he had a personal lesson that would last him forever. A prosperous farmer and his wife had selected furniture amounting to over five hundred dollars. The proprietor himself, who chanced to be waiting on him, remarked that he was so pleased to make the sale as it was the first large one for some time, and that business was dull and money tight. This started discussion of the financial conditions existing which resulted in the buyer turning to his wife and saying, "Mary, I guess we had better not take these goods to-day."

Some Hints and Criticism.

"All things come to those who wait,
But it's not the thing to do;
Use Southon's goods and you'll find that fate
Will bring success to you."

With this little song C. Southon & Sons, Lakeport, Ont., general merchants head the ad. which is reproduced on this page. Although the assertion and advice contained in the first two lines convey an obvious meaning, in the last two lines the meaning is not so apparent. It is to be presumed, however, that the saving which a buyer will effect in purchasing goods from Southon & Sons, no less than the good humor he will derive from their quality, will enable him to more easily achieve success. But it is not at all likely that the customers of Southon & Sons will go deeply into the matter, rather accepting it as a pleasant enough little rhyme. Having done this it will have served its purpose of attracting the reader's attention.

The constituency of a general store situated in a small hamlet or village differs somewhat from that of retailers situated in a small town or city. Consequently the advertising problem of a general merchant whose store is situated in a very small place and whose customers are almost entirely rural must be faced from a different point of view to that adopted in criticizing the ads. of retailers in larger places.

The ad. referred to has all through it the very desirable element of brightness. The two lines: "Hot weather expected soon, but our straw hats are here now," and "The New Century washer beats them all," are exceedingly brightly put. Yet it seems to us that this neat little ad. lacks force. There is nothing in it to concentrate the buyer's attention in a definite direction. Unless any or all of the priced items given are lower than is ordinarily the case, all the items are of so indefinite and general nature that they fail to bring home to a farmer or his wife any special reason why he should buy any of them. There is no leader which would draw the buyer into the store because of its extra good value and give the proprietors and salesmen the opportunity of improving the occasion by making sales of other lines.

We are not prepared to say that an ad. like this is not a good one; but we will go so far as to say that it could be considerably improved.

For instance, let us take the items of screen doors, window blinds and lace curtains. Let us occupy most of the available space with an offer of these goods in something of a special way, either leaving the other items out altogether or merely mentioning them in a restricted space. At the time the ad peared—some time in May—these goods would be eminently seasonable, the screen doors because of the approach of the fly season, and the window blinds and lace curtains because of the recent termination of house-cleaning. They would, therefore, be likely to attract a number of people whose needs in those directions were more or less pertinent. The special price, together with breezy descriptions of their seasonableness and quality, would sustain the interest of the housekeeper who needed them, and, more than likely, bring them into the store to personally inspect the merits of the goods offered.

Something in the nature of a special offer as that above referred to often has the effect of deciding a housekeeper on a purchase when she is not sure that the old articles won't last out another season. A bargain has its attraction at all times and in all places. Whereas the mere statement of the fact that certain goods are to be had at a certain place contains no argument in favor of a purchase being made now; which, after all, is what a good retail ad. should accomplish in some degree.

A Montreal Ad., Showing Improvement as a Result of The Grocer's Suggestions.

A Gratifying Result.

Some weeks ago, reference was made in these columns to an ad. of the Co-Operative Grocery Co., Montreal. The suggestion was made that the composition of the ad. was somewhat defective owing to the crowded and illegible effect produced because of the great length of some lines of small type. As a remedy it was suggested that a lighter and more attractive effect could be produced by the simple expedient of breaking the small type items into two columns, the headlines being carried right across to lend force.

The suggestions were made use of and the gratifying result is shown in the letter from the company reproduced in connection with this article. The advertisement in question is also reproduced in somewhat reduced form.

SOME JOLLY VISITORS.

United States Advertising Men Playing Golf in Toronto.

The American Golf Association of Advertising Interests has been holding a tourney this week at the links of the Lambton Club, near Toronto, and the members have been a good deal in the public eye during their visit. On Tuesday evening a moonlight excursion was tendered by the Mayor and the corporation on board the Macassa, at which the members showed their jolly spirit. One of the happiest of the members present was E. F. Olmstead, advertising manager of the H. O. Company, of Buffalo. It was a cool night and Mr. Olmstead was a particularly striking character in a crimson silk raincoat of a feminine variety and a merry widow hat.

The association was tendered a luncheon at Scarboro Beach by the Toronto Golf Club on Wednesday evening and are generally enjoying themselves.

DEATH OF CHRISTOPHER MOORE.

Was Prominent Merchant and Citizen of Orillia.

Christopher Moore, for upwards of 40 years a prominent citizen and active business man, in Orillia, passed away on Sunday, July 5, in his 72nd year. Some years ago he established a large general business, which is still carried on by two of his sons. He had been in the Old Country for about a year and returned home six weeks ago. He was taken ill on the way home, and after reaching Orillia was never again able to leave his bed. Mr. Moore had been a town councillor and had otherwise taken a prominent part in public affairs.

A NEW TOBACCO COMPANY.

The Imperial Co. of Canada Absorbs the American and Empire Cos.

Circulars have been distributed to the grocery and tobacco trade in Canada indicating the change in the American Tobacco Co., of Canada and the Empire Tobacco Co., which firms have been absorbed under the name of the Imperial Tobacco Co. of Canada.

The new firm will continue the business along the same lines as laid down by their predecessors and no change in the brands of their tobaccos or in any other way is contemplated.

PROGRAMME MARITIME BOARD OF TRADE

Some of the Good Things to be Enjoyed by Delegates to the Meeting in Halifax, August 16 to 23.

Maritime Board of Trade delegates who attend the annual meeting which assembles at Halifax on August 19th, are promised an interesting week.

On Wednesday morning, the 19th, at 10.30 o'clock, the visitors will have an opportunity to attend the function to be held at the province building to celebrate the 150th year of representative government in this province. In connection with this celebration there will no doubt be a parade of the troops, the firing of a salute, and addresses by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and other prominent men.

On Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock the active business of the convention will begin, and the president will present his report.

On Wednesday evening there will be no meeting, but the delegates will attend a band concert in the Halifax public gardens.

Thursday morning and afternoon will be devoted strictly to business, but in the evening there will be a grand illumination, pyrotechnic display and parade of decorated boats at the northwest arm. This promises to be the greatest night of the week, and if the arrangements are as well carried out as they were at the time of the visit of His Excellency the Governor-General last year, the visitors will see something quite unique in the Maritime Provinces, and perchance in America.

Friday morning will see the closing exercises of the convention and in the afternoon it is proposed to further entertain the visitors with an excursion on the harbor and a business men's picnic at McNab's Island. Those who remain over until Saturday will probably witness a regatta at the northwest arm, and it may be of interest to delegates who think of bringing their wives or daughters to know that the Eudist Fathers will hold a monster bazaar at the Arena rink during every afternoon and evening of the whole week that the Board of Trade meets.

TRADE NOTES.

A. L. Hay, of Hay & Co., Windsor, manufacturers of salad dressings and grocers' specialties, was a caller upon the Toronto jobbing trade this week.

Geo. H. Campbell, manager of the Toronto branch of Red Rose Tea, was in Montreal a few days during the week.

J. F. Eby, of Eby-Blain, Toronto, is luring the bass and the 'lunge from the hidden lairs of Havelock. There must be good fishing around Havelock as Mr. Eby never fails to take a few days off every year to test his skill with the rod.

A disastrous fire which started as the result of an explosion of celluloid, in the large building at 18-24 Sheppard St., Toronto on Wednesday, and caused approximately $60,000 damage, caused serious loss to Jones Bros., show case manufacturers. Their loss on the building was $10,000 with large insurance, and on contents and stock $20,000, with $14,000 insurance.

A NEW ASPECT OF PRICE-CUTTING

How the Public "Smell the Rat" and the Cut Reflects on the Cutter—Written Specially for the Grocer.

"Funny thing happened the other day in one of your western Ontario towns," remarked the fat drummer, meditatively. "Just goes to show that the public are prone now-a-days to smell a rat—often a non-existent rat, too."

That a non-existent rat possessed any smell whatever was an unique suggestion; that the public could and did smell it was an assertion so daring that it drew to the fat drummer an interested audience of half a dozen in the twinkling of an eye.

"There was a grocer down in—well, we'll call the place B—," the fat drummer pursued, after a pause. "He took a yellow streak the other day, as even the best grocers sometimes do, and started in to build up his business by cutting prices. His fellow grocers didn't take kindly to it. A few of them went so far as to remonstrate personally, and point out the folly of his course. It didn't do any good, however; the price-cutter merely rejoined that business was business, and went on cutting.

Started on Biscuits.

"One of the items he selected for the cutting process was a high-class biscuit—a variety that has always sold on its merits at the regular price. Our grocer knocked off three cents a box, and advertised this along with his other cuts, quite extensively.

"I wasn't there to see the finish of the cutting war; but when I dropped off at B— the other day, I found that the biscuits were selling at regular prices once more, and that everything else was back in statu quo. I congratulated my man on his return to common sense—of course, I put it tactfully. He took it all pretty quietly for a while; then he burst forth:

"'Cut it out, old man. Cut it out. I did it because I had to do it.'

A Dire Result.

"'It was just killing my business. You know, for one thing, I started to cut on those biscuits. Lopped off three cents from every box, and advertised it broadcast—a penny saved is a penny earned, and all the rest of it. Advertised it every day for a week, and how many boxes do you think I sold?'

"'A couple of hundred,' I suggested.

"'Eight,' he said. 'Eight boxes in a week, where I used to sell dozens. And then, when I was wondering why the people didn't come with a rush, my wife went to a picnic and accidentally discovered something. A couple of ladies were talking, and one of them chanced to mention my cut in biscuits.

"'Yes,' said the other. 'I guess it's some old stock he's had in his cellar for years, or he wouldn't want to get rid of it so cheap.'"

Another Example.

The drummer's story recalls another one. A young druggist had just taken hold of an old established business, and wanted to draw the crowds. In the stock list were several thousand boxes of a stock herb tonic, put up for the old firm. The young man was prepared to make some sacrifices to draw trade; and the tonic was one of them. It was, as I recall it, a mild, harmless assortment of grandmother's herbs, which, taken with a certain proportion of hot water and a certain other proportion of whiskey, had a tendency to make you fell better, especially if you already felt pretty good.

The young druggist planned his grand coup for the next Saturday, and for days ahead occupied double advertising space in several city dailies with the annoucement that on Saturday he would give away, absolutely free, one regular fifty-cent box of Grandmother's Grand Guaranteed Herb and Root Tonic to every person making a twenty-five cent purchase at the Blue Jay drug store.

"What will we do when the supply runs out," remarked one of his assistants.

"Order more, and tell them to come again next Saturday," rejoined the enterprising merchant.

The announcement was widely advertised—one regular fifty-cent box of Grandmother's Guaranteed with every twenty-five-cent purchase at the Blue Jay drug store next Saturday. Newspaper space was used freely, dodgers were scattered broadcast, card coupons were distributed on the crowded market and left at every door in town. The young merchant waited expectantly for the crowd to come, to carry away the two thousand free boxes of Grandmother's Guaranteed in their joyful possession.

But alas—they didn't.

Saturday came and went. Just two people handed in coupons. Just two free boxes of the grand and glorious tonic passed over the counter.

It was the old, old story, The public scented a rat. When they saw the merchant giving away something for nothing, they immediately commenced to question the quality of the something. The verdict was "Guilty." That young man shut down on price-cutting right then and there, and proceeded to run his business on legitimate lines. He doubled it in two years by "quality advertising." As for the tonic—well, it was a dead issue.

Drawing a Conclusion.

The moral of all this stands right out on the face of things. I have witnessed the incident, time and again, the same in all its salient forms. I have heard dozens of housewives pass judgment in precisely the same words. A decade and more of scientific advertising, skilfully planned has educated a multitude of people into the firm belief that quality is an essential, that the cheapest is not always the best, but that, on the contrary, the best is always the cheapest. The fake bargain has ceased to deceive; and furthermore, the real bargain has fortunately come to share its opprobrium. Cry "Bargain" from the housetops, and a multitude of people will hear you say "Bluff," and, like the priest and the Levite, will pass by on the other side. The public grows daily more and more suspicious of mere cheapness, and scents behind it the cellar mildew and the gnawing rat—even if the mildew and the rat are mere products of the imagination.—Lauriston, of Ekildna.

HAMILTON CORRESPONDENCE.

Hamilton, July 6.—The trade in this city has brightened up considerably in the last two weeks and everybody hopes now that the worst of the hard times are over.

The fruit season has opened favorably. Strawberries are very nearly done. The price this year has been low and consumers have snapped them up freely for preserving. Sugar and glass jars have figured largely on the grocery orders, and most grocers have made a fair profit on these goods. Cherries and raspberries are now coming in, and as there are bumper crops of both, the prices are low enough to please almost any one. The butter market has ruled very firm and high during the past week, the present price being 4c per pound higher than a week ago. The extreme price of 25c for June butter is caused, mostly by the large number of farmers who now either sell their milk or send it to the cheese factories. The present outlook is that we will see 30c butter by the 1st of August. Eggs are also advancing, new laid now bringing 25c a dozen over the grocery counter.

Grocers generally were highly pleased at the full report given by The Canadian Grocer of the Retail Merchants' convention at Galt, and regret is expressed that there is not more interest taken in association matters in this city. No doubt Adam Ballantine, the newly-elected Vice-President, will make an effort to stir things up—as he is a man of excellent executive ability, and is able to spare a good deal of time. The association looks to him to make things boom here.

The regular monthly meeting of the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association was held in the Board of Trade rooms on Thursday evening, July 2. After the regular business picnic matters were discussed. Everything is now in readiness for the big excursion to Niagara Falls on July 15. The Refreshment Committee reports, besides all the hot tea and coffee and ice cold milk, 200 gallons of ice cold lemonade will be given free. The Amusement Committee reports that, besides the Thirteenth Regiment Band, Italian Trio, Darktown Quartette, the Secretary is in communication with the Bridge Jumper, and trying to make arrangements to have him kill himself during the day. The list of games is greater than ever. On the American side that day one of the greatest parades Niagara Falls has ever witnessed will take place—5,000 members in uniform of the I.O.O.F.—a sight of a lifetime. Hamilton's uniform rank will compete for the $100 prize. The Masonic Grand Lodge also meets on the Canadian side on July 15.

Frank Sloan, of John Sloan Co. Toronto, returned on Saturday from his trip to Great Britain and the continent.

The Story of a Successful Montreal Salesman—The Work of the City Salesman With Some Hints on Methods.

A quiet, unassuming man, the friend of hundreds of grocers throughout eastern Canada, Leslie R. Buzzell has been going the rounds for Mathewson's Sons to their entire satisfaction for twenty-one years.

That kind of a traveler one sees exemplified in the "old guard"—a man who possesses the implicit confidence of his employers and of his customers, it is not surprising that Mr. Buzzell should be known so favorably to such a large number of grocers and general storekeepers in the district he covers.

He is a Quebec boy, having been born in Abbotsford, near Farnham, and he is to-day in the early forties, in the prime of his manhood.

When he first began traveling for Mathewson's Sons, then J. A. Mathewson & Co., he covered what is known among the travelers as "the French country," the district in which Sorel and other small French-Canadian towns are located.

For many years past he has been traveling between Montreal and Toronto, and calling upon the trade in the chief towns and villages in the Ottawa Valley, up toward Pembroke, especially. In these fields he is known probably as well as any commercial man on the road to-day. Being absolutely straight and square, and having some regard for his customers other than the mere desire to sell them a bill of goods every time he sees them, he has succeeded in making most of the business men with whom he has dealings his personal friends.

The Buzzell family have not been strangers to the "grip," his father before him and other members of the family having had the same fever as that which attracted Leslie R. to the fascinating occupation. And the family has always kept up a connection with groceries, even to-day being known in retail realms in Quebec—two of his brothers conducting a general store in Cowansville, under the style of Buzzell Bros.

Mr. Buzzell is an all-round man, and he can sell anything from peanuts to molasses in hogsheads—provided he knows the article is up to the standard, but he is a crackerjack on selling Japan teas. He has made a particular study of them and knows pretty near all there is to be learned about them up to the present day, but he says he is still finding out new features and good points about Japans.

He is the senior man on the traveling staff of Mathewson's Sons, and, needless to say, he is an ardent supporter of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association.

As for recreation—well, he knows a whole lot about baseball and during the season, when he is in a town possessing any kind of a team he will usually be found on a Saturday afternoon at the baseball park, oblivious to everything but the man at the bat. He follows hockey closely, too.

THE CITY SALESMAN'S WORK.

The daily commercial life of a large city is exceedingly well systematized.

LESLIE R. BUZZELL.

One evidence of this is the increasing number of city salesmen who help swell the enormous patronage of the large jobbing houses, and indirectly keep the wheels of factories humming. These city salesmen carry to the city retailers the same message of progress as the traveling salesmen convey to the dealers in the smaller cities and country towns.

City salesmen are an important part of the every-day commercial activity. The majority are not mere order-takers, for if their services were entirely dispensed with the city sales would heavily decline in volume. On the contrary, city salesmen stimulate the consumption of goods by showing retailers how to increase their sales. With the introduction of some new specialty, city salesmen very frequently act as demonstrators, and at the same time instruct the clerks in the store how to sell the article. At other times, city salesmen are saying the encouraging word just at the time when the retailers may feel a little despondent. When settlements are slow, it is the city salesman who speaks a good word to the credit department for the delinquent customer. It is the city salesman who sympathizes with the retailer when in trouble and congratulates him when good fortune has beamed on him. It is also the city salesman who tells the retailer of choice locations and drops a suggestion now and then whereby the goods may be more attractively displayed or a saving made in operating expense.

In turn, what does the city salesman receive for his well-intentioned work? Too often he is made to wait unnecessarily by the retailers; too often he is avoided, and many times discourteously treated. Yet with all the slights and indifferences he bravely continues at his mission of good-will and service.

That word service is the keynote of success for city salesmen. Service may not at all times be appreciated, but in the long run it will be rewarded with orders—and orders delight the hearts of salesmen. Usually, the greater the measure of service a city salesman gives the greater will be his total of orders. So city salesmen should acquire the habit of service. Where competition is keen, the accommodating salesman will get the largest share of orders, and order-takers will only get them as they stumble over them by accident.

City salesmen, as a rule, average a large number of calls, but the proportion of orders taken as compared with the number of calls made, is small. To thoroughly cover a city territory demands a perfected system. The habit of calling on retailers who buy regularly and omit the other dealers who seldom have an order, is a common fault. It is sometimes called the revolving habit. The salesman moves along the line of the least resistance, and where he knows that he will receive a welcome. Some salesmen in the morning will reason thusly: "Jones will probably have an order for me, so I will see him first. Smith—well, I ought to call on him, but he is so slow and seldom orders, so I will pass him by to another day." So a city salesman without a system to govern his calls is a good deal like a ship at sea without a rudder. He roams aimlessly around, missing here and there possibilities for development of additional business. It is customary to allot each city salesman a certain territory or district. It may be advantageous in some districts to take a block at a time, calling on all the dealers in one block, before going to the next; in others, to go down one side of the street and return on the opposite side. Large or small, all buyers of a line should be visited.

Of course, it pays best to cultivate the acquaintance of the big buyers, and this may be done without slighting the small dealers. Time spent with the small buyers may be limited, so that much longer time may be devoted to the interests of the big concerns. The small buyer may soon become the big purchaser, and for the reason of possible future trade should not be neglected. I have known small retailers who, suddenly inheriting money, to branch out on a large scale, and naturally gave preference to the salesman with whom they were best acquainted. Small dealers very often sell their business, and join into partnership in larger enterprises. Small buyers also have a way of gossiping freely about trade matters, more so than decisive, big buyers, and very productive pointers of new concerns starting in business are obtained while calling in the small shops. On the very day a city salesman decides to omit calling on the out-of-the-way small dealer an order may be waiting for him, only to be taken by a competitor who happens to call before the next regular round. It pays to cultivate the small trade and grow with it, but not at the expense of sacrificing the large and more profitable business.—W. W. Hiscox in the Sample Case.

NEW BREAD REGULATIONS IN FORCE.

Ontario Bakers Must Provide "Standard" Loaf of Pound and a Half.

The new regulations passed at the last session of the Ontario Legislature to provide a loaf of standard weight, came into effect on July 1 and some interest has been manifested throughout the province as to how the matter will work out.

By the new regulations the bakers must supply a "standard" or pound and a half loaf. Three weights of loaves may be sold, namely pound, pound and a quarter, and pound and a half, the latter the standard. The two lighter loaves must be marked with the weight but this is not called for with the standard loaf. The act will not materially affect the bakers as the price of the three styles of bread is the same, the difference in weight being balanced by the kind of ingredients. The bakers say that the pound loaf and the standard are equally palatable, but the former is more nutritious on account of the sugar and shortening used in it, and for this reason it is not likely that the standard loaf will have a very heavy sale, for people have grown accustomed to a smaller loaf, instead of the big plain loaf of bygone days.

Bakers at several points in the province claim that they have not as yet received any official notification of the change, although inspection is being carried on.

Park & Thompson, wholesale and retail pork and provision merchants in the east wing of St. Lawrence market, Toronto, are renovating the premises to the west of the main entrance to the market preparatory to opening with a full line of groceries. The provision business will be conducted as usual in the old store.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR FRUIT CROP

Summary of Monthly Bulletin From Agricultural Department—Conditions Altogether Not so Encouraging as Last Month, But Prospects Are Very Fair.

The summary of the Agricultural Department's Fruit Crop Report for June, which has just come to hand, cites prospects scarcely so favorable as a month ago. While the outlook is encouraging, and in some fruits away above the average, the general promise this month seems to be somewhat behind the magnificent fruit crops we have been led to expect by reports from various sources.

Favorable Weather Conditions.

Regarding weather conditions, the summary says: "Conditions throughout the Dominion for the past month have been generally favorable for fruit. The first three weeks were exceptionally dry in the fruit districts of Ontario, but occasional showers after the 20th have prevented serious injury, except that the samples of strawberries in some cases are not so large as usual. Light frosts on the 15th did only a very slight damage. Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island have had exceptionally favorable weather. In British Columbia though the weather was cool and wet till the early part of June, conditions were not seriously affected. During the latter part of the month the temperature has been higher with occasional showers."

A Fair Crop of Apples.

The report on apples is not exceedingly favorable; "Prospects are not so good this month as last. The "set" of fruit was not as good as was expected, and the dry weather has probably increased the June "drop." A fair estimate of the present conditions would be an average or slightly above the average crop of early and fall apples, with winter apples somewhat below a medium crop. The districts producing the larger quantity of fruit in Ontario, such as the counties of Hastings, Durham and Northumberland, have rather a light crop of winter apples. Speaking generally for the whole apple belt, Spies, Baldwins and Kings will be light or very light; Russets a medium crop; Ben Davis nearly a full crop; Greenings a medium crop; the Fameuse above the average almost everywhere, and at least an average crop of fairly clean, good-sized fruit in the Ottawa and St. Lawrence valleys. In Nova Scotia the prospects for the apple crop as a whole are particularly good, this being a bearing year for the Gravenstein. There are no unfavorable conditions in British Columbia, the prospects showing a medium crop."

Pears, Plums and Peaches.

"The prospects for pears and plums are only medium," says the report. "Bartletts and Kieffers have the best showing. Early varieties of peaches will be fairly abundant, somewhat above the average; late varieties a medium crop. In the early varieties, Alexander, Early Rivers and Triumph are reported bearing full crops. Of the latter varieties, St. John will be only a medium crop, the Early Crawford light, Smocks and Elbertas show for something over a medium crop. The Elbertas are bearing heavily where they were sprayed for curl leaf; those not sprayed have in many cases a very light crop.

"The prospects for tomatoes are excellent. Should there be plenty of moisture during July, there seems nothing in the way of a full crop this year.

"Sweet cherries will be somewhat scarce, sour cherries more plentiful. Grapes look well and promise a full crop.

"With a moderate amount of rain, small fruits will likely give a large crop. The conditions are so favorable over all the fruit producing sections that the aggregate of the crop will likely be very large."

"Insects are not more prevalent than at this time last year and fungous diseases are not specially in evidence. Up to the present time most injury has been done by the cigar case bearer, the bud moth, canker worm, green fruit worm and oyster shell bark louse."

Foreign Conditions.

"The United States will have only an average crop, but very generally distributed over the apple growing districts. The prospects for stock suitable for marketing during the winter months would indicate about an average crop or somewhat less. The prospects for apples in Great Britain and for the fruit crop generally are particularly good and there are no serious adverse conditions reported from the continent."

COFFEE-GROWING IN QUEENSLAND.

British traders will soon be able to inspect and test coffee grown in the Colony of Queensland, says the Grocers' Journal. At Pialba, in the Maryborough district of Queensland, a successful grower was requested by the Government to prepare an exhibit for the Franco-British exhibition in London, and attractive samples of Queensland coffee from its parchment condition to its roasted and ground state are being displayed there. There is no dispute about the excellence of the coffee grown in Queensland, and the industry will soon be developed sufficiently to supply all Australia, and an export trade be created. The labor question is not an insurmountable difficulty. It is mainly in the picking season that extra hands are required, and these are generally obtained by employing youths from adjoining townships, or, as in the case of the extreme north, Halays and the native blacks are frequently employed. The work of hulling, curing, and roasting is principally done by machinery, and for this white labor is employed. A small plantation that can be worked mainly by the owner and his family, or a group of small plantations combined, generally ensure the most profit. A well-worked plantation may bring in over £30 to the acre. At Mount Jukes, about 25 miles from Mackay, an ideal spot for coffee-growing, the plantations there are reported to be in a most flourishing condition, and the crop may average over 1,000 lbs. to the acre.

DIRECT LINE TO FRANCE.

Business men in Canada and France are awaiting with interest the decision of the French Government in the matter of the Franco-Canadian treaty now before them. If the treaty is passed in its present, or a slightly modified form, there is the almost assured prospect of a new line of steamers between Canada and France, connecting Marseilles and Montreal. At the present time Canada and France are connected by a service to Havre from Montreal. This is not considered by business men, of Marseilles particularly, as being sufficient, as the service, while fortnightly, and at times during the season, weekly, is not direct, boats calling only on the way to and from London.

When in Marseilles in March G. W. Stephens, chairman of the harbor commissioners of Montreal, conferred with the business men of that French city on the matter and found them most enthusiastic. All of them were willing and eager to further the project, and the matter was thoroughly discussed. Nothing definite was arrived at, however, as the interested parties felt that it would not be policy to decide upon anything until the Government had given its ruling upon the treaty.

But it seems to be an assured fact that the project will be carried out if the treaty gets through.

Such a service would be of untold benefit to both countries. That it would pay there seems to be no doubt whatever, with trade increasing between Canada and France annually. The field is a broad one and the possibilities are unlimited, as the projectors would not be obliged to confine their efforts to Marseilles or France alone, but might tap all central Europe. It would open up a splendid new field, A few years ago the Canadian Grocer advocated such a service.

Canadians have not yet fully realized the possibilities for trade development that lie in Europe. It is the establishment of a direct line of steamers to a port like Marseilles which would bring home to them the fact that manufacturers here can profitably cultivate not alone France, Italy and Spain, but also Switzerland, Austria and other inland countries not presently very much to the fore, but which would be brought into touch with Canada by the establishment of a direct line to the Dominion from a live port like Marseilles.

There is not a business man who has the interests of his country at heart but who recognizes the advantages to be derived from a direct service to Marseilles, but the lack of united effort for the starting of the project has kept the matter from coming to a head.

Now is the time, and here is the opportunity, to do something. With interested parties at both ends working intelligently for the establishment of a service something can be done, provided the treaty is settled satisfactorily, but there must be united and energetic action.

Everything possible will be done by the Montreal harbor commissioners to further the project, and if under the guidance of such a resourceful and hard-working leader as Chairman Stephens, nothing can be accomplished, it is surprising indeed.

ARE YOU DOING YOUR SHARE?

The picnic season is here with a vengeance and the opportunity for a day's outing and a trip to some other town or to a watering place is being taken advantage of by associations and trade organizations of all kinds all over Canada. Already a large number of grocers' associations have held their annual outing, and next week with the host of picnics arranged, as noted on another page, promises to see thousands of grocers enjoying themselves.

And this is only as it should be. The picnic or excursion of the trade organization is a mighty valuable institution, even if it only happens once a year and lasts only one day. It promotes not only the spirit of good fellowship, but it also gets the members of the trade in a town better acquainted. The merchant who has been hearing stories about the crooked things his opposition around the corner has been doing during the year, and has been letting them sink in, gets acquainted again with this brother in the trade, and usually finds him a better fellow than he thought. Often they compare notes and find that it is an unscrupulous customer who has been carrying the stories and that neither merchant is at fault.

The trade picnic, too, allows a merchant to get acquainted with the wives and families of his fellow tradesmen in a way that he could not do even through association meetings. In another way too, it is of benefit, by taking the business man away from his town to new scenes and making him forget, for the time, at least, his business worries. There are many other beneficial features.

When these picnics are over, however, there is in almost every case the feeling on the part of two or three who shouldered the responsibility and did most of the work that they do not want to undertake such an affair again. It is a very common thing to let all the work of such an outing rest on the hands of two or three active spirits who are known to be of a character to see the thing through. And it is rather disheartening to these pushers, we may call them, not only to carry the big load of the work, but worse than that, see several members of the association who take no interest whatever in the affair, even refusing to enjoy the excursion or outing.

Such ought not to be. If a trade organization is worth while belonging to it is worth while supporting and worth while being loyal to. Every business man interested should support the picnic or excursion that has been arranged in his town.

What does it matter if the store is closed for a day? In all probability the majority of your customers are off with the excursionists. They would think a good deal more of you, anyway, even if they were put to a little inconvenience if they knew you were off on your trade excursion. It will pay over a hundred per cent. profit indirectly not only for the local merchant to take part in local trade enterprises but also to do his whole duty toward them.

ARE YOU GETTING RESULTS?

The manager of a large retail store in Montreal some weeks ago sent in a couple of the ads that had appeared over the firm's name in the local papers for criticism in connection with The Grocer's Good Advertising Department. The ads were given due attention and the criticism made in these pages was taken advantage of by the manager in preparing his next advertising.

A letter on another page of this issue is an evidence of the satisfactory result—as is also the first-class ad reproduced along with the letter.

We are aiming to make this department of particular service to grocers in all parts of Canada. We have been trying to tell why to advertise, how to advertise and how to make more money by advertising. A great aid in doing this is to receive ads from which we may make hints and suggestions. If your advertising is not bringing the results you think it ought to, write us about it and let us try to find out what is the matter. VISIT OTHER DISTRICTS.

The holiday season provides an opportunity for the merchant and business man to get away from the worries of business, to pick up new ideas and to get acquainted with sections of the country which he does not already know. These are opportunities which should not be let slip. A busy man may think he cannot spare the time for a holiday, even for a couple of weeks, but in so doing he makes a serious mistake. The old story about "Jack" and the results of "all work, etc.," apply just as well to the modern business man. A holiday, when it has been well earned, always pays for itself.

In taking a holiday trip, nothing will pay so well as visiting other sections of the country where new ideas may be picked up, new friends made, and a general knowledge of conditions prevailing there gained. Ontaio merchants, for instance, should attempt to take a trip to the Maritime Provinces, where the sea breezes and the natural beauties will offer added attractions to those found in different business conditions, or to Western Canada, where an idea may be gained as in no other way of the development and resources of Canada's new country. The Eastern man, in turn, should visit Ontario and the West, and the Western man come East to get acquainted with conditions existent here.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Winnipeg Correspondent.

The end of June special crop reports are to hand and are even more favorable than anticipated. There has been no damage to barley or oats from the light June frosts, and only in the most isolated cases has there been too much rain. A hot July, with a good stiff breeze, and there will be considerable wheat-cutting the first week in August, as the end of this week finds an excellent percentage in the shot blade, and considerable areas in southern Manitoba headed, while large areas of early barley are in head. By the last day of June practically all the early barley will be headed. It is, of course, possible for the crop to be ruined even now, but every passing day renders the possibility more remote.

The markets are interesting just now, particularly the oat situation, the crop of which has apparently been shifted from July 1st to 15th, and for the last days of June buyers were forced to pay a premium of 1c over the price of No. 2 oats for rejected. The man with all the oats claims that he had demand for them and was shipping them to Montreal at 46c, which is 44c afloat Fort William. Certain heavy shipments of oats have been made to the port of Montreal recently. Big exporting houses, on the other hand, claim that the highest bids they can get are 35c and 36c afloat Montreal, and between the two statements there is a great gulf fixed, and only time and the demand can settle the vexed question.

There continues to be an excellent demand for Winnipeg October wheat, and the price holds very well. There are breaks, of course, from time to time, and exporters will only buy on a pretty good margin, but there has been more trading in October wheat in June, 1908, than there has been any June for many years.

The argument at Ottawa as to whether or not Hon. Mr. Fielding's coming to the rescue of the banks did or did not help the crop movement is one of those things of which public men ought to be ashamed. It is quite true there was no startling advance in prices immediately the announcement was made of more funds available, for the very simple reason that there had been a very serious break about that time in the American market, and nothing that could have been done could have kept the Winnipeg market without some slight break, but the real thing was that from the very day after the announcement that additional funds would be available there was an increased activity in low-grade wheats. The movement of the low grades was the big crux of the situation so far as the Canadian west was concerned, and up to that time stocks had increased at Fort William abnormally for the season. No boats were being chartered and shipments were away below those of the same period in 1906. Following this announcement came an immediate increase in activity and a greater demand for low-grade wheat. It must be remembered that all along the banks maintained stoutly they did not need more money to move the crop, that they were furnishing all that was necessary; while the grain men just as stoutly maintained that their lines of credit had been cut to such a point that with the very high prices of wheat it was impossible to do business in any large way. To back up their argument was the undeniable fact that the wheat was not moving and that within a few days of Hon. Mr. Fielding's announcement, if you asked a grain man as to the financial stringency he would say, "Oh, things are loosening up a little, my banker does not need any more money, you know, but," (with a knowing wink) "he remembers where I live and sends for me now." After going over the situation carefully it looks to your correspondent as if the Fielding action saved the country at least a million dollars on the crop, and had the banks admitted their need, when they should have done it, would have been a saving of over $1,500,000.

The movement of live stock is becoming increasingly active and the quality of cattle going forward quite remarkable for size and finish. The Creswell Cattle Co., from south of Medicine Hat, sold 2,000 head to Gordon, Ironside & Fares at better than 4½c Waldeck Station, and these cattle averaged 1,350, weighed off cars Winnipeg, and were just as smooth as silk.—H.

CONSUMING PRODUCTS AT HOME.

J. A. Ruddick, Dominion Dairy Commissioner, gave evidence before the Committee on Agriculture on Wednesday regarding the progress made by the dairying industry of the Dominion. He explained that the reduction in exports of dairy produce was attributable to the largely increased home consumption. Mr. Ruddick gave figures furnished by the census department to show that between 1900 and 1907 the value of creamery butter, cheese, milk and condensed milk produced in Canada grew from $29,200,000 to $35,450,000. The annual value to the country of all Canadian dairy products was about $94,000,000. Ten years ago there was no condensed milk produced in Canada; now there are several factories with an output valued at nearly one million dollars.

SUDBURY SENDS GREETINGS.

The interest Sudbury merchants are taking in the opening of the new C.N.O. line from Toronto to that town, and incidentally their interest in the MacLean papers, is shown by the following telegram received on the eve of the opening of the new line:

"Col. J. B. MacLean,

MacLean Newspapers, Toronto:

"Sudbury merchants are to-night celebrating the opening of the Canadian Northern Railway from Toronto to Sudbury and congratulate McKenzie & Mann on the building of their competitive line, bringing these two cities closer together. The Board of Trade sends greetings to the readers of your paper.

JAS. PURVIS,
Pres. Board of Trade."

Quebec and Eastern Province Notes.

Montreal Retailers Preparing for Picnic on July 15—Halifax Grocer Retires After 54 Years of Business—Notes of the St. John Fish Market.

MONTREAL.

July 6.—The week has been a good one for the grocery trade. During the spring the trade has displayed some features which are not characteristic in regard to the unseasonableness of certain demands and on the other hand there has been activity in some quarters which could not be said to be seasonable. Whether these changes of the market and the demand have been the result of the generally unstable condition of business affairs or not it is difficult to say.

Irving Knight, for many years of the firm of Parker & Knight, East Hatley, Que., is staying in the city for a couple of months, attending to varied business engagements. Mr. Knight, who owns an extensive cattle ranch in the west, is very optimistic regarding the outlook in the west, where a magnificent crop seems to be assured.

In cities especially, and in the country in a certain measure, grocery stores are congested owing to a lack of room and all inventions which will provide more room are eagerly sought for. A grocer in this city has an idea in his store which saves some shelf room, or rather gives him additional shelf room, and that is a complete elimination of the standards or partitions which support one shelf above the other. This is accomplished by means of brackets, which support each shelf independently of the other and in this way goods may be arranged along a shelf of this description in an unbroken line.

The last meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association previous to their picnic, was held Monday evening in their headquarters on St. Catherine St. The final arrangements for the picnic on July 15 were made and now everything is in readiness for a good time.

HALIFAX.

July 6.—Activity prevails in the grocery markets, business being reported good in all lines. Stocks of canned goods are getting pretty well cleaned up, but there is still sufficient on hand to fill all orders. Now that the preserving season is near at hand the demand for sugar is increasing. Some of the jobbers have been looking for a drop in the price, but thus far there is no indication of such.

Butter is in good supply, but the price keeps up. Good dairy in small tubs is quoted at 22c, and creamery from 24c to 26c. There is a fair demand for eggs. The receipts of Nova Scotia stock are rather light. They are quoted at 17c. Prince Edward Island stock can be bought on the island for 15c.

The receipts of strawberries last week were quite heavy, and as a result the price dropped to 10c per box. As many as 100 crates arrived in one day. Local dealers are making large imports of tomatoes, cukes and cabbages from Boston.

Principal Cumming of the Agricultural College at Truro, has just returned from a tour of the province, and speaks glowingly of the crop outlook. The fields were never in better condition, and the farmers are jubilant over the prospects. Clover is in abundance, and as a result live stock of all kinds are thriving unusually well, and dairy cows are giving a record flow of milk. Butter and cheese will be more abundantly produced than for some years. Potatoes have started unusually well, and turnips and mangles and other hoed crops also give excellent promise. As to fruit, the outlook, except in local areas, where the canker worm has been making ravages on the apple trees, is more promising than for many a year. The canker worm has, however, over-run some of the best orchards in Wolfville and almost completely stripped many of the best trees.

Strawberries will be a record crop and all small fruits will be unusually abundant. Wild strawberries, raspberries and gooseberries will also be very plentiful.

The steamer Manchester Shipper which arrived at Charlottetown, P.E.I., this week, is landing 16,000 bags of salt for merchants of that city.

After being 54 years in the grocery business, Robert Urquhart has retired for a well-earned rest. Mr. Urquhart is probably the veteran groceryman of this city. Starting in a small way on Spring Garden Road, he built up a fine trade, enlarged the premises many years ago, and was very successful. Owing to his advanced age, and the recent death of his son, Alexander, who was associated with him in business, Mr. Urquhart has retired from behind the counter and disposed of his stock last week at public auction.

FAT AND PROSPEROUS.

The following paragraph, which appeared in a recent issue of the Maritime Merchant, shows how one of our Canadian contemporaries regards us:

"The Special Export Number of the Canadian Grocer came to hand as fat, as prosperous and full of good things as in previous years. This special edition has a large circulation abroad, and should be most helpful to the Canadian exporter and producer who is looking for a larger measure of foreign trade."

ST. JOHN.

July 6.—Business continues fairly good for the time of year. There were practically no changes in the local markets during the past week.

Strawberries are coming in quite plentifully and are selling at 10 cents a box wholesale. Butter is a little easier and eggs have also gone down a few cents. New vegetables are beginning to come in in small quantities.

The lobster and gaspereaux fishing season closed on June 30. The catch made during the open season was only fair and hardly up to the average. Arrangements have been made with the Department of Marine and Fisheries for extending the clam fishing season, which under ordinary circumstances, closes on July 1 to July 15. The Department of Marine and Fisheries has agreed to appoint a commission to investigate the conditions which surround that important industry and it is possible that the season may open earlier in the fall. North shore fishermen are greatly pleased over the extension in time granted

Salmon has been rather scarce this season. The bay fishermen are not making very big catches. The retail prices are 17c, 22c and 25c a pound, according to the cut. A. S. Swim, fish dealer, Clark's Harbor, says the local catch of codfish this June is five times what it was last June. On Friday, June 26, the fishing fleet there came in with 100,000 pounds, the fruits of a few hours' fishing.

The incorporation meeting of the stockholders in H. W. DeForest & Co., wholesale tea merchants, was held in the offices of the company, Mill Street, June 25, for the purpose of electing directors. The following were elected:—Harry W. DeForest, president; Charles H. Howell, vice-president; Noel F. Sheridon, secretary-treasurer; George McKean and Harold Stetson. The capital of the company is $99,000. It is understood there are about seventeen stockholders

Charles Moffett, general merchant, at McAdam Junction, has assigned to a St. Stephen barrister.

Fire at Campbellton, June 29, did about $2,000 damage to the stocks of A. G. Adams & Co., and A. Marcus' general stores on Water Street. The stores are in the same building. There was $11,000 insurance on Adams' stock and $2,000 on Marcus' stock. The building was also covered by insurance.

There was a drop in flour one day last week when a street car and one of Hall & Fairweather's big teams collided. The wagon was loaded with barrels of flour and for a time it looked like a snowstorm with the bursting barrels. The wagon was badly smashed.

GEORGETOWN, P.E.I.

July 2.—Business during the past week has shown a marked improvement. Collections, however, are only fair. Now is the time to make a strenuous effort to square up all outstanding accounts.

The demand, owing to the excessive heat, for soda water and fruit, has been exceptional. Grocers report splendid sales of chocolates and high class confectionery.

In the cities they report smaller sales and less business in the summer; here it is the reverse. Our best season is the good old summer time.

A. Maclean & Co. have adopted the cash system. The opening paragraph of their announcement reads: "After careful consideration of the possible results, we have decided to conduct our business on a strictly cash basis on and after July 2nd—absolutely no exception to this rule." This is the first experiment here and the result will be watched with interest.

Mexican Salt for British Columbia—Burglars in Vancouver Grocery—Markets Kept Brisk With Summer Business.

VANCOUVER.

July 4.—No prominent feature marks the local market. This week we have the first real summer weather, and the warm wave will precipitate the end of the strawberry crop, and bring on the raspberries. Three weeks ago, it got nicely warm, but since then it has been cool, until now it is the good old summer time. The effect of the cool weather has been to allow berries, cherries and such like to attain a fullness, and with plenty of sun now they will have everything that goes to make good fruit. All crops are of the best, and it looks as if this will be a banner year in the industry. Maxwell Smith, Dominion fruit inspector, is now on a trip in the interior, and will return with a statement as to how the various crops are in the different localities. With a bountiful yield and a largely increased acreage, there should be a good supply for the market.

Increasing interest is being taken in the Vancouver market, and the promoters are very much encouraged. Applications for stalls are more numerous, and what is better, there is a fine attendance of buyers. Last Saturday, all the supplies were sold out, and if the demand continues as strong the market will be a big success. It will put the farmer and the consumer in close touch, and will give the former a market which he has not heretofore possessed. With the great improvement in suburban transportation, electric lines running to all parts and small steamers in operation, the growers are able to reach Vancouver at a minimum of cost. By bringing their produce to market, they are not so completely at the mercy of the buyer who goes around the country, and, moreover, much stuff will find a ready sale that has heretofore not been bothered about. Vancouver merchants also expect results in that ranchers coming to the city with produce and receiving money therefor will spend here before returning. In fact, one of the earliest promoters of the market, six or seven years ago, when there was little substantial support, was Charles Woodward, whose store has since grown to very large proportions, and who has not been able to attend to his project of late because of the demands on his time by business. He and others have always recognized the benefit that would accrue from a market, and it looks now as if their hopes were about to be realized.

Thomas Cunningham, provincial inspector of fruit pests, has returned from Agassiz, where he went to see what could be done to prevent the ravages of the flea beetle that is doing such damage to the hops. He declares that this insect is the most difficult pest to exterminate or even check that has made its appearance in British Columbia, and the loss this year will be close on to $50,000. All kinds of mixtures for the destruction of pests have been tried on the flea beetle but without the slightest effect, and it was hoped that some parasitical insect would attack the ravager. Up to the present, however, it has been more destructive than ever, except in the Okanagan valley. The only remedy of any effect is a solution that is most repulsive and the vines and hop poles are covered with it. This has to be brought from Kentucky, and valuable time will be lost before it arrives.

Grocery stores in the outskirts of the city are often easy victims of the burglar, because of their remoteness from the path of the police. W. Y. Blackhall's, in Mount Pleasant, was entered the other night, and though the robbers got the safe open they secured little, as the cash had been banked that afternoon. Experts carried out the job, using nitro-glycerine. It is not often that Vancouver has these people around in the middle of summer, as they generally come in when things slacken up in the fall. That they are on hand now is a sign that dealers in outside places should be careful, as these generally suffer first before attack is made on the larger stores down town.

Nineteen hundred tons of salt are en route to British Columbia from Carmen Island in foreign bottoms, a Kosmos liner bringing 1,000 tons, and the Havila 900 tons. Discharge of cargo will be made at both Victoria and Vancouver, the two main points of distribution.

The Norwegian steamer Tricolor is en route from Cheribon, Java, with a cargo of raw sugar for the B. C. Sugar Refining Company here. This firm obtains its raw material both from Java and the Fiji, a large subsidiary company owning a plantation in the latter islands.

Hamilton Grocers Preparing for Big Excursion on 15th — Ottawa Merchants Closing Early on Saturday—Fruit Jars Scarce in London.

LONDON.

July 6.—Col. A. M. Smith, of A. M. Smith & Co., wholesale grocers, has been confined to his room for some days through illness.

Cyril Hays, secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association, is around on crutches, the result of a second accident this season while playing baseball.

Frank Smythe, who for a few years has conducted on Richmond St. North one of the most attractive grocery stores in the city, has made an assignment to Alfred Robinson.

The strawberry season, which has been very brief this year, owing to the hot weather, is succeeded by raspberries, which on Saturday sold in the market at 15c per box. The last has been seen of pineapples for this year.

Local retail grocers are up in arms over the wholesalers' new cash terms, and will hold a meeting next week and invite the wholesale men to discuss the matter with them. Retailers who are prepared to pay cash feel that the new terms bear particularly hard on them.

Dairy produce keeps scarce and pretty high. Dairy butter retails at 24c to 25c per lb., and creamery a cent above that price. New cheese sells at 12c wholesale and old at 15c. Eggs are also scarce, the ruling price being 19c to 20c.

Retailers complain of a scarcity of fruit jars. The factories closed done on June 1st for the season, manufacturers being content to fill January orders. Since then the price has gone up $1 per gross, and it is difficult to get a supply even at the advance.

The new law regulating the sale of bread, which went into force on the 1st inst., does not appear to have made any difference to local bakers. Some of them interviewed, declared that the standard loaf (1½ lbs.) would have a cheaper grade of flour put into it than the fancy loaf, as many in the trade pay $1 and $1.50 per barrel more for the flour used in the latter than for that used for plain loaves. The price of bread in London now is 4c per pound, which citizens consider is quite enough.

OTTAWA.

July 7.—Last Saturday was the first day in July that the early Saturday closing for the summer months goes into effect in all the firms that close earlier than the law provides. As far as can be learned, only a few firms have this year volunteered for the early-closing on Saturday, but those who closed early last year will continue to do so this season. The civic by-law provides that merchants cannot keep their stores open after nine o'clock on Saturday night. Amongst the grocers who are inaugurating the six o'clock closing on Saturdays, the Bryson, Graham & Co., O'Connor St., and Bate & Co., Sparks St. Nearly all the wholesale grocers close at one o'clock on Saturdays. There is a disposition among some of the business men to close early if an agreement could be come to with the others in their lines of business, but it is not probable that the retail grocers will make any efforts towards early-closing on Saturday, as Saturday is one of the busiest days of the week in the grocery business. A good scheme proposed by one of the business men of this city is to let the clerks work till nine on Saturdays, and let them have a half holiday during the week, one or two clerks getting each afternoon off.

Thomas Reynolds, of The Quaker Oats Company, was in the city during the week calling on the local trade.

Local ice men seem agreed that they will not sell single blocks of ice, even at ten cents apiece. If householders want it they must give a regular supply order. This seems hard and entails some inconvenience and suffering. Many worthy citizens look on ice as a luxurious necessity; they get it when they are compelled. The hot week end particularly is dreaded where the family is large and means are limited. If the poor family gets a cake of ice it is considered by the naughty iceman as a favor. There is room for explanation on the question of the ice supply of Ottawa. A good idea would be for the grocer to take a good supply from the iceman, and sell it at ten cents apiece, clearing a good profit. There is some talk of having a municipal ice supply and delivering the ice free of charge to the poor families, which would certainly be welcomed by the poorer class of this city.

There has been a good demand recently for summer goods owing to the prevailing warm weather. The city trade in fruit and groceries has been active, and collections fair. Country collections continue slow, and orders not more than fair. The yield of butter and cheese, it is stated, will be affected by shortage of cattle.

The market Saturday was one of the best of the season. Everyone was there and everyone wanted to buy something if he could get it at all reasonably; while the prices were not exorbitant. Two prominent features of the offering were onions and radishes. Butter was about the same in price and there was little or no change in eggs at 18 to 20 cents a dozen.

GUELPH.

July 6.—The butter question has been the most interesting of any in Guelph this week in grocery circles. No doubt you are aware the chief of police was fined $6 in the Division Court for illegal seizure of butter under weight, on the Guelph market. The farmers evidently think he is wrong. But not so, he acted under the city by-law, and it ought to be up to the city to pay his fine. There is room for argument on both sides. But to get at the fair way, to my mind, is to use a little common sense. I do not believe that the majority of farmers try to cheat on the weight, nor do I think the chief was trying to take advantage of the farmer. The judge deciding the case found fault with the by-law. If we could all just study human nature enough and not think everybody is a rogue, we would have less of these mixups. We all have our faults. Go easy and use good judgment, and when these mistakes do occur, don't think you are always right. Give the other fellow a chance. Take a look at the question from his standpoint. I know of one farmer who regularly brings in his butter from 2 ozs. to ¼ lb. overweight just to avoid trouble. Now that is not fair to him. There are others that come underweight regularly, but if a record was kept of these cases by the same gentleman who keeps track of our bad accounts and when a man was found to dodge from one store to another and to continue to do this, he should punish him. There would need to be no sympathy for either side.

This is the first full week in July and, sorry to relate, the half-holiday question is still undecided. The clerks have fought a fair honest fight with those merchants who said last winter they could not have it, and they are not through yet. Will you make one more effort? It is you that is needed. Only one more grocer does it. Will you be that one, or if you have already signed the petition, use your influence?

Will some other correspondent give us his opinion on those questions about which the Ingersoll correspondent so kindly wrote this week? Come out with the facts as you see them.

You have all heard of the city girl and the bee, but the busiest lot of bees are already humming "Come home to Guelph the first week in August, Old Home Week." There is something doing. Are you coming?

The market Saturday was all O.K., and business was good. The fruit is the main thing at present and while old potatoes are higher, the new ones are already here so don't worry over the old. Cherries at 90c. a basket were good sellers, while strawberries were a favorite with raspberries a good second.

PETERBORO.

July 7.—The Quaker Oat Company's employes intend holding their annual excursion this year to Cobourg on Saturday, July 11. The committee in charge expect to have an attendance of about 800. Athletic events, a baseball game and a guessing contest will be included in the program of events.

The window of White & Gillespie's grocery store is attracting considerable attention these days. This firm deals in twine, as well as groceries, and to advertise this article they have constructed a spider's web out of binder twine and arranged artificial flies among the meshes. At night a Chinese lantern containing an electric light lends a pleasing aspect to the decoration scheme.

City grocerymen report business somewhat dull these times and attribute this to the fact that so many citizens have left for Stony Lake and other summer resorts for the hot season. The farmers are busy with their hay harvesting and do not get many opportunities to get to the city.

Roland M. Boswell, the Elora groceryman who absented himself from his own wedding in Toronto last week spent a day in Peterboro at the home of his uncle. The wedding was to have been solemnized on Thursday afternoon, June 30th. Boswell did not appear, but came here and was spending a pleasant time while his prospective bride, family, friends and the minister awaited his presence. He checked his baggage at the C.P.R. station for the steamship Virginian and left with the Cuthbert party. Montreal reports, however, state he was not on board and nothing since has been heard of him here.

GALT.

July 6.—Business in Galt the past week has been exceptionally good. The different manufactories, with a couple of exceptions report that orders are pouring in, and additional men are being employed. As a result of these conditions the grocery trade had picked up considerably and the merchants are now firm in their belief that a resumption of the old time big business is at hand.

"The strawberry season is about over, thank Providence," said a Galt grocer this morning. "Contrary to general opinion, the strawberry season does not mean a rich harvest for the grocer. What with the worry and trouble regarding this fruit, I sometimes think that I will refuse to handle it another year. But then, there is the possibility of losing customers. Strawberries spoil very easily and this season has been particularly hard in this respect. The sultry weather has made it almost impossible for us to keep berries over night. Were it not for the sugar sold for preserving purposes, the sale of the berries would be entirely without profit." Several other grocers were interviewed regarding the remarks of the above grocer, and one and all expressed the same opinion.

Is there a combine at the Galt market? Indications would point that way. A case in point was observed last Saturday morning, when a farmer arrived with a load of produce. "How much is your butter?" he was asked. "Just a moment," was the response. The farmer then held a confidential conversation with several other farmers, and returning, announced that butter was 22 cents per pound. It would seem that the average farmer is not capable of figuring out just what his product is worth. Another farmer, who evidently had figured out the cost of production, thought that his butter was worth 22 cents per pound. Twenty cents was the ruling price however, and he was finally obliged to accept that figure. There was a big market and prices remained unchanged.

President T. A. Rutherford, of the local Retail Merchants Association, says that the committee appointed to look into the finances of the Provincial Association, will shortly get busy. "We have a task of some magnitude, but we anticipate that when our labors are finished, the Association will start out with a thorough understanding of just how it stands financially."

A local grocer with sporting proclivities offered to wager a large bottle of olives recently that not one of the dozens of private picnics which left Galt every week, was without a bottle of the same goods. It is astonishing, he said, how the olive has grown in favor with picnic parties. Not so very long ago it was regarded as a luxury to be used by only those of means. Now, however, it is an indispensable picnic accessory.

TORONTO.

July 8.—The Retail Grocers' Association are expecting a big day next Wednesday, July 15, when their 23rd annual picnic to Buffalo and Niagara Falls will be held. Considerable interest is being taken in the trip by city grocers generally and prospects are that the excursion, always exceedingly popular, will be a record one, so far as attendance is concerned. Posters have been out all over the city for some time announcing event and everything points to a most enjoyable day's outing.

There was a jolly time up in High Park on the afternoon of July 1st, when the Toronto Retail Grocery Clerks' Benefit Association held a well-attended picnic. Grocery clerks, with their friends, their wives and their sweethearts, were present to the number of about two hundred, and everybody was full of life and fun. The feature of the afternoon's sports was a baseball match between teams captained by the president, E. Matthews, and the vice-president, Lou Hyzie. The vice-president's team won with a score which could hardly be contained in the score book. Running races, jumping contests, quoiting, etc., were heartily entered into for a number of prizes generously donated by the manufacturing and jobbing firms of the city, and at the close of the afternoon the crowd sat down to a bountiful luncheon. The afternoon was enjoyably spent by all.

West Toronto grocers took a good crowd of citizens to Berlin with them this morning on their annual picnic. The day will be spent in the usual way and a good programme of games has been arranged, with prizes donated by Toronto grocery firms.

The new regulations regarding bread d at the last session of the Ontario Legislature, went into force last Wednesday. Grocers are not much interested, for they expect to sell very few of the new standard loaves. Inspectors Awde and Vance have been going the rounds of the bakeries and have reported: "They have inspected eleven factories altogether, and in most of them the bread was satisfactory, only two places being out of accord with the regulations. One of these two bakeshops is a new one, both oven and machinery only having been recently installed. The other place was a small bakeshop that caters for the foreign trade with a special kind of bread. A number of light loaves were found there, and the proprietor thought he had the right to bake a forty-ounce loaf. It is not intended to prosecute in either of these cases, as the matter will likely be settled out of court.

Through the courtesy of Toronto Parks Co., Toronto grocers and their friends and customers are enjoying an afternoon's holiday at Scarboro Beach to-day, this being the regular Wednesday half-holiday. Quite a crowd took advantage of the opportunity and it is whispered that the committee through whom the event was arranged "did" every one of the shows at the park and then were scarcely satisfied.

Miss Madeline Ewing, the young lady who was drowned in the canoeing accident with Frank J. Farley in Humber Bay on Sunday evening, was bookkeeper in the grocery of R. Higgins & Son, 802 Yonge Street. Miss Ewing was a young lady of excellent qualities and the accident is sincerely regretted by her fellow employes and Mr. Higgins. She had been employed in the store about a year.

Henry Norris, in business in Toronto for the past 35 years, died on Friday, July 3, at his home 65 Bleecker St., in his 70th year. Death resulted after an illness of two months. At the time of his death, and for ten years previous, Mr. Norris kept a butcher, meat and provision store at the corner of Shuter and George Streets. Before moving to that locality he did business for 25 years at 333 Yonge Street. Deceased was a member of St. John's Lodge, Knights of Maccabees; Capital Lodge, No. 5, A.O.U.W., and of Court Rose, No. 18, Canadian Order of Foresters, of which he was one of the founders. He is survived by four sons, Frank H., Sydney H., Herbert P. and Garnet.

CHATHAM.

July 6.—The Dominion Day celebration here was a great success. The programme included a trades procession in the morning, field and aquatic sports in the afternoon, calithumpian and torchlight procession and band concert in the evening, besides other attractions. A noteworthy feature was the electric illumination of King Street. The demonstration committee has turned these lights over to the city as a permanent institution, and they are to be lit every Saturday night henceforth. A striking feature of the trades profession was the float put on by N. A. McGeachy & Sons, milk dealers. E. C. Gammage and W. J. Radley were grocers in line. The success of the demonstration was largely due to the hearty co-operation of the merchants. After all expenses were paid, there was a surplus of $60 which was set aside for a demonstration next year, a permanent committee being appointed to take charge.

Last Friday night Wallaceburg was visited by a disastrous fire, in which the seed and feed store and chopping mill of Armstrong & Son, James St., were burned to the ground, with a loss of about $10,000. The groceries of Geo. Taylor and Peter Forbes were both threatened at one time, but were saved, though Mr. Taylor's loss through damage by water will be considerable.

The Bell Telephone Company will have competition when they apply next August for a renewal of their franchise. The Blenheim & Harwich independent company intend asking a franchise and offer greatly reduced rates for the service. The city at present received $400 a year from the Bell Company. The matter will likely be discussed at the next regular meeting of the retailers on July 14, when it is expected that a definite recommendation will be made. Retailers comprise upwards of 50 per cent. of the phone users, and their views should carry weight. While two competitive systems would not be welcomed, nevertheless an improved service is earnestly desired.

That cigar leaf tobacco can be grown in Essex and Kent better than is grown in Quebec, is the strong statement made by Ernest Bailey, the Kingsville tobacco buyer. He states that buyers of Zimmer Spanish pay from three to four cents more per pound for the Essex product than for the Quebec product. An excise officer is also quoted as saying of Essex samples: "The sample I consider a perfect leaf, with better color, aroma, burning qualities and flavor, than any imported for cigar making in Canada." Mr. Bailey has opened a factory in Kingsville for the manufacture of the Canadian-grown product. While the recent drop in prices has hit the Burley tobacco a bad blow, it is claimed that growers of cigar leaf have never had any difficulty in disposing of their product at satisfactory prices. Farmers who formerly grew tobacco have, however, gone largely into sugar beets, which, though they do not yield as large profits in good tobacco years, nevertheless give surer returns.

W. S. Eberle has sold out his bakery business in Highgate and intends moving to Blenheim, where he will go into business.

Wm. Cook, Park Avenue, passed away on Sunday afternoon after two weeks' illness from pneumonia. Mr. Cook, who was 66 years of age, has for 15 years conducted a grocery on the avenue. Mrs. Cook survives.

The death occurred at Palmyra on June 26 of Samuel E. Bell, who has for six years past conducted a general store in that village. Mr. Bell was about 37 years of age, and leaves a wife and two daughters.

Forty-three business men of Aylmer have signed an agreement to close their places of business on Wednesday afternoons during July and August.

The "candy counter" is a recognized feature in at least two Maple City groceries. H. Malcolmson has always featured a stock of choice confectionery; one of his two large show windows being always devoted to a tasty candy display. Mr. Anderson is also making a feature of his candy department.

The King Edward Grocery, conducted by Northwood & Bartlett, has always featured the handling of early fruits. Their advertising has been devoted almost wholly to this line of business, and the announcement of the first cherries, the first strawberries, the first new potatoes, attached to the name of the King Edward Grocery, is a familiar one to newspaper readers.

LARGE CALIFORNIA FIG CROP.

Reports from California indicate that this year's fig crop, although it will not be harvested for several months yet, will be of large size. It is too early as yet to state anything definitely concerning its quality. The signs, however point to one of the largest second crops in years. The first crop of figs is hardly ever very heavy, inasmuch as the early frosts, and especially those occuring in February and March of this year, damaged the buds before they had set on to any extent. The prospects for black figs are also reported to be very good.

EFFECTIVE WINDOW DRESSING

Some Advice on How to Make the Store Window Pay Dividends—A Novel Window From a Montreal Grocery.

The show window, rightly used, is one of the strongest factors for attracting trade in the modern retail business world. To make the window pay, to make it a vital force in enlarging a business by constantly drawing new customers into the store, requires time and labor, and the exercise of good taste and judgment. If a merchant buys advertising space in a newspaper or elsewhere he devotes considerable thought to filling it with attractive matter. He makes frequent changes, so that his advertisements are always new and fresh and suited to the varying needs of the buying public. The show window is a valuable advertising space which costs the merchant something in rent and other expenses. He has it on his hands and can turn it to good account or he can neglect it, letting it remain a constant bill of expense from which he derives no benefit.

An Index to the Store.

The slovenly show window knocks business. It drives away trade. It deters many from entering who fear to find the interior as poorly managed as the exterior. The show window is an index to the store. A neat, tasty display, with goods shown to their best advantage, indicates a well-kept, business-like establishment. The customer who enters and finds that the interior bears out the promises made by the window display goes away satisfied and is sure to return. Constant changes in the window will keep the world informed of the changes going on within the store, the new bargains, the beginning of special sales and the arrival of new goods.

The desire for possession is one of the strongest human characteristics. The man or woman who sees a good article tastily put on view, if it is seasonable and suited to their needs, will long to own it. They may purchase it at once, or make a mental note of the store and return later. The man who can exhibit goods so that those who see them want them for their own, is the man who becomes a successful window trimmer and who draws trade to his establishment. Display seasonable goods, for which there is a demand or soon will be. Set your goods in attractive surroundings. A beautiful easy chair, marked with a low price, but shown n the middle of a meadow, would not tempt anyone to buy it. But place the same chair, marked with the same price, in a cosy corner, beside a grate fire, with pipe racks on the wall, and a table with magazines, or workbox, close at hand, and that chair will possess attractions on a fall and winter day which many a man or woman will find it impossible to resist.

The Object of Window Dressing.

The object of all good window trimming is first to draw spectators to the window, then to hold their attention, and finally induce them to enter the store. For this reason every trim should have some novel feature, unique in itself and belonging peculiarly to the exhibit of which it is a part. Any unusual arrangements of the goods in hand will attract attention. The massive style, in which a large number of the same articles are grouped in a window, or at a particular spot, is often effective. For variety use the light, delicate style, in which a few objects are grouped in a graceful, artistic fashion which compels attention and admiration. Set pieces, in which various objects are used to create outdoor scenes or other pictorial effects can be used in thousands of varieties and to good advantage. Articles in motion will invariably draw spectators to a window. A flag waving in a breeze created by a concealed electric fan, a windmill operated by motor, or mechanically moving lights, are commonly used to good purpose. The idea can be employed in a thousand different ways. Special exhibits, such as cooking, the making of shoes or weaving of rugs, in which the construction or use of the article advertised is shown in actual operation, are sure means of obtaining publicity if not used too often.

One or more show cards should be frequently used in the grocer's window. If neatly and artistically made they add a touch of color to a display and give all necessary information. By saying enough, but not too much, the show card leads the customer into the store for fuller information, a sale is made and the card writer has played his part in making the show window pay.

A NOVEL MONTREAL WINDOW.

Display of Animal Foods at Time of Dog Show Attracts Attention.

The photograph reproduced herewith illustrates a display recently made in the window of John Robertson & Son, St. Catherine St., Montreal, and is interesting from the fact that it shows how a wide range of varieties of foods for domestic animals may be displayed with advantage.

This display was especially opportune, as it occurred during the dog show in Montreal. The display contains various forms of food for dogs, cats, birds, poultry and fish, in fact, covers the diet list of all domestic and pet animals.

Bench shows are each year becoming more popular, and as a result more attention is being paid to the breeding and care of animals. All this goes to demonstrate the fact that more scientifically prepared animal food will be sold, and as this line comes within the natural sphere of the grocer's trade it will be sure to open up a new source of revenue to him. In any case its prospects are well worth investigating. The window in this case was built up with the products of Spratt's Patent, Limited, of London, Eng., who are represented in Canada by Fred Hughes & Co., Montreal. While the window is rather too plentifully filled to give the best effect the plan followed in its arrangement bears some marks of the good window dresser.

Hot weather is a poor excuse for neglecting to change your window display these days.

Complaining is waste of energy—the ALL of which is needed for that doing something which alone can change conditions for the better.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Advancement in primary markets.
Provisions—Advanced.
Fish—Advanced.
Eggs—Remain steady.
Cheese—Declined.

Montreal, July 9.

Trade has been fairly good during the week. Sugar has been furnishing a field for speculation owing to the turbulent condition of the primary markets. The increased number of enquiries which are arriving daily from Europen points regarding Canadian bacon has had its effect by stiffening up prices on this side. The export of cheese has fallen off somewhat during the week, due to high prices asked in the country last week, which put it beyond the export basis.

SUGAR—The expected good demand which generally prevails at this time of the year has arrived, owing to use in preserving fruits. Primary markets are in an unsteady condition. Some New York refineries have increased their prices. Three Java cargoes have been destroyed by fire, and this fact, coupled with other reasons, points to an advancing market.

MONTREAL—Good demand for canned vegetables, also fairly good demand for canned fruits and canned meats. Canned fish are in good demand, especially salmon. Dealers are buying last year's pack in expectation of higher prices on the new pack. Fair demand for sardines and imported herrings, other lines somewhat dull.

TORONTO—Business is rather dull in 1907 pack goods, and retailers seem to be holding off also on futures. Despite this some firms report orders booked for future goods ahead of last year.

The Canadian Canners have announced a special offer on Middlesex brand goods, 1908 pack, to apply only to Ontario; of tomatoes, 85c; corn, 75c; and peas, 65c; with a small discount. It is said that only 25 per cent. of orders are guaranteed to be filled.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugars—Firmer.
Beans—Continue stiff.
Hides—Higher.
Collections—Fair.

Toronto, July 9, 1908.

Reports from wholesale houses and travelers show considerably more brightness this week and matters generally seem to be coming to a better basis. While business generally is improving the financial side is still showing some stiffness and collections are rather more stiff than they ought to be, considering general conditions.

While there are features of interest and a firmer feeling in the fruit and provision markets the grocery markets proper show scarcely any change. Business continues on all lines on the same careful basis, with perhaps an added stimulus in a few lines on account of special summer demand.

Sugar—The market has assumed a very firm position during the week, and indications point strongly to the possibility of an advance shortly. Willett & Gray, in their summary of general conditions in the raw markets, say :—"The reaction which took place, as noticed last week, proved to be the needed stimulus which the market required to put itself on the former level of prosperity. Following the reaction, all markets turned strong and give promise of continued strength for some time to come. Europe is helped out of its inactivity by a renewed American demand, which took one of the steamer cargoes of beet afloat at 11s 4½d c.f.i., the parity of 4.28c landed for centrifugals, the buyers being the Federal refinery, followed by purchases of at least 25,000 tons beet-root sugar by other refiners for shipment, at equal to 4.31c duty paid for 96 degrees test centrifugals. Intermediate purchases during the week of Porto Rico centrifugals (96 degrees test) at 4.31c and Cubas at 2 15-16c c. & f., 95 degrees test, equal to 4.33c landed for 96 degrees test, put the market again on a firm basis at .08c advance for the week, with buyers at 1-32c further advance and holders asking still higher prices. Crop news is favorable from all countries by our reports, although other reports of European beet crops modify the favorable condition a little by fears of drought.

"European markets declined to 10s 9¾d for beet, but quickly reacted, recovering more than was lost and closing at 11s 5¼d for July, being the parity of 4.42c for centrifugals, with new crop at 10s 3¾d for October-December delivery, the parity of centrifugals at 1.18c. Cane sugar advanced 4½d on the London market. No recent business is reported in Javas, which may be more scarce for early arrivals than anticipated. It is said that three cargoes are being shipped to Egypt and that a cargo now loading at Java is on fire.

"Figures, just obtainable, showing the distribution of the domestic beet sugar crop, together with the statistics of the American seaports, enable us to publish this week the details of consumption of sugar in the United States for the first six months of this year, which has proved to be unexpectedly large, being 1,586,889 tons, an increase of 112,595 tons, or 7.63 per cent. over the consumption for the same time last year. With the greater part of the domestic sugar crops disposed of and the fruit crop reports being unusually favorable, the indications point to heavy demand for the product of the seaboard refineries during the remainder of the year, even if the actual consumption meanwhile should possibly show a slight falling off."

Locally, some increased demand is felt as a result of the opening of the preserving season and stocks are held firmly.

There has been no great demand as yet for the new brands, Beaver and Imperial, put on the market by the Montreal refiners last week. Most of the local jobbers have secured small stocks, but are not pushing the sale. The fact that these brands can only be sold west of Toronto gives affirmation to the idea held generally that they have been put on for purposes of competition.

DRIED FRUITS—Business continues of a hand-to-mouth variety, with no striking features. Advices from Malaga regarding raisins received this week by local brokers state that the vines look sound and are in excellent condition, and they expect quality and size will be good, unless the weather should prove unfavorable.

Advices from Patras regarding currants note excellent prospects and a probable total yield of 170,000 tons, in which case a retention of 35 per cent. would be enforced, which means the withdrawal of 45,000 tons from amount available for export, leaving just about what is required for annual consumption. Prices are expected to be normal, say somewhat less than last year's. First shipments will take place on 24th August.

Reports from primary markets regarding Sultana raisins anticipate a large crop with prices materially lower than last year.

NUTS—Reports from the growers state that there have been rain storms in many districts, but state that so far the Bordeaux and Marbot walnut crops have not suffered at all. There has been comparative absence from any damage from hail this year; which usually causes spotted and bruised shells, good average crops are expected and good reports on Grenoble walnuts state that the outlook of crop continues good, and advices from Spain regarding the almond crop say it promises to be large.

TEA—Buying has been somewhat more heavy in the local market the past week or so than for some time past, as a result of the somewhat easier prices which seem to be prevailing temporarily.

Gow, Wilson & Stanton summarize the situation in the London market as follows:

"With the statistical position on a sound basis, there seems little reason for the gradually quieter tone, and, generally speaking, reduction in values that has taken place during the last few weeks. Duty payments of all tea continue on a good scale for the time of year, and show an advance of more than half a million lbs. from 1st June to date, when compared with same period 1907. With little of last season's crop now to be disposed of, the combined amount of Indian and Ceylon tea offering during the next few weeks should be quite moderate. No doubt the unattractive quality from Ceylon which has ruled lately, and the rather indifferent assortment in the Indian sales, has helped to lower quotations, buyers only acting for their immediate requirements. Offerings of the new crop up to the present have been somewhat disappointing. The few Assams have been of poor quality, and those from the Darjeeling district have only possessed average flavor. From recent musters seen, however, better teas will shortly be arriving; these should meet with a good reception, the market during the last couple of months having become very bare of this class."

COFFEE—Local business continues very fair with no noticeable change in prices.

Willett & Gray summarize the general situation as follows: "At the commencement of the new crop it is important to compare prices with a year ago.

"A year ago the world's visible supply was 16,399,954 bags and has decreased to 14,100,000 bags, a shrinkage of over 2¼ million bags in the crop year and in a period when buying has been restricted to the utmost; and so with the ensuing crop, about the same size as the one just closed, a further reduction of the stocks of the world must take place during the present crop season. The interior supplies or invisible stocks, both here and in Europe have undoubtedly undergone a further decrease, and it is ascertained that some large roasters in this country admit a decrease of something like 200,000 bags from their invisible stocks. It is all-important for the New York options that the present 1908-1909 crop in Rio is supposed to be the smallest since 1887-1888, because the option values in New York are regulated now by the value of Rios and not Santos, it being a fact that to-day Santos coffees are 150 to 200 points above the option market. A potential factor for the new crop year is the continued hand-to-mouth buying on the part of the trade everywhere, which has lasted quite a long time, and it therefore insures a steady demand in the coming season."

A HALF-CENTURY OF BUSINESS.

The Edwardsburg Starch Co. is celebrating this month, the 50th anniversary of the establishment of the business, which was begun at Cardinal in 1858. A handsome calendar is being issued to commemorate the event. The card bears in attractive lithographed form engravings showing the old and new factories, a photograph of the late W. T. Benson, founder of the business and also colored reproductions of the firm's products. Those of our readers who have not already received one of these calendars may secure one by addressing the Edwardsburg Starch Co. and mentioning this paper.

W. H. Millman, of Millman & Sons, Toronto, with Mrs. Millman, is spending a week in Western Ontario visiting Windsor, Walkerville and Detroit.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, July 9, 1908.)

POINTERS—

Package Oats Several brands reduced. Cheese—Manitoba cheese scarce. Prices advancing.

Not for many months has the business outlook been so bright as it is at the present time. From every part of the west come the most encouraging reports as to the growing crops. Geo. H. Shaw, traffic manager of the Canadian Northern, estimates the wheat crop at 120,000,000 bushels, by far the largest in the history of the west. While money is still scarce and business is consequently somewhat hampered, there is now a much better feeling among the trade and business is showing very considerable improvement. The wholesale grocery business has been affected the least by the late depression, but it is recovering rapidly.

CANNED GOODS—There is some disposition to reduce prices in fruits and vegetables for present delivery as wholesalers want to get rid of old stocks before the new are on the market, at reduced prices.

GOES TO MINISTER OF JUSTICE.

The Co-operative Bill, which has been lying before the Senate for several months, was pushed forward a step on Tuesday, July 7, when, on motion of Sir Mackenzie Bowell, it was referred to the Minister of Justice for his opinion on the question as to whether it was within federal or provincial jurisdiction. Hon. Mr. Scott gave notice that he would drop the section confining the operations of the companies to a single electoral division.

"Men Who Sell Things"

The Sky-rocket Versus the Wear-well Type of Salesman—The Sales Manager Accepts a Large Amount of Responsibility—A Story of the Calming Down of One "Sky-rocket" Man—Learn to Know Yourself as Well as Your Business.

By Walter D. Moody—Serial rights for Canada purchased by the MacLean Publi hing Co. from the publishers, A. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

"Not by the force of capital, but by having money drawer and counting desk and counter and shelves all full of good temper, they rose in society, until today Merryman & Warmgrasp have one of the largest stores, and the most elegant show windows, and the finest carriages, and the prettiest wives in all the town of Shuttleford."

Many a salesman has gone down under his temper. They usually begin by pluming themselves with the idea that their firm does not expect its men to make doormats of themselves for crusty customers to wipe their feet on. That is a greatly overworked idea with those who have a short hold on their tempers. They end with kicking themselves out of that very firm and the good graces of their trade, because they are continually going about with chips on their shoulders, looking for trouble.

How the Tide Comes in.

People who have never seen the tide come in at the ocean beach do not understand it.

Like the development of a bad temper, the waves creep slowly up at first and then recede. "The tide is going out," says one; "the sea is going down." Ere it is gone another wave comes. This time it reaches a higher point; but it recedes again, and he says: "Surely the tide is going out, and the sea is going down." Again a wave rolls in; this time it comes higher, and presently the tide is full.

So with the advance of an ungoverned temper—its baneful influence engulfs and destroys every chance the salesman ever had to become a power in his profession.

Someone has said, "A melancholy musician may compose a Dead March, and make harp weep and organ wail; but he will not master a Battle March, or with that grand instrument, the organ, storm the castles of the soul as with flying artillery of light and love and joy, until the organ pipes seem filled with a thousand hosannas."

When a salesman boils over quickly, you soon find out what is in him.

Show courtesy to others, not because they are gentlemen, but because you are one.

CHAPTER IX.

The Sky-Rocket Salesman.

A salesman who seeks to establish himself on a good footing by unfair means is soon spotted by his trade and by his fellow-salesmen. He loses the confidence of the first and the friendship of the latter. He is not a salesman, but a bribe-giver, or something worse.

Nearly every phase of salesmanship has been made an exhaustive subject of discussion at some time or other, but all too little has been said or written concerning the wear-well salesman. Just here, however, while we are attempting a description of the negative types, the sky-rocket looms up as the opposite of the wear-well class, those who serve as beacon-lights along the shore of salesmanship.

The mariner attempting to guide his ship safely into harbor on a dark and stormy night would become hopelessly lost in his bearings with nothing but sky-rockets to beckon him into naven. The steady glare of the trusty light on the rocky point is his one hope.

Sky-rockets are used at sea as signals of distress to attract the attention of passing ships or of the life-saving station, to their helpless condition.

The sky-rocket salesman is ever a signal of distress, causing much concern to the unfortunate house with which he is connected, A flash in the pan ; a streak of light ; an outburst of sparks ; a thin line of smoke marking its meteoric course ; a smell as of something burning—and all is over but the drop of the stick ; and who can predict where that will alight ?

With a crash and a thud his presence is announced among the list of "also rans," whose breakdown on the course prevented his finishing the race. Happily this type of salesman is gradually disappearing, thanks to the exacting business methods of the present strenuous day.

But the occasional flash of the sky-rocket on the horizon of professional salesmanship is sufficient cause for reflection to the sales manager, suggesting the necessity of pointing out the true way to ultimate success, which is possible only by sure-footed methods, infinite patience, undaunted courage, and unblemished integrity.

Even when a salesman understands his line thoroughly and knows how trade conditions stand, much depends on the personal qualities he brings into play when interviewing people.

Selling goods of even the highest class is arduous work. The salesman must see that he brings to his task the necessary strength of character. In no other line of business is a man so quickly reduced to his right level as in salesmanship. He cannot live for long on a false plane.

Correct Estimate Necessary.

In brief, salesmanship is a profession that finds room for all kinds of minds. But a man ought not to rate himself too highly at first. When he succeeds in a small way, he assuredly will be asked to fill more important positions.

It is rarely the case that the sky-rocket salesman is designedly unprofessional in his methods. He is by nature oftener imprudent, or unacquainted with the characteristics of the finished salesman, which are produced only in the school of human endeavor taught by master results.

Again, he may be the victim of bad training, the result of unrestricted latitude in business-getting.

It is a regrettable fact that some employers are not very scrupulous and exacting as to the ways and means employed by their salesmen, so long as orders are forthcoming.

They wink at the means, satisfying their consciences with the fallacious saying that, fair or foul, it is justified by the end.

Houses that tolerate such methods, though they do not actually encourage them, generally find themselves victimized by their own men Sooner or later either the sheriff or the receiver takes charge, leaving the unfortunate salesman to drift into other pursuits, or perchance find his way into the sales force of a competitive institution, where for the first time in his career he is given a real introduction to legitimate, high-grade selling and merchandising methods.

Here the work of the resourceful sales manager is put to a true test. If the subject over which he labors possesses in any degree the rudiments necessary to the making of a successful salesman, the make-over process of true selling education, based on knowledge, character, and honesty, begins.

The reward for time thus expended affords a peculiar sense of gratification to the manager and his house ; and to the salesman unbounded happiness and true-blue loyalty on being won over to a sphere of genuine usefulness to himself and others.

The disaster that may be expected to result from bad training in salesmen is exemplified in the experience of a competitor of our firm. The proprietor of that house was a pioneer in the business, and made considerable money in his day. Being an old man, however, he could not adjust himself to modern methods. Competition became too strong for him, and he was finally forced into bankruptcy. The business was taken over by his son, who secured enough money from his wife's people to settle his father's indebtedness at about 25 cents on the dollar. The younger man possessed some of his father's peculiarities, which bordered on the lack of principle. His remaining assets were in the nature of a college education that he did not seem to know what to do with, and a skimmed-milk knowledge of the business.

Office Chair Management.

In spite of these handicaps, he surrounded himself with a fairly capable staff of salesmen, and he really had a working chance to make a success of his undertaking. He started in to manage his business from an office chair, and that kind of management soon runs its course. Like the foolish man who turns on the light to look for a burglar, he stood out boldly in the glare of his unpractical methods, while his salesmen worked out his ruin, doing about as they pleased, secure in the shadow of their graft. Those of the men who had been upright soon lapsed into careless indifference, Others robbed their employer under his very nose, with little fear of prosecution, because he was in such bad financial straits that he did not dare to make a move. In three years ruin and disgrace fell upon that house, and it was again forced out of business, this time for good.

By no means are all sky-rocket salesmen worth the effort to save them, but this can be determined only by giving each a fair chance.

The trying-out process will usually demonstrate that they possess marked salesmanship ability, which is susceptible of high culture under the right tutorage.

To harness their enthusiasm with judgment, create in them singleness of purpose, inpregnate their selling-talk with logical, honest arguments, and endow them with wear-well qualities requires patience ; but all this is possible of accomplishment under a firm hand.

Is it worth while ?

Certainly. The best salesmen any house ever employed are secured in this way ; but there must be a good foundation to build on. The trouble is, many employers will not be bothered with this class. As soon as they discover their weaknesses, out the weaklings go. And what comes then ? Order-takers, perhaps, to fill their places.

Give me enthusiasm—even though perverted—rather than indolence.

Now, let us see how it works out.

A sky-rocket salesman once secured a position with my house on the recommendation of one of our old travelers who knew him by reputation as being a good man. And right here let me emphasize the fact that there is a vast difference between reputation and ability or character. "Character is what a man is ; reputation is what he seemeth to be."

We fixed up a territory for our new man and started him out with our hopes keyed up to the last peg.

Our confidence was shaken by a letter received before he had been out a week. He advised us, on making a certain town, that the only merchant to whom we would pass credit was trading at a neighboring house, concluding his statement with a request to send the merchant a letter under plain envelope, addressed in care of our competitor, inviting him to call and inspect our line while in the city.

We replied that we considered his request a breach of business ethics, and that our policy did not countenance such procedure adding a few side-lights on legitimate, clean-cut, above-board selling methods.

His first trip ended with a gratifying showing in sales as indicated on the surface, and our hopes in him seemed in a fair way to be realized.

"Sky-rocket' Methods.

A little later, however, goods were returned from every section of his territory, with the statements, "Not ordered," or "Ordered on approval ; if not satisfactory to be returned." These claims for credit were accompanied by claims for express charges, extra discounts and all manner of things not quite consistent with fixed deals. Mr. Sky-rocket had promised to do thus and so, his customers wrote, but investigation of the order sheets sent in failed in every instance to discover any record of these special arrangements. We were continually being placed in the embarrassing position of pitting the word of our salesman against that of his customers.

We began to realize that our prize package contained a sky-rocket, but, on the whole, enough goods "stuck" to convince us that we really had a good man provided he could be made over to do business our way. We lost no opportunity of taking him vigorously to task. We gave him to understand how we wished him to govern himself in the discharge of our affairs.

Gradually a little improvement was noticed. Complaints became less frequent and his sales continued to increase ; but at best he was nervous. He got mad at little "cropy" customers because they did not buy enough goods to suit him ; then he would vary the programme by writing in that this or that line was not up to the standard. When he had exhausted his regular line of specialties, he would wrangle about his expense account. He was always "out" in making a settlement to the house, notwithstanding that it was expressly understood from the beginning that his daily allowance was not to exceed a stipulated amount.

Training that man was more like an experience in fitting two lengths of stove-pipe than anything I have ever undertaken. As soon as one side was nicely adjusted it would bulge out on the other. If you have ever done any stove-pipe fitting, you know that it is the most exasperating work that man was ever engaged in. Finally, with the aid of many heart-to-heart talks, we convinced him that there was but one way in which he could ever hope to build a safe and sound career ; that he would never again have so good a chance to make the best of his opportunities in life ; that if he failed to make good with us, the crisis in his business career would have been reached, then would come the re-action in a down-grade pace that all the influence in the world could not check.

The turning-point came at last, and with it the admission from Mr. Sky-rocket that it was indeed a revelation to him to see the manner in which our business was conducted, his great regret being that he had been deprived of such training earlier in life.

His territory, which was generally hated, was in "the enemy's country." Under the new life that our made-over salesman gave it, however, it developed into one of the best selling-assets of the house.

The salesman who secures patronage for the moment by over-colored propositions and loosely fixed principles does no lasting harm to either his trade or his house. He merely fools himself.

If Mr. Sky-rocket will stop cheating himself and look honestly into his career he can read there pretty accurately what is going to happen to him.

And best of all, not only can he foretell his own business fortune, but he can control it, if he will be guided and warned by the weaknesses written on the pages of his own personality.

Don't say, "I'm just as good a salesman as So-and-so." I know lots of people who might well investigate their own characters. When you retire for the night look into your own methods, study your own weaknesses. Tell yourself truthfully just where you fell down on this or that transaction, and follow along the lines of your misconduct to the inevitable end. If you are the least bit of a philosopher, you can see that the end will be failure and discharge, unless you are sincere, and mean to be guided by what you see in your character study.

Make a new and determined effort to put yourself under the sort of control that leads to riches and honor.

The young man going out on the road for the first time, if he is made of the right stuff, will soon learn the importance of knowing what not to do to insure his ultimate success.

A well-known authority on salesmanship says :

"The reason why there is no work in the world like that of the traveling salesman, where a man's actions will so quickly determine his success or failure, is because perhaps that in no other vocation is a man put so absolutely upon his own honor and ability to work out his own salvation."

The realization of this does not come with the first trip. A salesman gets to know it only after he has been packing and unpacking trunks for several years. The best the salesman can attain to is what he learnd by the "rubbing" process, taught only through bitter lessons in the school of experience.

PREJUDICE VANQUISHED!

A wholesale house that has, during the last few years, been advertising steadily in one of the MacLean Newspapers, has recently got back an old customer in St. Catharines whom they lost nearly 20 years ago. For years they tried every plan to get him back. He was not only indignant, but he was bitter, and even a couple of visits from the head of the firm failed to move him. For the last 8 or 9 years he has not been called on at all. One day, to the amazement of the head of the firm, our St. Catharines friend walked in, shook hands with him, and said he would like bygones to be bygones. "The fact is," said he, "I have been reading your announcements the last few years in The ———, and I feel as if I were losing business by not dealing with you. I would like to look through the warehouse now and would ask you to have your travelers call on me regularly in future."

This is a case where that bane of a traveler's existence, Prejudice, was overcome by constant, progressive advertising. In a similar manner, good advertising in trade newspapers, will turn indifference into interest, and will dispel ignorance. No traveler will deny that an unprejudiced customer, equipped with a knowledge of a firm's standing in the trade, and interested in their advertised values, is a much easier prospect for a traveler to negotiate with, than is a prospect who is Prejudiced, Indifferent, or Ignorant.

SOME B.C. DELIVERY OUTFITS.

It will be interesting to compare the type of outfit used in Toronto with that used in British Columbia. The photo reproduced herewith shows part of the parade of a similar show held some time ago in Victoria, B.C. The two outfits at the head of the procession are the property of Dixi H. Ross & Co., of that city, and carried off first and second prizes on that occasion.

AN ATTRACTIVE ONTARIO STORE.

A Well-arranged and Clean Interior From St. Thomas.

One of the brightest and cleanest groceries in St. Thomas, Ont., is that of J. F. Pelan, on Talbot St. The interior of the store, with several of its attractive features is shown in the accompanying engraving. Unfortunately the photo does not show a neat office in the rear which has just been completed. This was part of recent renovations to the whole premises.

Mr. Pelan is a thorough grocer, a hard worker, a good buyer, and has a host of friends in the city. Mrs. Pelan, too, spends a good deal of time in the store and gives her husband a great deal of assistance in looking after the books. Two clerks are employed and they are generally kept busy.

The illustration will show just how beautifully the stock in this store is kept. And the store every day, those who know say, presents just such a picture of neatness and good arrangement as is shown here. The display of canned and bottled goods is such as would tend to induce a customer to buy a grist of things that were never thought of when entering the store. Mr. Pelan is an appreciative Grocer subscriber and values considerably the hints he gets from the paper.

ATTRACTIVE INTERIOR OF THE STORE OF J. F. PELAN, ST. THOMAS.

A HOST OF PICNICS.

Here's hoping the weather man will be kind enough to provide a bright and balmy day next Wednesday, July 15, to assure the enjoyment of the thousands of grocers and their friends in different parts of Canada, who will be taking advantage of the various outings arranged by the grocers' organizations in several towns.

How they all came to pick on July 15 for the date is rather a mystery, but they did and grocers from Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford, London, and other points will forget about stores and troubles that day and journey off to new scenes for their annual outing with their brothers in the trade.

The Montreal Retail Grocers' Association take their annual excursion to Highgate Springs, Vermont, and have made large plans for an enjoyable trip.

The Toronto Retail Grocers go to the old favorite spot, Buffalo and Niagara Falls, this year, by the Niagara Navigation Co.'s boats to Queenston and thence in the International Railway Co.'s observation cars up the Canadian side to Niagara Falls, across the bridge and on to Buffalo. Special plans have been made for the entertainment of the visiting grocers in Buffalo, and the trip is certain to be a delightful one.

The Hamilton Grocers' Association annual excursion to Niagara Falls, is one of the big events of the year in the city under the mountain. For several years now, the excursion has been growing in popularity, until now a goodly section of the city's inhabitants pile on the special trains and journey down to the Falls to spend the day with the good brethren of the scales and scoop. This year the crowd promises to be bigger than ever and the day's event to be better than ever. Special arrangements have been made to comfortably transport the host of excursionists and a special and unique programme is being arranged as one of the features of the day.

Some of the London grocers who did not take in the recent excursion to Detroit have arranged an outing for the same day. They will travel to Niagara Falls and an enjoyable time is expected.

The Grocer's good wishes go with all these excursions and as many of its representatives as can be spared will also be along.

It is good storekeeping to sell only goods which you know to be reliable and to keep only such goods on your shelves.

All grocers should carry a full stock of Royal Baking Powder.

It gives the greatest satisfaction to customers and pays the grocer a greater profit, pound for pound, than any other baking powder he sells

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, July 9, 1908.

The whip-sawing conditions which succeed one another in the cheese trade is d scouraging to those who wish to see a good healthy trade maintained between this country and England. The week before last our export trade was beginning to assume respectable proportions and then suddenly the country prices soared away above anything which could be looked at from an export point of view. This condition brought about a small demand, as exporters could not get rid of their supplies on the local market. This week prices have declined owing to these conditions and in all probability the export enquiries will again begin to arrive, although at the present prices are not any too roseate on the other side. The production continues large owing to the continued favorable natural conditions existing in the country. Receipts for the week ending July 4, 1908, were 106,682 boxes, as against 112.843 boxes for the corresponding week of last year.

The receipts for the season up to date continue to display a deficit as compared with the season for 1907. The returns compare as follows: For 1908 up to date, 493,864 boxes, as compared with 578,411 boxes for the same period of 1907. The shipments of cheese from Montreal for last week amounted to 81,480 boxes, as compared with 95,393 boxes for the previous week, and 89,842 boxes for the corresponding week of last year.

The total exports since May 1 were 166,178 boxes, as compared with 531,666 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Prices for export purposes range from 11¼c to 11⅜c.

The butter market has made marked increase in its export aspect. The receipts for last week were 26,575 packages, against 24,208 packages for the same period of last year, and the season's record up to date stands, 126,088 packages, against 132,509 packages for the same period of 1907. It will be seen by this that if the present good conditions persist in the country the butter market will eclipse its last year's record. Exports for the week show a large increase, amounting to 14,698 packages, as compared with 8,181 packages for the previous week, and 4,465 packages for the corresponding week of last year. The export price was 22½c.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, July 9, 1908.

The brighter conditions in the Canadian packing industry chronicled last week are continuing in good measure and packers generally are feeling a good deal more satisfied with the situation, and with factories running, many of them to full capacity, after months of enforced light business, this is no surprise.

The English market continues on the 60 shilling basis, and the demand for Canadian bacon is quite active. There is always a corner on the British market which seems to demand Canadian products, but during the previous several months Canadian packers have done so little export business, as a result of the unsatisfactory market basis, that the supply of Canadian bacon was practically nil on the British market. When prices did permit a shipping business the appetites of a considerable section of the British public seemed to turn towards the Canadian goods with their superior quality, and the packers are feeling better in consequence.

There is some talk, too, of unsatisfactory shipments from Denmark, and this fact, too, may reflect to the benefit of the Canadian packer. With the system of Government inspection in operation in Canada, it is now scarcely possible for anything but perfect goods to reach foreign markets.

Other advices state that the Danes will shortly be entering into extensive harvest operations and that this is likely to materially affect their "killings" for some time. Another fact which will help the Canadian industry.

The United States packers have been fairly active during the week, but a good demand from the home field is absorbing the greater part of their product and shipments abroad have been comparatively light.

Deliveries of hogs to Canadian factories have been only fair and the situation, to a great extent, rests on the farmers. With the much improved export demand and a brisk call locally for pork products the packers can make use of a pretty good supply of porkers.

The prices offered this week, too, ought to be a good inducement to the farmers. On account of the light deliveries prices have been forced up about half a dollar, quite a material jump, and with $6.75 f.o.b. and $7.05 for hogs off cars at the factories the farmer is getting more for his hogs than he has realized for some months. These prices should suffice to bring out a pretty generous supply.

Conditions prevailing in the United States markets are summarized in the following paragraphs from the New York Journal of Commerce:

"The past week has witnessed very little change and a light business in hog products though packers or some mythical persons, according to the bulls, have been buying 'for investment,' notwithstanding the packers have been sellers on all strong spots, acting as if they preferred to reduce, or at least keep down, their holdings to the present liberal supplies. The improved cash demand for the previous two weeks has nearly subsided at the advanced prices, both in meats and lard, yet prices have not been let back by the packers, but the trade shows no disposition to buy further ahead of legitimate wants. Exporters have been almost entirely out of the market, even on lard, and have taken no meats since last week. Prices of city bellies had been advanced early this week on a pretty general cleaning up of stocks last week, but at the advance now asked trade is halting, as well as in western hams, yet offerings of no products have been heavy enough to cause any re-action so far. The hog movement has increased moderately at most points, although still behind a year ago, and the weights still lighter, due to the high price of, and possible scarcity of corn, rather than to the close marketing of hogs, yet prices have gone up very materially, advancing ½c a day in the New York market this week, until packers are cutting as few as possible to supply their retail trade, as there is little, if any, profit now in packing at present prices of hogs in the country, and the bull talk is regarded as hardly warranted with the present light consumption."

WRAPPERS AND FLAVOR.

Interesting Information Regarding the Strength and Make of Cigars.

There is a popular notion, says the Epicure, that dark-colored cigars are strong cigars, whereas light-colored cigars are mild. There is absolutely no reason for this prejudice.

The filler of the cigar, which determines its strength, is the same, no matter what the color of the wrapper. For instance, if you take a black cigar, which you pronounce strong, and send it out to a manufacturer with the request that he place a light wrapper upon it, will it come back to you a mild cigar? We have an impression that the idea of color, as indicative of the degree of mildness or strength, has come about through the paucity of our language. A man originally may have asked for a light cigar, meaning one mild in potency, and, as time went on, the consumer probably used the word "light" without thought or reason, to mean both light in color and in strength when, as a matter of fact, there is no connection between the two uses of the word. There is, however, a real difference due to the wrapper in favor of the dark cigar. The wrapper is cut from the finest selected tobacco, and, to a certain extent, gives the fine flavor to an exceptionally good cigar. On the other hand, the very light wrapper may contribute a bitter taste, because the leaf, which is straw-colored, is apt to be over or under ripe.

The consumer will ask, "Why should this mere film of tobacco, which you say does not affect the strength, have any relation to the flavor?" For answer, let us suggest that the experiment be tried of passing a fine human hair through the length of a good cigar and then investigating the flavor. An extremely small amount of fine tobacco, such as is represented by the wrappers, will favorably or unfavorably affect the flavor, but will not make any appreciable difference in the strength.

Dark tobacco is sometimes strong, but this is not universally so, for cigars which are kept in Havana for any length of time will grow dark in color, and yet will become milder as time goes on, without loss of flavor. The same is true of leaf tobacco stored in Cuba.

Some tobacco planters, in order to cater to the popular prejudice in favor of light-colored cigars, have grown the leaf under shade, by the use of cheesecloth canopies. They have produced the most beautiful, silky light-colored wrappers imaginable, but they have not improved upon nature, for cigars covered by these wrappers have a flavor similar to those which are made with Sumatra wrappers.

A RECORD SAP PRODUCER.

Three hundred quarts of maple sugar sap in twenty-four hours—such is the record of an enormous maple tree in the town of West Leyden, Mass.

Although this wonderful tree is two or three centuries old, it still surpasses all of its competitors, and furnishes every year more sap than any other four trees in the grove where it is situated, put together.

The tree measures fourteen feet in circumference four feet from the base, and fourteen buckets are hung around it. When the sap is running well it is necessary to empty these buckets every few hours. There seems no reason why this fine old maple should not go on producing record amounts of sugar for many decades.—Exchange.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Business Dull with Fair Demand in Several Lines—Scattered Export Trade with Great Britain.

Quiet business is the report from millers and cereal manufacturers all round this week. The summer dullness has set in and while local demand is as heavy as can naturally be expected at this season of the year, the amount of business passing generally is light.

The corner in the oat market in Winnipeg and its consequent break-up provided about the only feature of interest during the week. While this did not affect eastern markets to any extent it showed clearly the position of affairs in the grain markets in the west, and some millers are predicting some interesting operations in wheat within a short time.

Some shipments of flour are being made to different points in Great Britain and Europe, but this business is mostly in small lots and is not of any great volume.

Farmers are bringing in supplies just about as fast as the market demands.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Considerable dullness prevails in this market. Trade as in other lines, consists chiefly of small orders. Prices are the same as at last quotation.

BRINGING SUGAR FROM JAVA.

Cargo of Raws Coming for B.C. Factory.

Advices from Vancouver state that the Norwegian steamer Tricolor is now on the way to the B. C. Sugar Refinery from Java with a cargo of raw sugar.

The cargo was placed on board at Cheribon and the loading process was slow, as it was brought to the ship in lighters and heaved aboard in rattan baskets.

Part of it was taken on at Samarang and Sowrabaya. These Dutch ports also export teak wood, coffee and indigo.

PERSONAL NOTES.

R. Smeall, representing D. McL. Brophy, Montreal, was a caller at the Toronto office of The Grocer this week. Mr. Small was also in Hamilton in the interests of his firm. "Dick" is an old friend and admirer of The Grocer and his visit was very welcome.

W. A. W. Melville, general American representative of Thos. J. Lipton, paid a visit to the Canadian branch in Toronto last week and also favored The Grocer with a call. Mr. Melville's optimism and hard work are proverbial and encouraging to his staff.

TRADE NOTES.

The Buffalo branch of the F. F. Dalley Co., are to-day entertaining the Leather Finders' Association of the United States at Niagara Falls.

The employes of the Ingersoll Packing Co., Ingersoll, ran a large excursion to Port Stanley, Ont., on Wednesday, July 8, which proved a big success. Games of various kinds were indulged in and with the pleasant surroundings the day was spent most enjoyably. One of the means of advertising the picnic was exceedingly novel. A few days before a balloon was liberated, attached to which was a ticket for the excursion. The finder of the slip was entitled to a free trip with the excursionists.

WESTERN FACTORY TO IMPORT RAWS.

That the demand for sugar in the west is growing with the increase in population is shown by an item of interesting news from Raymond, Alta., this week. The Knight Sugar Co., of that town, which heretofore has been operating on local grown beets, is not able to supply the demand and has decided to branch out into the importation of raw beet sugar. Arrangements have been made for a considerable supply from Germany, and it is stated that a large shipment is already on the way.

The quantity of beets supplied by farmers in the district has only been sufficient to keep the factory running for a few weeks. The new move will enable it to be operated for a considerably longer time each year.

PATRAS CURRANT RETENTION

Advices from Patras, Greece, regarding the currant situation, say :

"Although there are some complaints about the damage done to the new crop in some of the provinces, owing to the warm weather prevailing the last ten days, we do not know that the damage has amounted to much up to the present time. Supposing the new crop is safely secured and the yield reaches 170,000 tons net, the quantity which is considered probably as a maximum, it is certain that the retention will be fixed at 35 per cent. in kind for the entire quantity that is expected during the season 1908-09. In the period 1907-08 exports averaged 122,000 tons net. Taking as a basis a yearly export of 117,000 tons net and deducting from a crop of 170,000 tons net the 35 p.c. retention in kind, say, 42,000 tons net, would leave a balance of 128,000 tons net to be exported, or a matter of 6,000 in excess of last season."

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Canadian Orchard and Garden Products are Filling the Markets —Potatoes Scarce and High—Fish Steady with Good Business.

With Canadian fruit coming in in magnificent quantities and in various lines the imported lines are being forced out of business and little attention is being paid to them. Strawberries are still coming, though in curtailed quantities and in qualities that the dealers are not so proud of. But their place is being taken. Raspberries, cherries, gooseberries and red currants are beginning to arrive and will soon be plentiful. Though the fruit is plentiful, it is being rapidly snapped up and business during the week has been exceedingly good.

The feature of the vegetable market is the high prices of potatoes. New ones are coming forward slowly and supplies of old ones are pretty short. This, with a good brisk demand, means a strong market. Canadian tomatoes are coming in rather more freely and a good crop is looked for. Green beans are also in better supply.

The fish markets remained fairly steady during the week though business is reported good for this season of the year. Little shipping, of course, is being done to the outside towns and this cuts down the aggregate considerably.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Bananas have been in good demand. A local dealer, in speaking of this fruit, remarked on its increasing sale due to a wider appreciation of its dietetic qualities. Valencia oranges are a little easier now, being quoted at $4 to $4.75.

FISH—In some lines there is a tendency to advancement in price, although slight. Haddock is quoted at 5c, as well as 4c. Halibut is being quoted a cent higher for best quality. The same may be remarked of steak cod and pike. Salmon continue plentiful and price is low, but brook trout are still scarce. Haddock plentiful. Lake trout are becoming scarce, as is usual during July. Steak cod are in only fair demand. Season for lobsters closed July 1st and in future prices will be higher.

GREEN FRUITS—The Scott Street market has been a busy spot during the week with the large number of cars coming in daily and the hosts of retailers in attendance hunting up fancy goods. The run of strawberries is about ended. Early in the week they were scarce and higher. Now they are nearly done. The quality, too, has been rather poor all week. Raspberries are coming in somewhat freely, however, to take their place as are cherries, gooseberries, red currants and some blueberries. Not much attention is being paid to imported fruits, prices of which remain pretty steady, and with the larger supplies of the Canadian varieties two or three lines of these are cut out.

SALMON FISHING IN FULL SWING.

Sockeye and Spring Salmon Both Running on British Columbia River.

Fishing is in full swing on the Naas and Skeena and on Rivers Inlet, according to information brought by the steamship Vadso, which returned to port last evening.

On the Naas the sockeye and spring salmon are both running, the catch being 15 to the boat, and the same figure is recorded on the Skeena. Only sockeye are running in Rivers Inlet, where the catch is about 10 to the boat. Chinese and Indian cannery hands have been making their way to the canneries for the past three weeks, and the river and inlet concerns are ready for packing.—Victoria, B.C., Times.

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Truffles.

The word truffle is from the Latin tubor (signifying a swelling).

Truffles are an edible fungi, and may be called underground mushrooms—or, rather, vegetable tubers, possessing an animal rather than a vegetable flavor.

They seem to share the capricious nature of the mushroom in regard to cultivation, and are seldom found twice in the same place. A piece of ground that may yield a great quantity one year may be quite fruitless the next. They are, however, mostly found in loose soil about a foot deep, under or near old oak, birch or walnut trees, and are of irregular size, round shape, and dark brown color outside, while the insides may be brown, grey or white.

Those from the south of France are the most highly prized, but truffles are also pretty abundant in Italy, Spain and Holland.

In appearance the ordinary truffle is about the size of a walnut, with a rough brown warty surface closely akin to the potato, which it likewise resembles in consistency, though not in color.

They seem to grow in clusters, without roots, five or six inches below the surface of the earth, and, not yielding to cultivation, they must be sought for in chance places, from November to March.

In some parts of Italy the domestic pig is commonly driven out to the woods with a cord attached to the hind leg, and the holder of it observes where it begins to root; indeed, if not sharply watched, the animal devours the prize before he can be stopped.

Washing Powders.

These comprise cleansing crystals, dry soaps, extracts of soap, and soap powders. They are generally made up of 90 parts of soda crystals ground to powder, and then mixed with a small percentage of soap, and about two parts of either starch powder or borax.

The best of them have soda ash as their chief basis. Sometimes it is reduced to a coarse powder and stirred up with liquid size or a decoction of linseed, Irish moss or British gum, after which the compound is dried and finally recrushed and powdered.

Zante Currants.

The dried fruit, sometimes called Corinthian raisins, produced from small grapes of the variety Corinthiaca, about the size of peas, and which grow in clusters about three inches long.

Large quantities of this description are cultivated in Morea, Corfu, and other islands of Greece, as well as in Zante.

In the latter the fruit is grown on an immense plain, under the shelter of the mountains on the shore side of the island, where the sun has great power and quickly brings them to maturity.

When gathered and dried by the sun and air, on mats, the currants are conveyed to magazines, heaped together, and left to cake until ready for shipment. They are then dug out with iron crowbars, trodden into casks, and exported.—American Grocer.

AN EXPENSIVE DELIVERY.

It cost the grocery firm of Walton Bros. of Blaine, Wash., a little town near the western Canadian boundary, $488 to deliver an order of groceries valued at 40s the other day. A woman living just over the line in Canada sent to Blaine for two cakes of soap and a pound of butter. The United States town is but a few miles away, while the nearest grocery on the Canadian side is 15 miles distant.

The Waltons sent their wagon across the line to deliver the goods. Sharp-eyed Canadian customs inspectors caught them in the act and promptly confiscated the team and wagon, while the driver managed to escape over the fence to Uncle Sam's dominion.

The customs authorities tried the case against the absent defendants, ordered the team, valued at $300, and the wagon and other goods confiscated, and imposed a fine of $90. The Waltons, rather than lose their team and wagon, paid the whole amount. And the worst of it was, the woman who ordered the stuff called up the grocery and made a kick because she failed to get her goods. She was sent the money value.—American Grocer.

A PIECE OF CHALK

Time was when a piece of chalk was the accountant's most approved instrument. When a charge was made it was "chalked up." When it was paid it was rubbed out and there you are. Easy enough, but are just as simple. And ten thousand merchants in America and foreign countries consider them better.

Give them a trial. Begin in a small way if you like, but TRY THEM and see for yourself how much better they are than any other method of accounting.

The Plan:

If a man wants credit for $10.00 and you think he is good for it, give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign the receipt or note form in front of book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass-books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best. For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

Concentrate Your Energies

ESTABLISHED 1879

Down through the ages comes this warning:

"Do not talk a little on many subjects, but much on a few."

In some instances you needn't talk at all. Our brands are "a few," but they are inarticulate, and yet "do their own talking."

The only necessary preliminary is the introduction by the grocer to the consumer of

each selection by its name, and "the rest is easy."

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

Isn't It True?

that it's mighty poor business to sell poor quality at any price?

Take Canned Goods for example. You have to trust absolutely to the reputation of the packer. Therefore, it's a shortsighted policy to buy unknown brands of inexperienced packers, when you can obtain the very best brands at a slight advance.

Isn't it very satisfactory to know, that when you buy Canadian Canners' Brands you are guaranteed as to quality?

Isn't it satisfactory to know that you are buying Canadian Canners' Brands at the same price as your neighbor?

If you buy other brands how do you know that your neighbor is not in a position to undersell you with the same brands?

Isn't it satisfactory to know that you buy Canadian Canners' Brands at the same price as the largest Departmental Stores in the country?

Did you ever notice that the Retail Grocers who cater to the best class of trade always handle Canadian Canners' Brands?

Remember the brands!—(Aylmer) "Canada First," "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," (Bowlby) "Horseshoe," (Canadian Canners) "Auto," "Kent," (Simcoe) "Lynnvalley," (Delhi) "Maple Leaf," (Boulter) "Lion." "Thistle," (Lalor) "Grand River," (Lakeport) "White Rose."

Consider the Quality!

That's what counts most with your customers. They are unacquainted with the packers and they hold YOU responsible for the quality of the goods you sell.

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND

Is the Highest in Quality

The profitable results achieved by scores of Canada's most progressive grocers prove that Old Homestead Brand draws customers by its supreme quality. Our policy of using only the finest grades of fruits and vegetables, and of packing in the most approved of up-to-date methods, is a protection which it pays YOU to take advantage of.

THE LEADING JOBBERS are handling Old Homestead Brand.

QUALITY TALKS

are often spoken of in a boastful way, but confirmation of the claims made is frequently lacking. The history of "SALADA," the figures of our increases published in this paper from time to time, contain sufficient tangible proof of our claims. "SALADA" has stood the test of time, the test of the severest competition and, above all, the SALES TEST, tests which have won for thousands of grocers a large and profitable tea trade, to the detriment of the tea peddler, a fact which says more for "SALADA" quality than anything we can say.

Does any other tea you are selling possess such qualities?

Will they stand the test?

THE TIME TO SELL "SALADA" IS WHEN YOU WANT MORE BUSINESS. TRY IT. NOW.

Make Money out of Flies

It's time to even things up, because you've been losing money on them by spoilage of goods and annoyance to customers.

Brown's Famous "Fly Coil"

EASY! VERY EASY!

To account for the success of Red Rose Tea is easy, very easy.

FIRST,—The tea is good and has always been good honest value, better than most people have been accustomed to.

SECOND,—The Retail Grocers and their Clerks have always taken the most friendly interest in Red Rose Tea,—perhaps because I have the most cordial, friendly feeling toward them and am always glad of an opportunity to express it.

What rubbish to talk of "forcing a merchant to sell your goods." The merchant that can be forced is not worthy of the name. His influence with his customers is greater than that of any advertising, but the right kind of advertising will help the friendly merchant and clerk toward greater success.

This is where Red Rose Tea and Red Rose advertising come in. They help the merchant increase his business.

If you are not handling this tea will you write me a friendly note of inquiry?

Pickle-ology

means the science of making pickles. The idea that pickle making can be done in a hap-hazard sort of way is responsible for the mass of poor pickles which floods the market, and the idea that pickle-making should be conducted along scientific lines is responsible for OZO PICKLES. It would take a volume to adequately describe the Ozo Pickling Process, and another one to describe the Ozo Jam Making and Preserving Process. But in each case they are a really scientific process wherein handling is reduced to a minimum and uniform flavor and purity absolutely assured.

Grocery News From Coast to Coast

Quebec and Eastern Province Notes.

First New Potatoes in St. John—Marke t Notes From Prince Edward Island—Window Dressing Hi nts From Montreal.

ST. JOHN.

July 13.—Business, as is usual at this time of year, is rather quiet, and probably will be so for the remainder of the month. There is not much change in the markets. Sugar looks firmer in New York, but is unchanged here, as yet. Flour is expected to remain at present figures for a time. Molasses is likely to advance, as stocks are small and dealers are asking pretty stiff prices. Lard is up a quarter cent.

The first new potatoes of the New Brunswick crop were received last week, also the first consignment of blueberries. Strawberries are coming in plentifully and have been selling as low as 4 and 5 cents a box wholesale. The crop has been a very good one.

Chas. H. Peters, G. E. Barbour, S. A. Jones and W. C. Cross, of St. John, and A. A. Sterling, of Fredericton, were in Halifax on July 8 attending a meeting of the Maritime Wholesale Grocers' Exchange. The meeting was held in the Board of Trade rooms, and was very interesting. The members feel that an advance has been made in the past year, and all are optimistic for the future. The next meeting will be held in St. John. The following are the new officers: President, L. M. Smith, Halifax; Vice-President, Geo. E. Barbour, St. John; Second Vice-President, W. H. Aitken, Charlottetown; Secretary, A. C. Pyke, Dartmouth.

Letters are being sent out to the members of the Board of Trade advising them of the annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade, which will be held in Halifax on August 19th, and asking for suggestions as to subjects which the St. John Board would offer for discussion at that meeting, and also asking for the names of members who will be able to attend the meeting as delegates from the St. John Board. No effort is being spared by the committee in charge of the matter, to have a large and influential delegation go from St. John as questions are certain to come up at the meeting which will be of great importance to St. John and New Brunswick, and the St. John Board will need all the assistance it can get from its members as delegates.

Mayor Bullock has received word from Hon. Mr. Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, that it is too late to do anything this session with the bill to place St. John harbor properties in commission. This has been a disappointment to aldermen and members of the Board of Trade who have been deeply interested in the proposal.

Merchants here are much pleased over the announcement that the increase of 25 cents per hundred dollars, charged by the insurance companies, pending the extension of the water system to Loch Lomond, will now be removed, as tests have shown an increase in the water pressure almost double what it was under the old system. The reduction will date from June 30.

Fire at Perth Junction on July 7 destroyed the store and dwelling owned by Mrs. Mallory. The loss is placed at $8,000, with insurance at less than half.

At a meeting of the Charlotte County Weir Owners and Weir Fishermen's Union, held in St. George on July 7, it was decided that unless the packers agree to take fish from the union weirs at union prices, on or before July 13, steps would be taken to protect themselves. George J. Clarke, M.P.P., a member from District No. 1, tendered his resignation, which was accepted.

MONTREAL.

July 13.—A grocer recently returned from the West reports the trade as good out there, but adds that he thinks in most cases the chances for a man in the grocery business are as good in the East as there. There was a time when the sections of a country which were being opened up presented unusual facilities for the trader, owing to its distance and difficulty of transportation and communication with the more settled portions of a country. Nowadays, no sooner is a new country discovered than we have the railway and the telegraph connecting it with the great centres, therefore comparative isolation avails nothing and outside competition is soon felt.

In conversation with a grocer who has met with considerable success in his window displays, he expressed the idea that to obtain the best results it was necessary to make the display as simple as possible. He states it is a mistake to fill the window with a promiscuous collection of stock with no indication of a definite idea or scheme. He also drew attention to the necessity of displaying strictly seasonable goods as they are sure to command attention and bring sales.

W. J. Brown, corner of St. Catherine and St. Mark Streets, is spending his holidays at Rawdon, Que. A. C. Sargent is in charge during his absence.

S. Carsley & Co. have installed a new coffee grinder which will prove a valuable addition to the coffee department. This new machine can be adjusted to grind the coffee in seven different sizes from a very fine to a very coarse grain.

J. A. Beaudry, Secretary Retail Grocers' Association, attended the picnic of the association at Joliette on Wednesday, July 8th.

GEORGETOWN, P.E.I.

July 11.—The country is crying for rain. For three weeks we have had none, and this is one of the hottest summers on record. The splendid start the crops got, however, is saving the situation. If the rain does not hold off too long the island will be blessed with another bumper crop.

Strawberries are now flooding the market and the quality has never been better. The price is 10c per box or three for a quarter. In conversation with some of the largest fruit growers in the province, The Grocer learns that all indications point to a very large yield, indeed.

Business is very good, although it can hardly be said to be up to last year's record. Collections for July are so far very good, and customers are paying more cash and charging less. The signs of the times indicate that the days of credit are passing.

Butter is coming in quite plentifully. The price ranges from 18c to 22c. Eggs are selling at 14c. Potatoes have dropped to 25c.

Say, Mr. Grocer, it's hot. Take a week or two or a month off. Come down here and enjoy the pleasures of a vacation on Prince Edward Island, where the nights are always cool, where the sea air makes you feel like a new man. Enjoy sea bathing and have the exciting experience of landing some sporty sea trout. You'll go back to your counter or desk and make things hum. Come along and we'll treat you well.

SUMMER POULTRY PACKING.

The following instructions have been given by a prominent poultry concern for packing poultry in warm weather: Leave heads on and entrails in. Strong, sound barrels (sugar barrels preferred) are best for the packing, and the ice should be washed before using. Place a good layer of broken ice in the bottom of the barrel and then a layer of poultry, commencing in the middle and packing in a circle, with heads down, backs up and feet toward the centre. Then alternate layers of ice and poultry, filling the barrel to within six inches of the top, taking care to have ice between the poultry and the staves of the barrel. Top off with large pieces of ice and cover the barrel with bagging. This insures its being kept right side up.

If shipped from any considerable distance, put an extra large piece of ice on top, and if properly packed the poultry can be on the road fifty hours without injury. If heavily iced and shipped in a refrigerator car, it can safely be four or five days in transit.—National Provisioner.

Brandon Enjoying Weekly Half-holiday—Alberta Butter in British Columbia —May Subsidize Australian S. S. Line.

VANCOUVER.

July 10.—Butter from the creameries of the Provincial Government in Alberta is being jobbed here at 26½ cents, as compared with the local creamery at 30 cents. The Alberta butter is of very good quality, but does not hold exactly the same place as a table article as the local product. It is in fair demand, however. It comes in one-pound prints.

The advantage of packing fruit well is seen in the cherries that are now on the local market. The local varieties are not packed with that care which is noticed with the cherries from California. The result is that even now when the locals are offered in large quantities, there is still a good demand for those from the South, although there is a difference of a couple of cents in the price. Californias are $1.10 for the regulation ten-pound box, while locals are 7c and 8c.

There is a scarcity of tomatoes here this week, and those who have had the hot house variety from Victoria have taken advantage of it and raised the price from $2.50 to $3. This occurs frequently, and the wholesalers profit thereby. Retailers have had to order ahead to get a supply. The Mexican tomatoes have all been sold, and there may be no more until the next steamer arrives.

Peaches and apricots have began to come in from the South, and are going at $1.25 per case. These boxes are supposed to contain 20 pounds of fruit, but they net 17 or 18. The quality is excellent.

During the month of June, the Nanaimo creamery produced the largest amount of butter of any month since it has been in existence, namely, 9,390 pounds. This butter finds a ready sale, especially in Nanaimo, where it takes precedence, because it is placed on sale in the stores before it is many hours old. Consumers are thus able to get it very fresh.

Effort is now being made by the Board of Trade of this city to have the Government of Canada grant the subsidy to the Australian line of steamers for a period of years instead of from year to year as has been the case for the past seven years. If this were done, the Union Steamship Co., which operates on this line, would put on faster and better steamers. It would mean a considerable expansion in trade, especially in cold storage articles. The cold storage capacity is now all used, and if there were more, fresh salmon and such like would be shipped from this side to Australia. Boats with cold storage are also wanted for the New Zealand route. The boats now running to New Zealand have no cold storage, and if these could be secured before next winter, that country would be a factor in the late winter butter trade, and would export here. Last winter a shipment was sent via Liverpool, and though a long time on the way arrived here in good condition. If it were to come direct, the West would have a good butter, in addition to the Australian, at a time when it needs it the most.

L. M. Hagar, who is in charge of the fruit distribution at Revelstoke, was in the city the other day, on his way to Mission Junction to organize the fruit shippers of that district and bring their shipments into the regular channels of distribution from the British Columbia producing fields. He said that six cars had been sent East already this season, and through the clearing house organization, better prices have been realized for fruit this year than could have been obtained in any other way. The last shipment of interior fruit, Mr. Hagar said, netted $2 per crate, while the Victoria shipment will realize $1.85 to the shipper. The careful methods of shipment and the concessions granted by the Dominion Express Company, together with the arrangements conceded by the C.P.R., make this possible. Special attention is being given to packing, and gradually the shippers of the Province are combining to place fruit shipments on a basis that will add materially to the fame of British Columbia as a producer of the luxuries that are so much in demand in the prairie country.

Roy C. Brock, Secretary of the Kootenay Fruit Growers' Association, is impressing upon those who grow berries for export, the need of cultivating the harder varieties. He says: "The soft variety is often the best for the immediate table use. It will often stand being sold locally. But, after all, the great market for our ranches is the Northwest, and the needs of that market must be taken into account. I have found during the last week or so that I have been among the ranchers that from six to a dozen and a half varieties, most of them soft, are being cultivated. It is quite possible, though not necessarily so, that the soft varieties are the sweetest, and from one point of view the best. Notwithstanding this, there is really only one point of view, and that is the selling of the berry to the best advantage. And the point of best advantage is the market in the Northwest, where soft berries cannot be shipped to." It is because the berries from Hood River, Oregon, which arrive here just prior to the advent of the locals, are much firmer that they are preferred by many for preserving. They are the Clark's seedling, and even as a table berry sell well until out of the market. The Hood berry arrives here in good condition and keeps so, and its value may be seen in direct comparison with the softer varieties grown locally.

William A. Sundheimer, representing the Ardath Tobacco Company, was in the city this week. He is here in pursuance of an extensive and aggressive advertising campaign, and the company will place its goods on sale here. This is an English fim, but is American in its advertising methods. Its chief brands are the State Express cigarettes, Quo Vadis Egyptian cigarettes and Ardath smoking mixture. Mr. Sundheimer's visit here shows the attention that is being paid to trade in the West.

W. A. Baker, of Lawson & Baker, grocers, Grand Forks, has entered the bonds of matrimony with Miss Mae Williams, of Republic.

B. A. Lawson, for many years accountant for C. B. Hume & Co., of Revelstoke, has been appointed city clerk of Revelstoke.

The death occurred at Victoria of Henry J. Brady, a member of the Brady-Houston Packing Company. He was a native of Hull, England, and for 23 years resided in Victoria. He is survived by a wife, three daughters and a son.

S. Shimamura, president of Dei Mara, of Yokohama, was in the city this week en route East, where he will study departmental store methods, preparatory to introducing a system in Japan.

Orders are now being taken here for Eastern canned goods, such as peas, corn, tomatoes, etc.

The fact that the Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co., of Stratford, continue to send in a car of their biscuits to Vancouver and Victoria every fortnight, is an evidence of the reputation this firm is winning and speaks well for the quality of the goods. This, too, when they only commenced selling their goods on the Pacific Coast a few months ago. They are not only doing well with sodas, but their sweet biscuits are also coming into favor. The fact that the goods come in in the Mooney Co.'s own private freight cars is one of added interest.

BRANDON.

July 11.—Business here is picking up considerably. Already the anticipations of a big harvest, "the best ever," are maving even the bluest of our merchants feel optimistic. Reports from the neighborhood received from farmers by your correspondent are very rosy. North of here the crops are very good; south, they are better. Barley is headed out and wheat is in the shot blade and although one hears of restricted areas where a few have been hailed, yet the total result will not be much affected.

The grocers have all signed an agreement to close for a weekly half-holiday during July and August. It was very gratifying to see them so unanimous and it looks as if this is to be an annual fixture not requiring the formality of getting signatures. Quite a number of the most influential would have signed for it to be continued throughout the year, were the clerks anxious for it. They are not. They would be more than satisfied if they had this boon for June, July and August and it is to be hoped that the first will be added to the other two next year. The grocers are all working harmoniously in other ways just now, but the fruit season will soon be in full swing and then no doubt we will see profits on plums, peaches, etc., sacrificed as heretofore.

It costs as much to sell these goods as to sell anything else, and we ought to get 25 per cent., at least, on perishable goods such as these. It is to be hoped common sense will dictate procedure this year and that we will get a fair remuneration for our labor these hot, sultry days.

Our stores are taking on quite a metropolitan appearance. The latest to put in Walker bins and fixtures is Wm. Dowling, one of the livest grocers of this province. The whole layout of the interior of his store would do credit to Toronto or Montreal.

The credit system among retail grocers here is not dead, but we believe it is "scotched" and the "long time," which used to be the terms, is now a thing of the past. Merchants can sleep better and look the grip-man in the eye with greater confidence than ever. Why not as a body adopt a cash basis?

Several Jolly Picnics From Toronto—Barrel vs. Bag Sugar in Guelph—Business Men's Excursion From Peterboro.

PETERBORO.

July 14.—Saturday was one of the best days for business the local grocers have ever had. Monday, the 13th, was celebrated by the Orangemen from four counties, in addition to Peterboro county, and with 15,000 visitors to feed, as well as the same number of citizens, the hotels, boarding houses and temporary eating houses made big demands on the grocers. Saturday was, therefore, a great day for them. On Monday, however, it was different. There was nothing doing in the grocery line. Fruits sold exceedingly well.

The strawberry season in Peterboro is now passed. The sales were particularly brisk this year, the demand being a little better than the supply. Although there are considerable quantities of strawberries grown in this vicinity, the supply is altogether inadequate for local trade. One groceryman remarked that if the citizens of Peterboro had to depend on the supply here strawberries would have been 40c per box. Raspberries have taken their place. They are retailing at 15c per box and the price promises to be high this season. The crop is reported to be good, but the great demand all over the country will tend to maintain a steady high price. This, at any rate, is the opinion of local grocers.

James Eadie, assistant secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, was in the city on Tuesday collecting the annual fees from the local members of the association. The Peterboro association has about 75 members.

A business men's excursion was held on Friday afternoon of last week to Idyl Wild, Rice Lake. Only men were on board the steamer, and among them were several grocerymen. The day was a beautiful one and a very pleasant time was spent.

HAMILTON.

July 15.—The prices for fruit on our local market have run pretty high. Good strawberries about $2 a crate of 24 boxes, and raspberries $3. Black currants $1.40 for 11-quart baskets, prices that are really better than shippers have got in Montreal and other outside points, showing that the local consumer has to pay more right at the place of growth than the same goods are sold for hundreds of miles away. Butter and eggs are very firm at 23c in wholesale quantities.

There has not been much discussion as yet in regard to the new terms of payment made by the Ontario wholesalers. Probably some of the retail grocers will make forcible expression of their feelings in regard to paying net for their goods, when they see their statements on the 1st of August. In the long run it may be all right, but it does not offer much encouragement to the man who pays his bills promptly. The saving of discounts is a great incentive to the man who has the money to pay and keeps him in touch with those larger wholesalers to whom he has been in the habit of giving most of his business. It seems to me that the new arrangement will tend to the dividing of accounts and will accrue largely to the benefit of specialty houses, who can give the best accounts from the old-established firms that carry the staple lines. We must accept the fact that this question must have been thoroughly discussed by the wholesalers before being adopted, and possibly they would not be averse to giving the retail trade some of the reasons for adopting such a radical change.

The Hamilton Retail Grocers' picnic at the Falls to-day was, of course, a success from the start. Chairman John Forth, with his urbane manner, proved to be the right man for the place. Everything that could be done to please the patrons was faithfully carried out and the picnic of 1908 has been voted as the best ever.

The local travelers are planning for the holidays and the best wishes of their retail friends are going with them on their annual outing.

GUELPH.

The peanut vendor at the post office corner this week can show a lot of the boys in the grocery stores how to tie up a parcel, and do it neatly without any string. Take a look at him.

The half-holiday question will at last be settled this week. Last Thursday morning at 10.30 it was settled that all the outside grocery stores and some of the Main street stores, would close at noon, and they did, leaving six grocery stores open on Wyndham street, four out of the six being in favor of closing. Those who kept open were rushed to death looking for trade. The chances look bright for the half-holiday. Those who had the holiday last week had a very pleasant afternoon and evening at the O.A.C. campus, it being ladies' day on the street cars. There has been a genuine feeling among the public that the stores should close, and public opinion should at least be considered. Thursday will settle it for good.

The same old complaints are again heard about granulated sugar in bags. Most grocers continue to use it in preference to barrels. There was considerable trade done in the new cane sugar against the beet, but for my part, give me the genuine Montreal granulated in barrels and no bags handled and I can show you a larger profit and a host of better satisfied customers every year than handling any bag sugar. I have been laughed at a good many times for insisting on barrels, but if any grocer will experiment for himself he will find his best results are from them. Even if your neighbor does seem to be sending out a lot of bags, don't worry about that. He finds lots of time to worry himself. Keep on selling the $1 worth and give the best and you have got him and no doubt will get his best trade. I asked a grocer the other day, who handles a lot of bags, how he liked it. He said: "Don't mention my name, but I never see a load of bags of sugar drive up to my warehouse door but I swear to myself that it will be my last. But I continue to buy just because So-and-So does." I asked hom how many grocery stores he thought So-and-So ran. A good many apparently.

"The flies are a whole lot worse this year than last," said a well-known grocer the other day. "Don't you find it so?" he said. I did not agree exactly with him, as I know last year he was keeping his attractions for flies a good deal cleaner and not handling one-half so many bananas, which are a specialty for flies when not properly looked after. Then, this year in Guelph the banana trade is all 5c and 10c bananas, and when the price is low the waste is larger and not half so well looked after. A nice, big, fat watermelon cut up into slices and not covered with netting, which nearly always used to be the case, but is seldom seen now, is another great fly special, and a poor trade special. So far this season Guelph grocers are not keeping up with, instead of ahead, of other years in the annual fight with one of the greatest stock destroyers—the fly. We use sticky fly paper cut in small strips for the windows, and also Wilson's fly pads at nights and Sundays, and find good results. But they are not enough. The netting is a good bluff, as well as a help, as the customers imagine when the netting is covering any article you are doing your best.

R. J. E. McCrea, of J. A. McCrea & Son, has arrived home from the glorious west, having had a pleasant two months' trip. He, like other grocers from Guelph, who have been out west, still thinks Guelph is good enough for him.

The newspaper stories of lots of strawberries at 5c a box did not pan out in Guelph. Three for 25c, 13 for $1, or $1.90 a crate was about the best for first-class stock, and a great many missed them waiting for those 5c berries. Cherries are a good crop, and so far 90c to $1 a basket has been the ruling price. We expect to see 75c the retail price this week. Raspberries at 2 for 25c are in and farmers report a lot of early berries, but claim there are a few green ones to come on in the wild raspberries.

There is some talk of a grocers' picnic if the half-holiday is a go. Now, that is just what we need, and, after all this squabble over the half-holiday may bring the grocers into touch with one another and do some good yet. In other years it has not been the grocers, but a general merchants' picnic, with only here and there a grocery store represented. We have some of the best hustlers in the grocery business in Guelph at any kind of sports or picnics or anything else, bosses as well as clerks, and all they need is a little brushing up and we will be in the game with Brantford, Hamilton, Toronto, London and the rest of the picnickers. Now a hundred yard dash between Geo. Walker and Geo. Williams would draw a big crowd, with a few incidentals thrown in, such as an exhibition of going to sleep on third base by Bobbie Millar, and how the young ladies are trained out west, by Bobbie McCrea; how to drive a fast horse, by Messrs. Chittick, Worthington & Gow, and others too numerous to mention. We could put in one day all O.K.

OTTAWA.

July 14.—The Ottawa market last Thursday was one of the largest markets of the year. The recent rainfall has had a splendid effect on crops in general, and, as a consequence, the farmer hastened to make hay while the sun shone, and his produce was plentiful and in good condition. There was a very good fruit offering in evidence. Raspberries, gooseberries, and blueberries were there, while currants, cherries, plums and peaches were also a feature. Strawberries are dear again and scarce, this being, so The Grocer was assured, the last week they would be in season. Raspberries are selling at $1.10 a large pail, or two boxes for a quarter. Ten cents a quart was asked for gooseberries. Lemons have gone up in price, the average price last week being ten to fifteen cents. Vegetables were about the same prices as last week. Butter was a little dearer for the pail varieties, prices ranging from 23c to 25c a pound. Eggs are a little stiffer at 18c to 22c.

The movement for co-operative stores on the part of the National Trades and Labor Council is progressing favorably, and inside of a week or so it is expected that there will be a general meeting called to decide just what form the stores will take. It is possible that a general store may be started, or the plan may be confined to a grocery store, meat shop, or bakery, or the three. The various members of the National Labor Unions are being given an opportunity to subscribe for stock. The shares are placed at one dollar each, and there is a limit on the number of shares which will be sold to one party.

The clerks are again complaining that the early closing by-law is not being enforced strictly enough, and Commercial Union No. 1 has communicated with the Police Commissioners asking for an interview to lay their complaints before the Board. "We have interviewed the police before," said a grocery clerk to The Grocer representative last week, "and they told us something to the effect that if we laid the information they would prosecute. We think it is for the police themselves to see that the by-law is properly enforced."

At a meeting of the Allied Trades and Labor Association last Saturday night, a report from the executive was passed regarding the non-enforcement of the early closing by-law in the city. Some stores kept open until ten to televen o'clock on Saturday nights. It was decided to send a communication to the Police Commissioners asking them to have the city police strictly enforce the early closing by-law.

Thomas Reynolds, of the Quaker Oats Company, Peterboro, distinguished himself on Friday of last week. A party of young men had just returned from Aylmer in A. P. Johnston, the grocer's, launch, and had put the boat in slips at the pier at Britannia, when one of them, Chas. Buckley, tripped over the rope and fell underneath the float. Two other members of the party, Tom Reynolds, of the Quaker Oats Company, and Fiske, of Chicago, dived under the pier and brought their companion out. Their timely action extricated him from a very ticklish position.

Isaac A. Wackid, who for the past ten years has conducted a fruit and confectionery store at 187 and 195 Bank Street, died yesterday at his late residence, corner Bank and Gloucester Streets. Death was not wholly unexpected, the deceased having suffered from rheumatism for some time. Mr. Wackid was 43 years of age, and has lived in Ottawa for about 30 years. He leaves to mourn his loss a widow and a number of small children.

TORONTO.

July 15.—The employes of the Robert Greig Co. had a jolly time in High Park last Saturday afternoon, July 11, when their first annual picnic was held. About sixty were present and everybodv enjoyed what turned out to be something unique in the way of picnics.

The afternoon's sports were various, including a baseball match between the spicers and flakers.

A married ladies' race, a peanut rolling contest, for ladies only, a needle-threading contest, a wheelbarrow race, several other novelties, and last, as per programme, a "human race to lunch," open, with prizes for everybody.

The printed programmes, very unique in character, were one of the features of the afternoon. In outlining the afternoon's proceedings, a good deal of humor and many a personal pointer were worked in, which caused considerable amusement among those who knew. Badges were also distributed as a souvenir of the occasion. The picnic was well arranged in all its appointments and is to be continued the year following

The employes of Medland Bros., the Front St. wholesalers, played a rousing game of baseball with a team from Medlands, Ltd., the retail business, on Tuesday evening at Exhibition Park. The features of the game were made by the heads of the business, who joined in heartily. T. J. Medlands, in pitching for the losers, and John, in hammering a long home run out into the hay a mile or so beyond second base. The team from the wholesale house won, with a score of——, well, we promised not to tell it, though it's in the two-figure list. Now the other team are anxious for another chance, and another game will likely be played sometime in the near future.

The members of West Toronto Retail Merchants' Association, including a big representation of grocers, spent a glorious time in Victoria Park, Berlin, last Wednesday, July 8. The sports were particularly well conducted and were under the sanction of the C.A.A.U. One of the features was the committeemen's race, which resulted as follows: 1, F. A. Noden; 2, M. J. Tobin; 3, E. B. Wright; 4, W. Whetter; 5, Joe Gilbert. In the 100 yards dash, open to commercial travelers, E. F. Whittemore, of the Red Rose Tea Co., Toronto, took first, N. W. Williams, also of Red Rose, second, and L. McClure, of Armour's, Chicago, third. A large number of West Toronto citizens took advantage of the excursion and a very pleasant day was spent.

The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association took a host of people with them on their annual picnic to Niagara Falls and Buffalo by the Niagara Navigation Co.'s steamers this morning. A representative of The Grocer is along with them and the story of the outing will be given next week.

ELORA.

July 10.—The merchants of Elora set a good example to its sister towns on Dominion Day in having a monster trades procession, and never has a better turnout been given in a town the same size. Some fourteen of the business places were in line in the procession, the showing was indeed creditable to each, and being such a huge success, it has been decided to make it an annual event.

Several of the dry goods and manufacturing firms had very attractive floats, but the grocery trade was not behind.

Too much could not be said of Geo. Maben's grocery exhibit, which must have taken hours of study and work to prepare. His wagon displayed teas, coffees, spices, baking powders, breakfast foods, in fact, everything kept in the up-to-date grocery.

T. De Witt Mooney's float displayed to view four little niggers punishing to their heart's content "Neilson's ice cream." Sandy Kerr had a huge silent salesman filled with the choicest cuts of fresh meats, hams and bacon. Carswell Bros.' departmental store had a cariole filled with pretty little girls with streamers on each side bearing, "All Aboard for Carswell's Store."

The balance of the day the merchants devoted to sports, which were held in the Athletic Grounds, raising some four hundred dollars, which is being devoted to the band and the lacrosse team, two very creditable acquisitions to this enterprising village.

Owing to the press of a large quantity of other interesting matter this week, considerable correspondence which was late in arriving was necessarily held over.

Building Up a Cigar Business

The Story of the Remarkable Success of the Whelan Brothers in New York—A $3,000,000 Corporation of Tobacco Stores Built Up in Seven Years Through Determination and Unique Methods — A Hospital and Insurance System for Benefit of Clerks.

This is the story of the Whelan family, or rather of the seven Whelan brothers who in seven years have made the smokers and cigar dealers of New York City sit up and take notice.

Perhaps the most remarkable of the brothers is George J. Whelan, who is the head and principal brains of the great enterprise, and who, in spite of the most fervent prophecies of failure, has made a success of a scheme that on its face was visionary and impracticable.

The achievements of the brothers, it is admitted, are due to the facts, first, that they have ability, and, second, because all the others believe in George J. and are willing to follow where he leads.

Another remarkable thing about the Whelans is the striking family likeness. The brothers are all of about the same height, with similar characteristics and mannerisms, and any one might easily be mistaken for any other.

Most of the brothers are now high officials of the same company, but George J. Whelan is particularly interesting because, while the youngest but one, he is the president. He has very strong convictions and has evolved many of the theories that have brought the brothers to the positions that they now occupy. He is a great believer in advertising, and his company has spent $5,000 in a single day in New York City in advertising a card of thanks, without another word, to its customers, and yet he refuses to have his own photograph taken. A man who is himself the head of one of the greatest industrial corporations of the country has repeatedly expressed the opinion that George J. Whelan is the most capable business man in the United States.

A Commercial Romance.

Mr. Whelan's career is a commercial romance, tending to show the phenomenal possibilities that exist for those who are able to grasp them. Only about forty-two years old now, he invaded New York seven years ago with little except an idea, which had been rejected by the first men whom he sought to interest. The financial backing that he had was trivial. He began by opening a small store in Nassau Street, where the first day's receipts were $7.62. Now there is no lack of capital, his company has 405 retail stores, of which 183 are in the metropolitan district, and its sales were upward of $16,000,000 last year, when it was said to pay more rent than any other concern in New York.

While tending cigar counters up the State, Mr. Whelan came to the conclusion that the real opportunity in his line was in this city. He had prospered to a limited extent, but he had an idea; so he came to New York to test its merits. After a quick survey he was convinced that it would be profitable to scatter real cigar stores all over the city. He found that in some neighborhoods the only sources of supply for lovers of the weed were dirty little holes with a few cheap boxes in sight and other lines of trade in evidence.

Some were combination factories and homes, with babies running around the cigarmakers. Many were lounging places with gambling games going on day and night, and in a considerable proportion there was a profitable side line of lottery tickets, policy slips and hand books.

Worked on Original Lines.

His idea was to place attractive stores in every neighborhood and to appeal for trade upon a different basis. He spoke to veterans of the business, and they shook their heads and said: "It would do," so he went ahead upon his own lines.

The Whelans are eminently practical. The eldest, Michael, is looked upon by the others almost in the light of a father, as when they had nobody else to depend upon he took hold of them in turn, made business men of them and gave them a start. The surviving brothers are David, Joseph, John F., Charles A., George J. and Frederick A. Whelan. Frank Whelan died.

Michael as a boy enlisted in the navy during the Civil War. After his term had expired he went to Syracuse, N.Y., where, in the course of time, he became a member of a firm of cigar dealers and news vendors. Lewis has long been dead, but the firm name has been retained and every smoker in the Salt City is familiar with the "Captain Jinks" shop as it is called, on account of the wooden image outside, dating back to the period when wooden Indians, long the peculiar feature of tobacco stores, were giving way to other fancy designs, and when the song of "Captain Jinks" was at the height of its popularity.

When the boys became old enough to work they were started out to deliver newspapers long before daylight. The eldest brother made them go to bed at an hour when other boys were starting their fun. Afterward he took them behind his own counter and then he set them up outside. The only one who did not settle originally in the cigar business was Frederick A., who became an architect, and who subsequently, through having had a lot to do with the construction of the buildings for the Pan-American Exposition, settled in Buffalo.

Solicits Brother's Trade.

George J. Whelan obtained the cigar stand in the Vanderbilt Hotel, Syracuse. He was not satisfied to sell cigars to those who regularly frequented the hotel lobby and he began to solicit trade from the best customers of his brother's firm. Although Michael Whelan scolded him for his method of competition, he seemed gratified by his energy and helped him to obtain the cigar stand in the Globe Hotel, a very short distance from the Vanderbilt.

Under the name of the C. A. Whelan Company, George associated himself with one of his brothers and with Herbert S. Collins in the Syracuse Cigar Company to conduct two or three retail stores and a factory.

This company entered into competition with the jobbers of its section who were handling the products of the American Tobacco Company and who were bound together by what was known as the "factors' agreement." George J. went into the fight with ardor. It was the period of a mania for pin buttons with pictures on and he is said to have been the first to give buttons with every five cent package of cigarettes. He pushed a new brand with considerable success, cutting into the sales of the others in Syracuse.

Newspaper as a Venture.

In order to press his fight he began the publication of a newspaper, which he called "Mr. Puff," and which was devoted to bright paragraphs on general topics of the day, as well as to matters in which he was directly concerned. He then extended his business and opened stores in Watertown, Elmira, Troy and Utica.

George J. Whelan showed marked ability in handling real estate. Before he came to New York he had obtained stores in the very best locations in the cities where he was doing business. In order to obtain the places that he wanted it was often necessary for him to take leases a year or more ahead of the time that he could obtain possession of the property, and one of his early theories was that it was advisable to obtain leases of other property which he would not have occasion to use himself, but that he could sublet in order to keep out competitors.

New York looked "easy" to him when he opened his first store at No. 84 Nassau Street, in 1901. He and Mr. Collins tended the counter. Although he had been known as an opponent of the American Tobacco Company, Mr. Whelan concluded to change his tactics and to fill his show window with goods of their manufacture. He called his new venture the United Cigar Stores Company. He is said to have had a backing of $50,000 from friends in Syracuse, the principal of them being the late William K. Niver, who afterward became president of the Reading Railroad.

Talked With the Curious.

At the outset he adopted the shield emblem which has since become well known, and the method of dressing the windows which is typical of the business to-day. While he had no doubt of success, he and Mr. Collins were so anxious to get customers that they waited about the doors to converse with any one who seemed interested in their window display. They did as well as they could have expected, and soon arranged to consolidate with two or three other stores, taking those owned by David Rosenfeld, now general superintendent of the company, and a factory on the east side owned by Louis Biel, now one of the vice-presidents.

As the business extended it attracted the attention of James B. Duke, president of the American Tobacco Company. He sent for George J. Whelan and when he saw him is said to have exclaimed: "Another red haired man! I might have known it." Mr. Duke became interested in the scheme and his company took fifty-one per cent. of the stock in the retail business, giving the capital which the Whelans had previously needed. As they expanded George J. Whelan found that one of his greatest difficulties was to cut up to the best advantage the stores that he rented. This work involved great expense and the results were often unsatisfactory. He then sent for his brother, Frederick A., the Buffalo architect, and made him superintendent of construction for the company, a position that he still holds as well as being a vice-president. John F. Whelan has become treasurer of the company and the capital has been increased to $3,000,000.

George J. Whelan says that he is not in business as a philanthropist, but he believes in a liberality that insures loyalty and that brings direct returns. He has recently put into effect in many of the retail stores a new system which gives the chief clerk real control, as though he were actually the owner. The company supplies the stock and pays for the rent and light, but the chief clerk receives a percentage beyond a certain figure and may fix his own salary as well as that of his assistants, with the stipulation that the second clerk must get at least half as much as the chief, this being in order to prevent one man from keeping everything for himself.

Clerks Used Generously.

One of the imperative rules laid down by George J. Whelan is that the clerks must show the utmost courtesy to customers and must always say "Thank you" after making a sale. His idea is that in order to succeed in business it is essential to make sales in a different manner from that by which tickets are sold on the elevated roads and subways. He has devised a system of insurance for all employes, with a death premium of $1,000.

Besides this he has opened a private hospital for the treatment of all who are ill and arranged with one of the larger hospitals to have any necessary operations performed on his men free of charge. As an illustration of his methods, it is said that when he read in the newspapers one morning recently on his way from his home in Plainfield, N.J., that a young clerk in one of his stores in Forty-second Street had been injured while protecting the cash from burglars, he immediately sent his check for $1,000 to the young man.

John F., Charles A. and Frederick A. Whelan have luncheon every day together at the Hoffman House. They are usually accompanied by Mr. Collins, who looks enough like them to be mistaken for a Whelan, and by Charles R. Sherlock, another of the company's officials, who came here from Syracuse.—New York Herald.

MARITIME WHOLESALERS MEET IN HALIFAX

"Exchange" of Eastern Provinces Elected Officers and Considered Matters of Business—L. M. Smith, of Halifax, the New President.

Halifax, July 11.—Representative wholesale grocers from all over the Maritime Provinces assembled in Halifax this week to attend the annual meeting of the Maritime Wholesale Grocers' Exchange. The meeting was held in the Board of Trade rooms, and the President, W. H. Cross, of Hall & Fairweather, St. John, occupied the chair.

The Halifax members present were as follows: L. M. Smith, of A. W. Smith & Co.; H. G. Bauld, of Bauld Bros.; R. M. Symons, of R. B. Seeton & Co.; L. K. Payzant, of Payzant & King; Charles H. Harvey; A. M. Bauld, of Bauld Bros.; A. C. Crowe, and H. Crowe, of J. Frank Crowe & Co.; C. P. Wood, of R. B. Seeton & Co.; and Arthur C. Pyke, of Pyke Bros.

Those present from outside of Halifax were: W. H. Cross, St. John; D. A. Morrison, Amherst; Robert Murray, New Glasgow; A. A. Sterling, Fredericton; W. C. Cross, St. John; S. A. Jones, Sackville; George E. Barbour, St. John; C. H. Peters, St. John; H. A. Wood, Sackville; W. H. Aitken, Charlottetown.

At the morning session trade matters occupied the attention of the delegates, one of the most important questions considered being that of terms. Another important matter was a change in the name, "Exchange" being substituted for that of "Guild." The "Exchange" was never in better condition than at the present time, both as regards membership and finances.

At the afternoon session, St. John was selected as the next place of meeting, and the following officers were elected: President, L. M. Smith, of A. W. Smith & Co., Halifax; Vice-President, G. E. Barbour, of G. E. Barbour & Co.; St. John; Second Vice-President, W. H. Aitken, of Carnell Bros., Charlottetown; Secretary, A. C. Pyke, of Pyke Bros. Halifax.

At the conclusion of the business the members and a number of guests went on an excursion on the harbor in the steamer Dufferin. After sailing up Bedford Basin, the Arm and the Eastern Passage, luncheon was served aboard, and the party returned to the city at eight o'clock. The outing was enjoyed by all, the day being fine and the water smooth.

SWEEPING THE STORE.

Sweeping and dusting are the principal causes of dust damage to the stock; yet there are plenty of merchants who entrust this work entirely to green clerks—oft-times mere boys, with little or no instructions as to how it should be done. There is no reason why a green clerk, or even a bright boy, should not do the sweeping and dusting, or at least the sweeping, providing he is told how to do it properly. But the average boy little realizes the injury to stocks that can be occasioned by dust, consequently he thinks only of getting the floor in a respectable looking condition and little cares where the dust and dirt go to.

There are various methods employed for sweeping a store floor and keeping the dust well down. Some employ the water sprinkler, merely sprinkling the floor without sweeping. While this will keep the dust down while sweeping, the water causes so much of the dust to adhere to the floor that a good job of sweeping cannot be done, and after the water dries the floor is far from clean, and the tramping of clerks and customers over a dry, dusty floor will cause much of the dust to rise and settle on the goods.

The best method is to use sawdust slightly moistened.

An attractive prize list has been issued for the Nova Scotia horticultural exhibition, which is to be held at Kentville on October 7, 8 9. The exhibition is being held under the direction of the Kentville Board of Trade, the municipality of King's county, and the town of Kentville. The list of prizes, aggregating $2,500, is wide and varied, and arrangements are being made for an excellent exhibition.

CHANGING CONDITIONS IN HANDLING BUTTER.

A rather surprising situation is developing in the butter commission business in Ontario. Some few years ago it was the custom for farmers making their own butter to send their product to the general merchant in the nearest shopping centre or to some commission merchant in one of the larger cities. Now all this is changed, or rather is changing.

A resume of the butter situation during the past year will throw some light on the situation. The spring of 1907 was a late one, and when the weather did become a little seasonable there was very little rain. Especially was this so during June, the great butter month. As a consequence prices went up, but at that time there was no thought of the depression ahead. July and the following months were hot, and yet no rain. Nearly all grains were burned and when fall came there was hardly any feed for the cattle, and no money to buy fodder, even where that could be secured. Farmers, too, during the summer of 1907, attracted by the high prices prevailing for cheese the year before, turned much of their milk over to the cheese factories, and as a consequence the few who could and did make butter were well repaid for their trouble.

Now we come down to the present year of grace. All through last winter the retail grocer had to pay 30 cents and over for his butter supplies and the consumer grumbled at the grocer for the high price he was charged in turn, not taking into account the fact that the grocer was not to blame. There and then the consumer resolved he would not be bitten the next season. When summer again rolled round and prospects were bright, fields were green and the butter season came in, the farmers all took to making butter, hoping to reap the big profits missed the past year. The consumer, too, thinking of the past winter, went to the farmer to buy, instead of to his grocer and his commission merchant, who had been supplying his needs in the past, and thus a speculative situation developed. The farmer who had been sending his butter to the nearest general merchant or commission man, now sits at home, while the merchant, commission man, and consumer go to him to buy, and, in fact, compete, as to the highest price to be paid. All this time butter prices have been high, abnormally high, too high for export, and almost too high for packing. Some packing, however, is being done by the commission man, but what the consumer is doing to keep it is left to the readers' speculation.

And now comes the case for the country merchant. What is he doing to keep the trade which is his by right? He ought not to let this business filter through his fingers, but should strive to keep the trade which is properly his. There is one thing he can do. He can make his store attractive to the farmer (for rest assured the present situation is unusual and will not last) and should make it a convenient meeting place for the farmers' friends. He might have a little tea room attached to his store which would serve as a magnet to draw the farmer and butter-maker to his establishment. The farmer appreciates, as do the rest of us, visits to the place where he will meet his friends, and if he can combine business with these pleasant outings there is not much else to be desired. The country general merchant and the commission man have done much to relieve the farmer and butter-maker of their business worries in the past and they can do so again. Trade conditions are continually changing, but the merchant with his eyes open to business opportunities is always ready to meet changing conditions.

TOBACCO IN WESTERN ONTARIO.

The tobacco situation in the western counties of Kent and Essex has of late attracted much attention, particularly in view of the Dominion Government's legislation providing for the same stamp being used for both home grown and imported tobacco.

The consensus of opinion is that not for many years has so little tobacco been grown as in 1908. Last year there was a heavy production and the bottom dropped out of the market. This spring growers who had been holding their product for higher prices were glad to take 4c. or even 3c. a pound. This year farmers are growing tomatoes for the canning factories, or sugar beets for the Wallaceburg and Mount Clemens sugar companies. These crops, with contracts signed in advance, afford a certainty of returns. According to many growers, there is no certainty in tobacco.

Hitherto the tobacco grown in this district has been almost entirely for chewing purposes; by far the larger proportion has been Burley. Cigar leaf tobacco, successfully grown in Quebec, has been scarcely attempted here. Much of the growing has been unscientific and a quality of leaf poor even for Burley has resulted. There have been startling variations in price. In one year little tobacco would be grown except by those who made a profession of it, and therefore understood the growing and, more important still, the curing of the weed. As a consequence, the general quality would be excellent and prices high. High prices would tempt into the field an army of unskilful growers, who understood no more about tobacco growing than that there was money in it, and the ensuing year would see every farm and every garden dotted with tobacco patches. An overproduction of tobacco, much of it of poor quality, would result, and prices would drop almost instantaneously to the vanishing point. The third year only the professional growers would be in the field and prices would rise. This see-saw, big crop and small prices, small crops and big prices, has gone on for years, with little variation.

As a result, those growers who have kept on year after year, and have consequently learned the business thoroughly and scientifically have been in a minority. Reasonable stability of prices, so essential to the building up of a great industry, has been lacking. Unskilful growers, tempted into the business by high prices, with no notion that quality has also been an essential, have at times demoralized the market. As a result, the growth of the common Burley tobacco has received a hard blow.

The manifest remedy for this condition of affairs is the growth of a higher quality of tobacco, suitable for cigar manufacture. Spanish Zimmer is suggested, and samples already grown have been pronounced excellent, fully equal in quality to the imported leaf. The Essex peninsula—including part of Kent—seems to possess suitable soil and sufficiently favorable climatic conditions. Ernest Bailey, who has recently started a cigar factory in Kingsville, is authority for the statement that tobacco of the required grade can be successfully grown here. This view is confirmed by Mr. Barlow, a London, England, tobacco man, who is now studying the field with a view to creating a trade with England in the Canadian grown product.

Lack of adequate knowledge as to the best methods of drying and curing the leaf has had a hampering effect on the industry in the past.

There seems every reason to believe that cigar leaf tobacco can be successfully grown here. What is needed is a greater willingness on the part of growers to experiment, and the application of scientific principles to a trade which, to be successful, must be treated as a science.

MONEY-MAKING DEPARTMENTS.

In another column a very interesting story is reproduced from the New York Herald. It tells how the seven Whelan brothers have built up 405 stores and a three million dollar business in seven years in New York City in cigars alone. From time to time during the last six or seven years, The Grocer has been educating the retail merchants, and particularly those in the smaller centres, to make a specialty of cigars. This shows that The Grocer has been working on the right lines. The experience of a number of retailers who have taken up our suggestion is a further proof. This is one department of work to which The Grocer in the last few years has been devoting attention—the adding of small departments and features to the regular business which will make money and draw custom. We Canadians are extremely conservative people. It takes a long time to move us, but The Grocer believes that every live retailer in the country will eventually put in this department.

Oddly enough, there is one subscriber who does not approve of our policy of suggesting plans by which more money can be made. He discontinued his subscription on this account. If he sold more goods, he would be helping the manufacturer. When questioned by our representative, he admitted it would also help himself. Fortunately there are few men like him. They are in the class with the man who was criticizing Rockefeller, and boasted that the oil king had made nothing out of him for he had used candles. His reply to his friends' remarks that Rockefeller made $30 every time the clock ticked was: "For heaven's sake stop the clock!" There are a good many men like the latter who, refusing to put forth effort themselves, are bitterly jealous when some hardworking business man attains success.

Some years ago The Grocer had a firm proposition from a merchant in Oakville to pay for a copy for every retailer in his town if we would agree not to send the paper to anyone but himself, because the information he secured would give him so great a business advantage over his competitors that he could well afford it. After a heart-to-heart talk with the editor he changed his mind and went away wanting every man to subscribe. By shutting out his competitors he would gain a temporary advantage, but he realized that in the long run the perusal of a good paper would make better business men of them; they would learn something about the cost of doing business; they would not be price cutters; they would conduct their affairs on sane lines to make money and they would become broader and better business men.

THE SUBSCRIPTION NUISANCE.

With the advent of midsummer and the picnic season, the grocer and merchant generally is pestered with continued requests for prizes, for cash subscriptions and for donations in goods to help eke out the success of local picnics and excursions. This is a nuisance which in some localities assumes a particularly troublesome form, and which is only endured because of the fear of offending a number of customers.

Suppose the Presbyterian Sunday School in K—— is organizing a picnic. Jim, the grocer, is approached and asked to donate a certain amount of cash or goods to buy prizes for the inevitable games. If Jim is a Presbyterian, and if his kiddies attend the Sunday School, this isn't so bad, but as likely as not, if he gives something, a couple of weeks afterward along come the Methodists with a similar request, and the Anglicans and Baptists and Congregationalists, and all the other denominations follow suit. If he gives to these, and he can't well help it, the local lacrosse and baseball teams will probably take advantage of his generosity and ask for something further.

And thus the trouble goes on from week to week during the summer months. The evil, and it is an evil, is one that ought not to be countenanced. Though in a few cases it may work out so as to put the grocer in a better light in the community it has become so common a thing that this scarcely applies. In any event, it is not good business and we thoroughly believe that the grocer who refuses politely, though firmly, to countenance such requests will be a good deal better off in the end.

The Retail Merchants' Association has a scheme in operation in some towns to avoid such things which is said to work well. In the stores of the members are placed cards to meet just such requests, referring the applicant to the local secretary of the association. Through him they are again referred to the general authorities in Toronto, and the matter is usually sidetracked without further trouble. This scheme, or a modification, might well be adopted in a town where the subscription or ticket-selling practice is troublesome.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST.

The Western Viewpoint by our special correspondent.

Winnipeg, July 10.—The city is in the throes of the annual industrial exhibition and this year special interest attaches to it on account of the combined effort to be known to the world as "Trade Week." The exhibition has adopted colors, purple and white, and these will be lavishly used by all business houses in decorating their premises. Every business house in Winnipeg is sending out invitations to all its friends and customers in the country to come to Winnipeg for trade week. Handsome prizes are offered for the best decorated delivery rigs, the best decorated store front, the best decorated house, and the best decorated automobile, and $25 for the best motto to act as a slogan for Winnipeg. The spirit of camaraderie that is being developed among the business men of Winnipeg is not the least valuable result of this method of advertising the city.

All roads lead to Winnipeg this week and the merchants and business men generally are working shoulder to shoulder to see that people from outside travel those roads this week if they never did before, feeling sure that once they have been they will come again.

The situation of the growing crop is unchanged beyond the increase in reports of grain headed out which continue to come in from all parts of the country. The wheat situation as to market shows that wheat advanced just as far as it receded the previous week, mainly on a decrease in visible, bad weather in the winter wheat belt, and bad weather in Europe. A feature of the Winnipeg market is the continued fairly heavy receipts, which amount to about 75,000 bushels daily, and which go to show that there are easier things in life than estimating a short crop.

Already jobbing houses are beginning to feel the impetus of the prospect of a bountiful harvest and they in turn are stirring up the factories with orders. The general trend of wholesale trade at the present time, exceedingly encouraging for the end of the first period of the crop year, finds everything in very much brighter and more hopeful condition than last year, and business is increasing in proportion.

By the time the fair is closed in Winnipeg it will be possible to estimate to a great extent the conditions of trade for the coming fall and winter, but at present nothing could be more favorable for a very general revival in business of all kinds. The west has got its second wind and a good crop this season will have an effect that no single crop could have had in the past.—H.

THE GROCER OF THE GOLDEN WEST

How Western Business and Western Conditions Impress a Bright Young Ontario Grocer—Written Specially for The Canadian Grocer by Mack J. Ray.

Condie, Assa., July 9.—The land of vast priairie expanse, of golden sunsets, of beauteous scenery—the land of wheat, of push and energy—does this land produce the same brand of merchant as the far-off east?

Yes and no. It produces a man that has generally had the best training the east affords. It creates a man that unites this experience with the strength and vim the west gives, a man that stakes his all with this, his adopted country, and sinks or swims with it, generally manages to float anyway.

The western merchant has in the past so bound himself up with long credits that if the year is good he is in clover, if bad, in financial distress. Last year was admittedly poor, so slim that the storekeepers began to retrench, like the small boy who has burnt his fingers with a firecracker—he resolves never to do it again—till the next time. So with the westerner. Everywhere the cry is "Cash. Let us do a strictly cash business." But just as soon as the wheat yields bountifully, as it shows prospects now, then the farmer's desire to increase stock, land and implements, the merchant's desire for improvements, for enlargement, brings on the old condition of credit affairs. Cash, strictly cash, would hinder progress, and progress we must have out here, it's in the air. The very food we eat makes us restless, we've a full head of steam on and we must succeed or blow up.

I've never met a western man yet that didn't believe in either advertising or window dressing. In Winnipeg the Olympia Cafe, one of the finest there, which probably sells more fancy fruits than any other store, has a window-dressing scheme that could be profitably adopted by any grocer. They have wooden pyramids filled with shelves and boxes, and covered with an evergreen moss, which makes the fruits displayed always seem fresh and inviting. The piles are arranged so as to not interfere with the store lighting.

Electric signs are strong features in Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and the larger western towns. A novel feature is an "every minute flash of forced lightning" pointing out an illuminated sign.

In small towns the grocer has to carry a departmental store as a "side line," and one thing I've noticed, they are thoroughly alive to the necessity of showing goods and getting fair profits. It's really astonishing to see in a little "cow town," stores fitted up with Walker bins, plate glass show cases, cash registers, computing scales, refrigerators etc., as fine as any eastern store. It bespeaks the merchants' confidence in the west.

The tourist trade is a big item with all western stores. The traveler generally has money and is quite willing to part with it freely if the curios please him.

Western merchants as a class are more cordial to a stranger, more willing to talk business, crops and politics, anxious to learn and willing to teach from their own experience.

It does not seem to me as if the west offers much to a man already well-established in the east. It's so vitally different it would be like transplanting a hot-house plant to the garden—the change could be made, but at a cost of much discomfort. True, prices are high out here—they don't use coppers—but then, all costs are away up. The climate and air are bracing, however, there are less home comforts. But to the young man with health and strength and sufficient common sense to guide him, the famous advice, "Go west, young man" rings true, and if he has capital enough to start, and starts in the right place, nothing can stop him but bad luck in the shape of poor crops.

Back east a man has to prove himself before he is accepted to one's confidence. Out here, they accept first and prove you afterwards. Of course, they are hard if you fail to make good, but mighty generous if you fulfill their expectations.

Certainly a young man with capital enough to start in business back east should consider well before he decides to come out here. Weigh it carefully. Perhaps out west here would be better. It's a growing country. Grow up with it. Boost it all you can. It's bound to take you up with it.

In conclusion, let me state that a trip west is a splendid business education. It will broaden you, make your ideas bigger, and fill out your chest. Cut out business for six or seven weeks and let your partner or head man run things for a while. You'll never regret the time spent on the great, expansive prairies, the days at Banff, the experiences in busy, bustling cities. It's all good, it's all healthy, and you'll go home a man with energy for two years' work.

WRAPPING UP MEAT.

An exchange has the following to say about the wrapping of a neat package:

"If you work in a store where each salesman wraps the goods he sells, do by all means strive to make your packages the neatest. It is very embarrassing and disgusting to a customer to go on the streets with a package all mussed up in wrapping. Never take more paper than is necessary to cover the goods well, and in tying use only enough twine and don't place the ends of the string in your mouth to hold it; wrap it around one finger, and in wrapping, don't lift your package above the counter more than you can possibly help, neither get it down on the floor."

This advice is particularly adaptable to the provision shop where meat, which is a decidedly awkward thing to wrap up, is frequently carelessly thrown into a paper and given to the customers that way. The result is that the blood leaks through and makes a decidedly nasty mess of a customer's clothes, not to mention their temper. A little care and a good stout paper, with a bag to put the parcel in, will do away with any discontent on the part of the customer over a sloppily done up parcel. Even though the price of paper is high, it certainly will pay in the increased custom and satisfaction it will bring.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Sugar—Firm.
Beans—Continue stiff.
Tea—More activity.

Montreal, July 15, 1908.

Trade during the week has been only fair. Most of the people who intend leaving the city for the summer are away now, as the continued hot weather would exert a tendency to drive them to the country. Butter has gone too high to be an export product. Advices from the lobster fisheries report a small pack, therefore high prices in this commodity may be expected. Nothing of great importance has occurred during the week, which has been decidedly on the dull side.

TEA—A cable just to hand from Japan advises second crop teas are just about all taken up and also reports further advance of market owing to large increase in demand for home consumption, coupled with scarcity of suitable teas. Ceylon Pekoes have been in fairly good demand, likewise Indian Pekoe Souchongs. Some activity is recorded in gunpowders also.

SUGAR—There is an increased demand for refined sugar and as a result the market is firm. Conditions existing in the primary markets, in consumption and annual production, seem to indicate that sugar prices will be maintained at a high level for some time. Prices have not changed since last quotations.

DRIED FRUITS—There has been some demand for raisins and currants, with other lines somewhat neglected. Advices from California state that the greatest reduction in prices will be in apricots, of which there is a bountiful supply, and in fact everything is in good supply, except prunes, which will be considerably short of last year. It is felt that the prices will be much lower, but their exact stopping places are hard to determine, therefore, dealers are going cautiously in the matter of placing orders. There has been a futile attempt among the producers to boost prices, but it is thought prices will come to natural level based on the economic law of supply and demand.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—The local trade in rice has been fairly brisk during the week. Tapioca has been somewhat slower. An advance in the primary markets is anticipated in rice, although no definite cables have reached this side yet announcing this fact. Prices remain unchanged.

BEANS—The bean market is firm and a good demand has been its chief characteristic during the week. The stringency in the market is due to the financial depression, when beans are regarded as a cheap and highly nutritious food by the poor. The price continues around $2.15 to $2.25 although some lots have been offered at $2.10, but are now exhausted at this price.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—There is a good demand for canned fruits and vegetables. Canned fish has also been in fair demand. Canned meats have been somewhat neglected. The lobster pack for this year is smaller than last year, and it is thought high prices will prevail in this market.

TORONTO—Considerable more interest in futures has been manifest during the past week and a good many grocers are now buying somewhat freely. Last year's goods are going fairly well this week, particularly peas, corn and tomatoes. Tomatoes are said to be almost cleaned out, and the market will be pretty bare when the new pack goods come in.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Firm.

Beans—Stiff.

Future Canned Goods—Moving freely

Teas—New crop Indian offerings small.

Toronto, July 16, 1908.

Wholesalers report business this week as quiet, with few new features. The fact that farmers are busy with harvesting operations is probably having some effect on the situation, though some think everybody is waiting to see what will develop after the new crops are harvested. The next two weeks, with the grocery travelers off the road for holidays, will also be unusually light ones for the jobbers.

Local staple grocery markets are practically featureless this week. Beyond good business in sugar and rather better demand for teas there is little to note.

TEAS—Business locally is a little brighter than it has been for some months, and jobbers are buying in some quantities. In reporting the situation abroad, Thompson Bros.' weekly circular, dated July 3, says: "Although little change in prices has taken place during the week, the auctions have passed with a rather easier tone for the lowest priced descriptions while a somewhat firmer market may be noted for the better grades. The amount offered in the Indian sales during the past few weeks confirm our previous opinion that this crop would be closed nearly if not quite about the end of last month, so that supplies for the current month are likely to be less than the requirements. The offerings of the new season's Indian teas, though slightly increasing in volume each week, have been too small to warrant an opinion on the quality of the crop; but speaking broadly it seems fully equal to that of last year, and, judging from some musters received from Assam a few fine invoices at all events are being manufactured."

COFFEE—Business locally continues fairly good, with prices fairly steady.

SUGAR—With the brisk demand of the preserving season, business is very good. The jobbers have laid in supplies of the new brands, Imperial and Beaver, and sales of these are said to be quite free. The beet-sugar manufacturers also claim to be doing good business. Prices remain steady on local markets, though the position is firm. The situation in raws is outlined by Willett & Gray, as follows: "As regards the general condition of the raw market, all buyers are indifferent and inclined to leave the market quiet and steady at about current quotations. A good quantity of sugar altogether from the various countries, Cuba, Porto Rico, Java and Europe are available on the market when wanted at the basis of, say 3c c. & f. 95 degrees Centrifugals, equal to 4.39c per lb. duty paid 96 degrees test, which makes the offerings practically the same as spot quotations. Beet sugar opened and closed at 11s 5¼d and selling at 11s 6d in the meantime thus giving no special influence here. As regards the future of the raw market there is enough purchasing to be done the next 60 days to continue the market steady and firm, but not enough to cause any undue excitement. We reach this conclusion from an examination of the business to date and of last year to this time. Up till July 9th last year the refiners secured supplies in stock and afloat and bought for shipment approximately 562,000 tons, while requirements for melting for July-August-September were 555,000 tons, leaving for stock October 1st, 7,000 tons, plus whatever amounts were bought between those dates, which proved to be about 227,000 tons, inasmuch as the stocks on October 1st were 234,000 tons. It will be noted that the quantity of sugar secured for the United States early in July, 1907, was quite sufficient for the actual requirements for meltings, but not sufficient for the normal carrying stocks. Virtually the same condition exists now; the secured sugars in stock and afloat and bought for shipment are approximately 559,000 tons. With the same meltings as last year (555,000 tons) the surplus is 4,000 tons. Under present conditions, further purchases of 150,000 tons during the next two months would seem to be sufficient to provide a carrying stock for October 1, 1908. Cuba can supply 100,000 tons of this if so disposed, and Europe and Java the rest; and inasmuch as these purchases must come into the present crop values of beet-sugar, and not into the new crop value at 1s less, there is good reason for our previous statement that the necessary business to September 1st will be sufficient to warrant firm and steady values and without unusual excitement. Crop reports from Cuba show visible crop to July 1st, 925,397 tons, indicating a final total of about 950,000 tons. The weather is favorable for the growing crop, of which no estimates are yet of value."

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Business is dull, with no local changes. The following circular was sent to the wholesale grocery trade by the Dominion Molasses Co. last week: "Owing to the unexpected short crop of molasses at Barbadoes, due to the season having closed much sooner than was expected, as well as to the high prices which have prevailed there during the latter part of the crop, we find it necessary to advance the price of fancy Barbadoes molasses in puncheons to 35c per gallon from this date, subject to change without notice; small packages at the usual advance over puncheon prices." This has had no effect on the local situation as yet.

DRIED FRUITS—Little business is passing in these lines, all interest being centred in reports of new crop California fruit, which are expected to be considerably lower. Prices are steady.

TRAVELERS ON THEIR HOLIDAYS

The wholesale grocery business in Ontario will be comparatively quiet for the next two weeks and the retailers will be forced to get along without the calls of their genial friends, the grocery travelers. According to the arrangement made some time ago, the next two weeks, beginning July 20 the travelers of the Ontario wholesale grocery houses generally will take their holidays.

An interesting fact in connection with this is that the glorious old Drummers' Snack at Alton will be held on Friday and Saturday, July 31 and August 1 and that the travelers will thus all be able to attend.

CARMAN-ESCOTT CO. DISSOLVED.

By mutual agreement of the partners, the Carman-Escott Company, wholesale grocery brokers, Winnipeg, have dissolved partnership. The two former partners, Jos. Carman and W. H. Escott, each purpose continuing in the brokerage business independently. Mr. Carman is organizing the Carman Brokerage Co., and Mr. Escott is continuing in the business under his own name. Each is well known to the wholesale trade of Winnipeg.

Mr. Escott has worked up an excellent connection among the manufacturers and wholesalers of Winnipeg, being an experienced grocery salesman. Mr. Carman has been established in business in Winnipeg for a number of years. The Carman-Escott Co. has been a vigorous brokerage firm and many in the trade will be sorry to hear of the dissolution of the partnership formed in the early part of 1907.

WON "FLIGHT" IN GOLF FINALS.

Henry Wright, general manager of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., distinguished himself as a golfer at the final games of the American Golf Association of Advertising Interests at the Lambton Club, Toronto, on Monday. Mr. Wright won the third flight in the finals from E. M. Hoopes, of Wilmington, Del., who, by the way, is quite a noted golfer, by 1 up.

After the game, when called on for a speech, Mr. Wright made quite a hit with humorous references. "I attribute my win," he said, "to three things. During the tournament I have breakfasted on Shredded Wheat Biscuit, polished my clubs with Bon Ami, and have drunk nothing but Scotch highballs (Spaldings). The references were received with a good deal of appreciation.

THANKSGIVING ON MONDAY.

Canadian travelers generally will welcome the news that was announced in the House of Commons on Tuesday regarding the setting of Thanksgiving Day. In reply to an enquiry by Mr. Kemp, of Toronto, the Prime Minister announced that Thanksgiving Day this year will be held on a Monday. Representations in favor of a change from Thursday to Monday have been made from various organizations, especially from commercial travelers, and the latter have been officially informed of the intended change this year.

W. B. STRINGER & CO. DISSOLVED.

It was learned with some surprise by the trade in Toronto this week that the wholesale fruit brokerage business, which W. B. Stringer and J. J. McCabe have carried on for some years under the name W. B. Stringer & Co., at 34 Church Street, was to be changed to some extent in that the partnership heretofore existing had been dissolved. The dissolution took place by mutual consent on July 10th.

As far as can be learned, W. B. Stringer will carry on the business, and Mr. McCabe will probably occupy himself with other interests.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Chas. Rishor, grocer, of Peterboro, was in Toronto on Saturday and made a pleasant call at The Grocer office.

A. V. Davey, formerly representing T. Kinnear & Co., in the Peterboro district, will hereafter represent Medland Bros., in the same territory.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Reading notices under this heading will be accepted a 10 cents per agate line.

The trade is interested in requesting prices for molasses from the firm of Laporte, Martin & Co., Ltd., Montreal, before signing any orders. A word to the wise is sufficient.

The assortment of Canadian and imported canned goods carried by the firm of Laporte, Martin & Co., Ltd., Montreal, enables it to supply all wants. This firm is now booking its contracts for the new crop of canned goods. Its patrons can readily count upon the standard quality of the goods as much as on the advantageous prices quoted to all inquiring buyers.

CALGARY'S DOMINION EXHIBITION

Canada's Agricultural Progress Evidenced at Splendid Fair in Western City Last Week—Striking Exhibits from Various Districts.

Written for the Canadian Grocer by our Special Western Correspondent.

Calgary, July 7.—The Dominion Fair of 1908, held in this city, in the Province of Alberta, is now a matter of history. It is the sixth fair to be held under the direct auspices of the Dominion Government, and it is no reflection on those previously held to say that in many respects it was the best of them. On the face of it, it seemed impossible that a fair in any measure representative of the Dominion could be held so far from the Eastern Provinces, but the West is a country of magnificent courage, as well as magnificent distances, and Calgary Fair Board can now rest upon its laurels with the proud consciousness of having carried to a highly successful issue one of the most difficult propositions a Western town has ever tried to face.

Representative of Canada's Agriculture.

There were many things grown and made and bred in the great Dominion that were not on exhibition at this fair, but, speaking broadly, Canada is, and will be for many years to come, an agricultural country, and this phase of the great Dominion was well exemplified from coast to coast. There were herds of cattle, sheep and swine, from as far east as Quebec, and as far west as British Columbia. In fact, one of the strong features of the fair was the dairy and beef cattle from the East. In beef cattle the Province of Alberta was not as well represented as might have been expected, possibly because Alberta breeders have so recently gone in for finished herds, and this may have made them shy of running up against the satin-coated mammoths from the East, but in heavy horses, especially Clydesdales and Percherons, Alberta gave an excellent account of herself, and competition was very keen. Light horses, which were mainly confined to Alberta entries, were not strikingly good, as to a great extent Alberta has not yet gotten past the cow and polo pony stage. However, there was no evidence lacking that in the very near future Alberta will make a name for herself for both saddle and carriage horses.

Interesting District Exhibits.

Decidedly the most educational feature of the exhibition was the building devoted to District Exhibits. The exhibition offered prizes of $200, $150, $100, $75, $50 and $20 for the best exhibit made by any agricultural society or Board of Trade, setting forth the products and the advantages of any particular district. There were thirty competitors for these prizes, and their various exhibits filled from end to end one huge building. It was especially insisted on that exhibits must be grown or manufactured in the district exhibiting and must have been produced in 1907 or 1908. The districts were judged for wheat, oats, barley and other grains, native grasses, tame grasses, vegetables, fruit, manufactured articles, minerals and natural products, and also as to the artistic arrangement of the same. It would be indistinct to dwell upon the exhibits from each district, but that is hardly possible without taking up too much space. To old Westerners who thought they knew the country well, one of the great surprises was the number of points in both Saskatchewan and Alberta where timothy, clover and alfalfa are being produced, and that in large quantities. The number of districts growing peas was another surprise, while something like twenty-five out of thirty showed coal as one of their mineral products, and seventy-five per cent. of the districts showed brick and native building stone. Pincher Creek was the only district to show crude petroleum, and Moose Jaw, genuine fire brick. Medicine Hat had a large tank of natural gas which was operating a small steam engine, heating the furnace for a house and baking bread in an ordinary gas stove. In the evenings this exhibit was lighted with natural gas, and very effective use was made of Rudyard Kipling's story of "The Town That Was Born Lucky." Raymond made a fine exhibit of beets and beet sugar, while considering that so much has been said of the treeless prairies, it was surprising how many districts showed logs among their natural products and lumber among their manufactured articles. The following is a list of the competing districts in the order in which they were placed by the judges. Granum, Okotoks, Carstairs, Macleod, Red Deer, Cardston, Prince Albert, Pincher Creek, Leduc, Moose Jaw, Nanton, Didsbury, Raymond, Lethbridge, Innisfail, Ponoka, Claresholm, Olds, Vegreville, High River, Stettler, Regina, Vermilion.

Splendid Government Exhibits.

In addition to the district exhibits, three magnificent exhibits were put in by the Governments of Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia. British Columbia not only displayed magnificent fruit and tomatoes, but also a fine collection of mounted specimens of deer, bear, mountain sheep, and of both salt water and fresh water fish. The mounted specimens of salmon were especially fine. Saskatchewan, in addition to a very fine display of grains and grasses, native timber and fur-bearing animals, had an exhibit that attracted almost universal attention. It was on one side a display of Indian work in beads and buckskin, such as we are all familiar with, and on the other a display of exquisite needle work in the shape of under garments, splendidly made boots and shoes, including a pair of patent leather tops for riding, wood carving and iron work, such as hinges, horse shoes and the like, the work of the Indian boys and girls of the File Hills Indian Industrial Schools. Alberta, however, presented the most striking display. The hanger of the Calgary Fair, showing the cowboy suddenly finding a trail stopped by a barbed wire fence, and a field of wheat has become familiar all over Canada, but at this exhibition the poster was reproduced in life, There was the actual field of wheat, the covey of startled prairie chickens fluttering above it, a badger darting for his hole in one corner, and back of all the startled cowboy reining back his steed from the barbed wire fence. The actual field of wheat was not more than twenty feet square, but with the help of mirrors the effect of endless vistas of wheat was produced.

The "Made in Calgary" Section.

The "Made in Calgary" part of the industrial building was intensely interesting, and showed how rapidly manufacturers are springing up here at the foot of the Rockies. Calgary manufactures flour, breakfast foods, soap, extracts, iron goods, buggies and busses, lumber and wood finishings and last and perhaps most becoming of the cattle country where no man goes afoot, saddlery and harness of all kinds. There were saddles on exhibition that sell for $1,000 apiece. They are perfect marvels of tooled leather, inlaid with silver, gold and mother of pearl.

There is only one harsh criticism to offer on the Calgary Fair and its managers. There are a great many United States citizens in the city and they have contributed not a little to the prosperity of Calgary and of Alberta, though as a matter of fact there is $100 of British capital to every dollar of United States money invested in Alberta. It so happened that the 4th of July fell within the dates of the fair, and the fair management with a desire no doubt to have as many days as possible with a record attendance, committed the very grave error of inviting the American association to hold a 4th of July celebration within the grounds of a Dominion Exhibition, apparently forgetting that while to the Americans the 4th of July represents the birthday of their nation, to every Briton it represents the loss of one of the fairest colonies ever attached to the British crown.

The fair management further made the mistake in their desire to do all honor to their American guests of hoisting the United States flag, even with the British, instead of below it, as is always the custom with an alien flag. They also wore exclusively American flags on that day instead of wearing the Jack above the Stars and Stripes. In fact at the celebration on the platform where all the officials and directors of the fair were gathered, with the officers of the American association and the United States Consul, the only man who wore a British flag was the president of the American association. It is not by such tactics as these that Canadians will earn or hold the respect of United States citizens, and it is hoped that the action of the Calgary Fair Board upon this occasion will never again be duplicated in Canada. "Men Who Sell Things"

Salesmanship Not Altogether a Matter of Headwork—Sentiment and Heart-Promptings Are Important Factors—Dramatic Art Also Plays a Big Part—The Old-Timer and His Influence on the First-Tripper.

By Walter D. Moody Serial rights for Canada purchased by the MacLean Publishing Co. from the publishers, A. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

CHAPTER X.

The All-Head-and-no-Soul Salesman.

The riches of salesmanship depend as much upon what we sow as what we save.

The all-head man is like a sponge, absorbing everything and giving out nothing. There is neither much of sentiment nor of sympathy in his mental make-up.

We hear it said that the actions of one man proceed from his head, and those of another from his heart. This difference is usually pointed out by the man who prides himself on being "heady." It is well to be "heady," as the term goes, but there is such a thing as being too heady.

A salesman is too "heady" when he measures the value of every sale by mere head-work, and does not allow anything for the natural influence of the soul qualities; when he does not take into consideration the greater results which might have been attained through combining brain stuff with soul stuff.

On the other hand, a salesman is ruled too much by his heart when he disregards his head and either ignorantly or carelessly acts contrary to what sound experience has proven to be true.

Don't Neglect Heart Promptings.

Give heed to this, then: Use your head to make your plans and carry them out, but don't neglect the promptings of your heart, just because you meet with a few men who have more heart than common sense. Soul qualities, those which spring from the heart, give life to your plans and actions. Balance head action with heart action. I have known some very brainy men who were wretched salesmen, simply because they had neglected to develop soul qualities in gathering their mental equipment together. But you could not get them to see it.

The hardest kind of man to reach is the all-head man. "Stuff and nonsense," says he, when you talk about the soul playing any part in salesmanship. He waves you off with, "That will do for women and children, but don't talk it to me."

Strangely enough, failure is never humble.

That's because some one else is always to blame. We ourselves make our successes; the other fellow makes our failures. Failure, therefore, always thinks itself deserving of the success which it has not achieved.

The science of salesmanship involves the exercise of the positive qualities of the body, mind, and soul. The last is perhaps one of the most important factors in successful salesmanship. Practical psychology as a mighty motive power in business-getting is receiving marked attention on the part of intelligent commercial men everywhere. If traveling salesmen as a class were to set about the development of the powers and functions of the soul, such as faith, brotherly kindness, and reverence, and apply these in a practical way to the daily routine of their business life, the results of their work would be much enhanced.

On a certain occasion the sales manager of a large house called one of his salesmen to his office and said to him: "Mr. C——, you have represented us for two years in one of the best States in the Union. The results of your work have not been what we might expect. It is not our purpose to discourage you, but you have been two years planting seed down there—now for the harvest. We shall expect you to show largely increased sales during the next year.

"Now, let us examine the situation. You have an excellent territory, backed up by the strongest house in the world in our line; you have a personal asset in the way of general appearance that many men would give thousands to possess—a fine physique, a pleasing countenance, and a good knowledge of the business. But you lack one thing."

"One Quality Lacking."

"What is that?" asked the now thoroughly abashed but interested listener.

"Soul power, my boy. That's it. You remind me of a fine piece of sculpture I once saw in Rome. It was a statue of Moses by Michelangelo. The work was so lifelike and so perfect in every detail that the great artist was overcome, and in his excitement struck it a severe blow on the knee, as if to awaken it to life, and commanded, 'Speak, Moses!'

"Your work lacks life—life of a nature born of real interest in your customers. You must cultivate the qualities that will enable you to get close to people, permitting you to play upon the very harp-chords of the hearts of those with whom you come in contact. Learn to draw the sympathies of your trade to you, or you will never make your mark in salesmanship.

"Now it is an actual fact that men generally act more on feeling than judgment. If you make your customers feel like buying, they are pretty sure to buy, but if they do not feel like it they won't do it, even if they know they ought to. Your failure results from the fact that if there is no desire there is no possibility of doing business.

"Go out now and see if you cannot make your real power lie in your ability to awaken interest and create desire.

"Do not insist upon keeping yourself before your customer; bear in mind that he is not interested in you or your proposition. To make him care, begin as soon as possible by talking about his situation, never mentioning yourself. In short, show your customers that you are deeply interested in them."

Mr. C—— thanked his manager, and, departing, promised to act upon his advice.

The very first day of the following week recorded an order from him for five hundred dollars that he secured from an old "blue line" merchant on a line of goods that he had always bought in another market. He increased his sales that year twenty-seven per cent., and all other departments of his work showed a decided improvement. He continued right on the next year to grow in usefulness to himself and his house, in a way that he had not dreamed of.

The power to sway people is not altogether a gift, by any means. It can be cultivated. In most cases it merely requires an awakening of the soul faculties, as in the career of Mr. C——.

The great majority of salesmen have neglected this side of their education, either from ignorance of its tremendous power as a commercial and selling asset, or because they regarded it from an erroneous standpoint, believing it should be regarded as mere sentimentalism.

Similarity of Professions.

The work of the salesman differs little in character from that of the lawyer, the preacher, the actor, or the statesman. In each of these professions success depends on the power to draw and persuade people.

From a business standpoint, the most important self-knowledge is the discernment of one's powers and the possibilities of their development. One of the greatest of these is the power of attraction. Many a great statesman has attained political favors of the highest nature by his wonderful psychological powers.

Some men have the faculty of easily winning consent from the majority of their acquaintances; at least, to almost anything they propose. The essence of this quality is not in their logic—in the arguments and reasons with which they are equipped—but in rousing an impulse in the listener to agree to the proposition that has been advanced, before hearing all the evidence, which he would usually require before making up his mind.

Some years ago a remarkable demonstration along this line occurred in the city of Chicago, when from some previously unheard of western town there came William Jennings Bryan, an unknown Congressman, as a delegate to a national political convention. In him this power had reached a wonderful degree of development. It had an irresistible effect on most of the people who heard him. He did not have to force the acceptance of his views on the convention—the convention's acceptance was a matter of course so soon as he claimed its attention. The man from the west sprang into leadership by acclamation; he received the unanimous nomination for the presidency of the United States, putting all other candidates entirely out of the race.

Dramatic Art in a Salesman.

Psychology forms the very basis of dramatic art. It is that power developed to a marked degree in a minister of the Gospel that causes him to move and sway a great concourse of people, drawing them to himself as one man. Salesmen who have developed this quality, in relating experiences of certain transactions, often speak of having felt a peculiar power of persuasion that could not possibly result in anything but success. Let the salesman once taste it, and a peculiar longing to meet people and sell goods will fasten itself upon him, impelling him, like Alexander, to look for new worlds to conquer. He will then have come into full realization of what it means to exert the power of his soul functions to the fullest degree, and his success will be an assured fact.

Merchants will buy a bill from the purely "head" man now and then because he is surrounded with an atmosphere of seeming superiority, but they do not bestow on him large and continued favors. Somehow or other their sympathies are inclined toward the genial fellow who employs genuine wholeheartedness with his headiness.

One of the "headiest" salesmen in our establishment gloried in the boast of a twenty years' experience on the road. He was a past master at analyzing a proposition; a regular "stand patter" on system. He constantly held up his sleeve a dozen theories for the successful management of every branch of the business, from the shipping department to the office of the president.

He kept a watchful eye on every one about the place. For any one to make a mistake was with him an unpardonable sin. If an error occurred in any department, he went railing and fuming about, unmindful of the fact that his business was that of selling goods; forgetting in his uncharitableness, or rather, perhaps, never having known, that the man who never made a mistake never made a success of business.

"The Man Without Sunshine."

There was a certain geniality of facial expression about this mathematically correct stickler for precise business methods, but there was no sunshine in his soul. He never spoke a kind, helpful word to any one or about any one. He had no sympathy in common with his fellowmen, not the faintest conception of the life-giving precepts founded on the brotherhood of man.

While still a young man, in place of crowning each successive year with increasing sales, he became soured and embittered, on finding his annual sales falling off and his salary cut down. This same man might have been a power in his profession, had he but known and applied the A B C of practical psychology in the daily routine of his work.

The brand of salesmanship that pays is the sort that plants the seed of the brotherhood of man in the soul, cheeriness and gentleness in the voice and manner, charity toward others in the thoughts, and a sympathetic, wholesouled genuineness in the hand-shake. There is no better selling-asset on earth.

The all-head and no-soul salesman must learn to mix soul stuff with his "grey matter," if he ever expects to achieve lasting results.

CHAPTER XI.

The Old-Timer.

Don't get your headlight behind; reminiscence means stagnation.—Elbert Hubbard.

Next to being turned doen in his first town, the youthful first-tripper encounters no greater discouragement that that of his initial meeting with the professional pessimistic old-timer, with his perpetual grouch.

A few words with this grumbler cause the young man to feel the whole world of salesmanship is a dismal slough; that nowhere in the great desert of commercial life is there a single oasis where the dusty, travel-stained wayfarer may rest his tired limbs and take fresh hope with which to renew his arduous journey. Nothing in the wide, wide world is as good as it used to be; everything is on the highway to perdition. If some good genie could only come along and by a wave of the hand and a "Presto, change" turn the whole business world backward twenty-five or thirty years to where it was when he first took up his gripsack, then the traveling man would have a fair chance.

Troubles of the Pessimist.

Where is the commercial traveler who has not encountered him and given him a wide berth? He is to be seen in the hotel lobby, disputing his bill with the clerk because something or other went wrong. Next he is found quarreling with the baggage agent at the depot for charging too much excess on his trunks. In the smoking compartment of the train he is telling the boys—if he is fortunate enough to have any listeners—that business has gone to the dogs, and that a traveling man's life at best is nothing but a weary pilgrimage.

If he has a beaten path, he is soon singled out as a bore and left to himself. For the same reason he loses business, his customers finding pleasure in giving their favors to the man who approaches with a light step and a cheery smile.

Not all old-timers are of this class by any means, but there are enough of them to warrant a passing glance at the type. The best thing for any young man to do is to leave him severely alone to continue his grumbling where no harm may be done.

No character is more beautiful in the business world than the man's of advanced years who has come all the way down through the trials and uncertainties of a busy career and preserved a cheerful disposition and optimistic temperament, keeping step with all the changes that betoken progress in any line of industry.

You cannot go forward to any prize without leaving behind many things that seem desirable.

Pessimism dwarfs and dries up the soul; it kills ambition.

Honest admiration for progress is an incentive to good work; it develops and gives strength to all the ambitions.

Among commercial travelers there are many men of actual ability whose entire lives have been thrown away because of their bitter hatred for and constant opposition to progress of any sort. A habit of mind once formed is hardly ever lost; and there is no more common habit, unfortunately, among this class than that of envy and bitterness toward innovations. Among salesmen how many words are wasted in decrying the real worth of others! A successful salesman, old or young, is too busy to think of changing times or of what others are doing, unless it be to look occasionally with approval and admiration at the progressive and the successful and say, "I am glad that times are growing better," or "I am pleased he is doing so well. I shall try to improve also."

Do we not all know instinctively, as soon as we hear a man talk optimistically or praise another freely and highly, that the man who talks thus is himself on the right track? And do we not all know that the man criticizing, attacking and belittling real effort is small, and growing smaller?

Unless the heart is light, we cannot keep pace with the times.

"Bigotry puts blinders on the best of men."

The Value of Keeping Step.

The value of keeping step is humorously illustrated in a story I once heard Alexander H. Revell, a prominent Chicago merchant and public-spirited man, tell on himself.

In the year 1877 he joined a regiment of state militia. On a certain public occasion before Mr. Revell had graduated from the awkward squad, the regiment turned out on dress parade, he being given the end of a line in the march. He had a maiden aunt with soldier blood in her veins, inherited from colonial days. She, with others, had a prominent place in the store window facing the line of march. As the regiment appeared, her enthusiasm knew no bounds. The old-time spirit fired her blood, as she fairly glowed with satisfaction, commenting on each company as it passed. When the company arrived in which her nephew was marching, she was observed to wear an expression of perplexity, and was heard to remark: "Look! look at that company! Every single man is out of step except my nephew Alexander."

The trouble with every old-timer who is out of tune with the universe is that he thinks everything in it is out of step and out of harmony but himself.

While engaged in a special line of work in connection with the Chicago Commercial Association I once had occasion to call to arms a large number of business men in that city eligible to membership. Among the hundreds of replies received there was one from a man old enough to be my grandfather that set my red corpuscles to tingling. It is the best illustration of optimism in old age that I have ever encountered. In the hope that it may inspire every young man, as it did the author, I publish the letter verbatim.

"My Dear Sir:

"Your kind invitation to become one of the Bully, Busy, Brother Boosters is received, and I am exceedingly sorry to have to send regrets, only on account of my financial inability.

"Yes, I attended the Goodfellowship Supper and took great delight in the many good things that were said about Chicago, and to see the determination of that magnificent body of live men, live workers, showing they were all connected with a live wire, and would make

Chicago a good place to live. I first saw Chicago the year that Mr. Wacker said he was born—1856.

"My heart is with you, and what influence I have shall be used toward making Chicago a greater Chicago, and in doing what I can to improve the condition of my fellowmen.

"I have been closely associated with the wholesale grocery trade of Chicago and the entire Northwest for fifty years, and, though seventy-one years old, am an active, live broker, working every day in the year.

"The old man with the napkin in his hand, opposite the word 'ciation' in the lower left hand corner of your 'Appeal to join the Legion,' is me. I just got in by the skin of my face."

The last paragraph of this remarkable letter refers to his attendance at the Goodfellowship Supper.

Progress Through Forgetting.

Our progress is made by what we forget as well as by what we remember. Too many of us remember the wrong things. We need to learn what to forget. We all dislike to remember that we are sometimes wrong and need to be straightened out. It hurts to have the kinks taken out. Of course you have no kinks; but your neighbor has—we've heard you say so. Well, then, it's a good thing to get a picture of your neighbor. It will help you to learn how he can be straightened. That's a matter of vital importance.

Diplomacy above all other things should become more deep-seated with the salesman who has long served in the harness.

The salesman who is a born diplomat has much to thank the fates and his parents for; but what is still lacking in his princely heritage may be acquired, like many other valuable qualities; without it the salesman is like a ship without a rudder, caught in the trough of the sea of commercial competition.

Reduced to its lowest terms, diplomacy is just plain, good horse sense.

What Diplomacy Is.

A diplomat is a man who jumps from in front of a moving train. He does not put dynamite in his oven to dry. He has due respect for the hind quarters of a strange mule. He reins up on perceiving a red light in the centre of the road. He talks to the point when he addresses a brusque business man. He does not feed the animals at the circus. He believes in to-day, and that to-morrow is worth only twenty-four hours of uncertainty. He believes that human nature is the humanest thing on earth, and therefore makes his own deductions for egotism, grouchiness, reserve, penury, and woe; and he does not prod them with a sharp-pointed rod when to do so would bring only defeat.

Chicanery is not diplomacy, and policy is often deceit; both are bogus when measured by the standard of true tact.

It is mean to press an unfair advantage, but the man is a simpleton who refuses to recognize the advantage that is rightly his.

The born salesman, young or old, is the one who towers head and shoulders above his fellows in the science of reading human nature.

There should be no age limit for The Man Who Sells Things; provided he retains his youth in old age.

Hard Work Doesn't Kill.

"It is better to wear out than to rust out." Good hard work, performed with a cheerful disposition or temperament, never yet produced creeping paralysis under three-score years and ten, at least. Age does not disable a man, but inactivity, lack of progressive instinct, or a despondent disposition does.

If the salesman wants to preserve his usefulness and likewise his position, he must not become antiquated in his methods.

One of the most common and most fatal of mistakes made by many middle-aged salesmen is that when they have built up a good trade and are headed well up toward the top of the sales list of their firms, they seem content with the record they have made, and are inclined to rest on their oars. At the precise moment when energy and advancement no longer enter their calculations, decay sets in. The trade that has required years of patient, intelligent toil to establish will soon be gobbled up by energetic young fellows eager for the fray.

I well remember witnessing when a boy, a twenty-five-mile bicycle race. It was the championship race for the long-distance record of the world, and was participated in by two brothers, famous the country over for speed and power of endurance. They held all manner of medals and prizes for races won, and were quickly picked as the winners of the race on that day.

It was a beautiful day; the occasion was a gala one; the clear, crisp air was fraught with excitement in anticipation of the results that would determine the world's championship.

The two brothers were cheered again and again as they mounted their wheels and rode leisurely away to what was generally conceded to be another victory to be added to their already long list of conquests in the sport.

The first lap of six miles was finished with the contestants pretty well bunched as they passed the judges' stand. The friends of the favorites expressed surprise because the brothers had not left the others behind at the offset. Confidently, however, they believed that the finish of the half would see them well in the lead.

A great shout rent the air as the riders hove in sight on the second lap. As they came nearer it was observed that the brothers, although riding close together, were distanced several lengths by three others who seemed determined on keeping the lead. As they passed, they apparently were riding easily, with no thought of defeat; but their apparent confidence was not shared by the anxious crowd. A foreboding swept over the throng, not so much from the position of the riders as from that indefinable suspicion that all was not right.

Cries of dismay were quickly suppressed on the assurance of the over-confident ones that all good riders started that way—slowly and without effort—holding in reserve their speed and strength, increasing these as the race continued, and finishing with a burst of both.

Anxiously we waited for the finish of the three-quarters. A cloud of dust announced the leaders in the distance as they rounded the home-stretch. On they came, tearing like mad straight for the wire, where the crowd was thickest. Like a flash they were past—each man was bending lower and working like a Trojan. In a second they were out of sight again around the curve—but that second was all that was necessary to disclose the sickening fact that the distance between the brothers and the first rider had not been diminished. The confident ones still adhered to their first theory, which seemed to bring a measure of assurance, for at last the brothers were working with a determination that bordered on the supernatural.

The agony was soon over. The last half was finished in about half the time the others had required. As the riders again appeared in the home-stretch the vast crowd was on tip-toe, anxiously hoping for the best; which meant that the race must be won by the favorites. The rider who had held the lead all

CREATING A NEW CUSTOMER

How a Trade Newspaper Ad Brought a Traveler a New Account.

In a prosperous town of the central part of Ontario there is a merchant who, until recent years, had never included wall paper in his stock. One day, three or four years ago, he was thoughtfully turning over the pages of one of the MacLean trade newspapers when the advertisement of a prominent wall paper manufacturer caught and held his attention. "Why not handle wall paper?" thought he, "surely I can turn a few honest dollars that way, I'll try, anyway!" So he sat down and wrote to the wall paper manufacturer, who at once dispatched a traveler with a full line of samples. Later on, the smiling traveler left the store with a pretty fair order booked. In a couple of years that merchant had cleared several hundred dollars; and, needless to say, the traveler who followed up the first inquiry still gets the business. Really, there is no business-getting combination on earth superior to trade newspaper advertising and live travelers who appreciate its advantages!

along was a stranger, and naturally was regarded as an intruder.

All things must end some time, happily or otherwise, and that race was soon finished.

There is little else to tell that cannot easily be imagined; the brothers failed to regain the position lost on the start through over-confidence resultant from past achievements. When they came up to the judges' stand, willing but disappointed hands helped their almost lifeless forms from their wheels, and carried them away from the field of conquest, which, for them, had been turned into defeat. Past honors could not win a race that depended solely on present opportunity. With that defeat, their daring and skill seemed to desert them. Like the bird with the broken wing that never soars so high again, they were not heard much of after that in racing circles.

I have seen many such cases among salesmen in my business career.

Be Up-to-Date in Methods.

Don't become antiquated in your business methods; don't let your customers see that younger men are more energetic, more up-to-date than yourself.

If you want to hold old customers and make new ones every year—which is absolutely necessary—you must be progressive and aggressive.

March forward with the times. Then you will hold your place in the ranks of salesmen as well as any young man starting on the road to-day.

Close your eyes and think of the past, the present, and the future, and—

"Gather ye rosebuds while ye may,
Old Time is still a-flying,
And this same flower that smiles to-day,
To-morrow will be dying."

It is far better to be optimistic, even though we begin late in life.

"Drop a word of cheer and kindness—
just a flash, and it is gone,
But there's half a hundred ripples circling on, and on, and on,
Bearing hope, and joy, and comfort, on each splashing, dashing wave,
Till you wouldn't believe the volume of the one kind word you gave.

"Drop a word of cheer and kindness—
in a minute you forget,
But there's gladness still a-swelling, and there's joy a-circling yet;
And you've rolled a wave of comfort, whose sweet music can be heard
Over miles and miles of water, just by dropping a kind word."

"Hard licks make good luck."

The Baseball Game of Life.

Life is like a baseball game,
With Chance as pitcher: Fate,
Alert, determined, pitiless,
Stands just behind the plate.

Out in the field are Hopelessness,
Timidity, and all
Our other weaknesses prepared
To catch or stop the ball.

The stands are filled with many who Accord us hoots and jeers,
And sprinkled with them, are a few
Who give us honest cheers.

And each man gets his chance to bat,
And many fan the air,
And now and then one makes a hit,
And wins out then and there.

Life is like a baseball game,
And bitterly we choose
To fasten all the blame on Luck,
The umpire, when we lose.

E. Kiser, in the Chicago Record-Herald.

SELLING RIGHTS IN CANADA.

Benjamin Cook, of the Dodge Bottle Cap Co. has been at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, for a couple of weeks arranging for the sale and manufacture in Canada of the Dodge Metallic Cap.

The English rights were disposed of last summer, to a large bottler of aerated waters, Schweppes & Company, of London. They anticipated using the Dodge Bottle Cap exclusively on their aerated mineral waters. The Dodge Cap is used for the means of covering preserves and for the sealing of jams, jellies and pickles, is being manufactured and sold in England by the Air Tight Sealing & Developing Syndicate.

Henry S. Wallis, who has been for a great many years a leading factor in the canned goods trade of England, is at the head of the English company, who manufacture the Dodge Cap. Many Canadian packers at the convention at Buffalo, held in 1907, where the cap was first introduced, and also the recent convention held in Cincinnati, last fall, were greatly interested in the Dodge Metallic Cap Company.

Canadian packers should appreciate the opportunity of securing the benefit of such an excellent low price closure, such as the packers are enjoying in the United States and England at the present time. Canada is packing tremendous quantities of her choice fruits and is one of the leading factors in the packing trade.

Mr. Cook will be pleased to make appointments with those who would be interested directly in the controlling of the Dodge patent in Canada.—Advt.

TOP-NOTCH HOG PRICES.

United States Markets Stiff and Packers Make Millions.

The New York Commercial of July 13, commenting on the provision situation, says: "Hogs reached the top rung of the quotation ladder to-day, registering at the $7.05 mark. There they stayed while the market experts cried loudly that the highest point of the year had been reached. Hogs have been on the rampage ever since March, when scarcity of corn also sent the price of beef up sharply. Gradually they advanced in price from 4 cents a pound live weight until the top notch was reached, when 100 pounds of hog brought $7.08. Stock yards packers who put in millions of pounds of pork at 4 cents last winter have made several million dollars out of the present market, experts say. The market ran up to $7 last year, but that was an artificial figure, brought about by nursing and there was an almost immediate break to $6. This year, however, experts declare, the figure will stay high and hogs will be few and high-priced for six months more."

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, July 17.

The pastures in the townships are suffering severely from the long-continued absence of rain. In some parts forest fires are raging and owing to the generally dried up condition of the country, they are working havoc, and what little grass there is is being burned over. All of this has curtailed the production of milk, and, as a result, the supplies arriving are smaller. In the country the prices are beginning to advance owing to the shortage of milk supply. Previous to the advent of this unfortunate circumstance it was thought by many that although up to the present, this year's yield was behind last year's, it would overtake last year's or even surpass it, but now even the most optimistic cannot make this seem a possibility without the occurrence of some unforeseen and extraordinary circumstance. The setback is regarded as too much for the prospect of this season's yield surpassing last year's. It is pointed out that drought is generally experienced at this time of the year, but, as a rule, is confined to certain districts, whereas this year this dry condition seems to be more general. Reports from England state that there is a firm market for the Canadian product, owing to limited character of the imports. Finest grades of Canadian cheese are commanding very good prices there, while some other makes display a tendency to weaken. There is a fairly good inquiry for old cheese in the London market. Continued hot weather has many disadvantages to the cheese and butter trade, principal among which is the possibility of spoiling and consequently sometimes buyers display more caution in buying than they would do when the weather conditions were normal. Shipments of cheese from Montreal last week amounted to 83,279 boxes, against 81,480 boxes for the previous week, and 94,586 boxes for the corresponding week of last year. There were shipped via Quebec 2,998 boxes, making total exports for the week 86,277 boxes. Total shipments from Montreal since May 1, 534,340 boxes, as compared with 615,102 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Total shipments from Quebec since May 1, 18,115 boxes, as compared with 25,999 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Total exports since May 1, 552,455 boxes, as compared with 641,101 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Export price is 11c.

The butter market is higher and firm in its tone. The strengthened condition of the market is due to the curtailed milk supply, which, in turn, is due to poor pasturage. Prices since our last letter have advanced from one to two cents, and probably will go higher still. These high prices have put butter beyond the export basis, as there is very little inquiry at these advanced prices. Exports of butter last week amounted to 10,878 packages, as compared with 14,698 packages for the previous week and 3,300 packages for the corresponding week of last year. The total shipments since May 1, 37,493 packages, as compared with 11,337 packages for the corresponding period of last year. For export purposes, 22½ cents was obtained. In some quarters there is said to be an accumulation of the June make, in anticipation of a shortage. Although the English buyers want our stock, they are holding off for lower prices.

Toronto, July 15, 1908.

The Canadian farmer must supply more hogs. It will pay him well and is one of the easiest matters around the farm to look after. This is the trend of the Canadian packers' thought and expression this week. With an excellent demand, both at home and abroad, enough to keep the factories running full time, the farmer and his hogs is the crux in the situation.

The British market continues to offer a strong demand for Canadian bacon, and has advanced about a shilling since last report, bringing the offering now to 61 shillings, a price which is making the packers' hearts glad and is attracting a considerable amount of the Canadian product.

The demand at home, however, both in the east and in western Canada, is exceptionally good, the summer's usual brisk business having gotten fully into swing. With all this the factories are kept pretty busy, or would be, if they had the hogs.

When deliveries were light for week after week some few months ago, it seemed as if the farmers were holding their hogs for a higher price. This seemed justified, too, when the supply was materially increased a couple of weeks ago at the considerably higher prices then offering. Prices, however, have gone up a notch further since then and this week the packers are complaining that the hogs are not forthcoming. Of course, the farmers are busy to some extent with harvest operations, but when they are offered $6.75 f.o.b., and $7.15 at the factory, without much prospect of any higher prices, it would seem as if this would bring out whatever was left in the country. And when the deliveries continue light, only one conclusion can be formed. What are being brought in are of pretty satisfactory quality, naturally a pleasing feature.

The firmness in the British market, which is working out to the advantage ol Canadian packers, seems to be due to a large extent to smaller shipments from Denmark and the United States. Denmark last week sent in an aggregate of 38,000, which is considerably below the average of the past few months. Cables from Europe received locally this week, report that the Danes, whose operations are practically the controlling feature in the market, are busily engaged in harvesting operations and that as a result their "killings" will probably drop off to from 25,000 to 30,000 for the next few weeks. This fact assures the continuance of the strong demand for the Canadian product.

The United States markets are strong, with higher prices on account of the continued light movement in hogs and good genuine demand, with large packing interests buying heavily. At the recent advance there was said to be considerable profit-taking, especially in lard.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Live hogs have advanced 25 cents per 100 lbs., which is due to smaller offerings and a continued good demand from packers and others for supplies. Fresh killed dressed stock has also advanced 50c on the 100 lbs. Other prices remain the same as at last quotation, and the market is displaying considerable activity.

PROVISIONS—Excellent and improving business is being done this week, more especially in the cooked and smoked meats, and orders are keeping the men on the jump to fill them. One Toronto pork packer sent out eight cars of meat last week, and this was apart altogether from local trade. Prices are pretty much as a week ago, though hams have advanced a cent, and short cuts have gone up 50 cents per barrel. Lard is a very good seller just now at the high prices asked for butter.

EGGS—Small quantities of eggs are arriving and the demand, too, is light in the face of the better trade in meats. New laid eggs, extra choice, are at 24 cents, and good eggs range down to 21 cents.

CHEESE—Probably every house but one in Toronto is out of old cheese at the present time, and all told there are perhaps less than 200 in the whole city. Prices continue as at last quotations. Business is fair only. New cheese continues to arrive in normal quantities, but the demand is light.

BUTTER—Prices appear to be stationary at last quotations. Dealers do not anticipate any lowering. England took a little creamery a short while ago, but the high price asked was a little too much for continued export business. What butter was offering, however, was readily picked up, and so far as the consumer and retailer are concerned the situation remains unchanged.

REFEREE OF BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Official Appointed at Montreal by Agricultural Department.

A circular from the Department of Agriculture, just come to hand, reports the appointment of Joseph Burgess, a member of the dairy commissioners' staff, as official referee for butter and cheese at Montreal. His duties will permit him to examine on request shipments of butter and cheese over which there is a dispute as to quality. Examinations will be made and certificates given only when the request comes from both buyer and seller.

Mr. Burgess is well qualified to perform the duties of referee. He is an experienced cheese and butter maker, and has been on the Dominion dairy commissioner's staff since 1902. He was superintendent of the Government curing room at Woodstock, Ont., until it was closed in 1906. Since then he has been inspector for the dairy and cold storage branch in western Ontario.

THE GROCER'S EAR

We want it for a few moments to tell him how much easier it is to sell

than it is to sell any other breakfast cereal. Here are a few of the "selling arguments" for Shredded Wheat:

1 Shredded Wheat is the whole wheat—nothing added, nothing taken away—cleaned, steam-cooked, shredded and baked.

2 The porous shreds are quickly penetrated by the digestive juices, making it more easily digested than mushy porridges or other breakfast foods.

3 Pound for pound, it contains more muscle-making, brain-building material than beef-steak or eggs, and costs much less.

4 Being in biscuit form, it has many more culinary uses than the ordinary breakfast cereal, forming delicious combinations with fruits, creamed vegetables or creamed meats.

5 It is the cleanest, purest cereal food in the world, and is made in the cleanest, finest, most hygienic food factory in this country or in any other country.

Cut this out, commit it to memory, and be "ready" for the next customer who asks you anything about breakfast cereals.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Shortage of Wheat in the West Causes Firmer Feeling—New Ontario Wheat Coming Shortly—Ce reals Continue Dull.

The feature of the week in the flour and cereal markets is the stronger feeling and the probability of an early advance in flour. The Chicago wheat market has been steadily firming up during the week and the situation in Winnipeg has been to a large extent sympathetic. This caused a jump of 3 cents in Winnipeg wheat on Monday. The better demand from Britain at increasingly higher levels is for high-grade wheat, of which there is very little left in the country. Dealers are becoming rather anxious at the small stocks on hand, and are beginning to doubt whether they are sufficient to supply the domestic demand until the new crop is ready. All this is having a reflective effect on the flour situation, which is firmer than it has been for several weeks.

Some export continues to be done to British ports, though this business is mostly in small lots.

Business in cereals continues quiet, though dealers report demand quite as healthy as usual during the summer months.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—So far the rumors which are reaching the East regarding the magnitude of the Western crop have not affected the prices, but this condition cannot last more than a month or six weeks, when the prices will come down if the crop is as large as anticipated. At present the demand is slow and consists of orders of the hand-to-mouth variety.

FLOUR—The stronger feeling in wheat is having its effect on the market here. While prices have not advanced, the feeling is materially firmer and a change may take place shortly. New Ontario wheat will be coming in in another week, and will relieve the situation to some extent locally.

GRAIN BILL PASSES SENATE.

Ottawa, July 9.—The Manitoba grain bill was finally passed by the Senate on Wednesday after a long debate on the amendment proposed by Senator Davis, to add a clause providing for the grading of scoured wheat. Sir Richard Cartwright declined to accept the amendment, on the ground that it might tend to injure the reputation of Canadian wheat in the British markets. The amendment was lost on division.

Senator Bernier offered an amendment to make a special grade for No. 1 rejected wheat, which would cover scoured wheat. This was also lost.

Senator Douglas gave notice of an amendment to provide grades for Nos. 1, 2 and 3 rejected wheat, which had been afterward scoured.

Sir Richard Cartwright promised to consider the suggestion, and if after a conference of grain men it was approved the amendment would be incorporated in the bill when it came before the Commons.

HOW MANY STOCKS HAVE YOU?

Many a merchant is really carrying three stocks of goods.

There's the stock in the store—the only stock the customer sees and buys from.

The second stock is that in the warehouse—waiting there for the "summons" to the store that in the case of many items "never comes."

The third stock is that on the merchant's books—those "graves" where every year some profits are buried.

Three stocks—two stagnant—only one active!

Ways and means of getting rid of one of your stagnant stocks are suggested by the article, "Credit to Cash" on the green pages in this catalogue.

And the sure way to get rid of the second of your stagnant stocks is to quit piling up unnecessarily big reserve quantities.—Butler Brothers' Drummer.

Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas

are nationally popular. In all parts of Canada they are recognized as the Standard. It is no wonder, either, because they are positively unequalled for delicious and lasting crispness. They don't get soggy. They are made, baked and packed to stay crisp. The last cracker in the package is just as delicious in its crispness as the first one taken out. The shrewdest grocers are those who realize that nothing pays like quality; and they are the ones who handle Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas.

BIG PROFITS IN CANTALOUPES.

"Cantaloupe growing is one of the most independent branches of farming," said the owner of a small ranch in the celebrated Rocky Ford district of Colorado. "And one of the easiest, too, for quite a considerable part of the year," according to the Detroit Free Press.

"Seed for the melon crop is planted from the first to the fifteenth of May, and after that, with the exception of a couple of weedings and two applications of water, your work is done until the time for picking begins, about the latter part of July or the first of August.

"When the melons begin to be ready for shipment the planter has only to inspect his patches from day to day and select those which are in condition. The cantaloupes are quick ripeners, and one might go through a patch one day and not find a single melon sufficiently advanced to be picked and yet the very next morning the same patch might show enough ripe melons to fill thirty or forty crates.

"The principal harvesting time for Rocky Fords is from the latter part of August until the first of October, all depending upon the frost. Exposure to frost puts an abrupt end to the existence of cantaloupes. The melons are picked in the morning, crated and then removed to the refrigerator cars or place of shipment in the cool of the evening. When picked for the Eastern market the melons are removed from the vines before they are fully ripe.

"While the Rocky Ford melons derive their name from the town of that name, yet, as a matter of fact, the melons are grown in many other sections of Otero County, irrigated by the waters of the Upper Arkansas River. The principal point of shipment, however, is at Rocky Ford, and at the height of the season—the latter part of August—from forty to fifty carloads daily are sent away."

PREJUDICE ALMOST ERADICATED

J. Ogden Armour, Chicago, who has just returned from Europe with his daughter, who was operated on several years ago by Dr. Loring, of Vienna, and who has almost recovered, says, regarding the financial situation, that he had found a disposition among all European countries to again buy American canned meats, and that there was but small doubt that the prejudice existing since the investigation had been almost eradicated.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Canadian Small Fruits Have the Call—Home-Grown Fruit and Vegetables Displacing Imported Lines—Good Fish Season—Successful Trial Importation of Soles.

Canadian fruit, especially the small varieties—red and black currants, gooseberries, cherries, blue berries and red raspberries—is still the leading line in the market this week. Raspberries are slow arrivals, and do not appear to be quite up to the standard as yet. Strawberries are off, and early green apples are making their appearance.

Carload lots of peaches and plums from both Georgia and California are daily arrivals, and some splendid specimens of bananas and pineapples, too, are being shown.

Among the vegetables, Canadian cabbage is displacing the imported variety, but imported tomatoes, being packed in fancy and attractive packages, still hold the fort in that particular line, although the season is almost over. Cucumbers are in steady demand and green peppers, now beginning to arrive, are much sought after. Potatoes are coming nearer home and are declining slowly in price, but the old Canadian varieties are firming up rapidly with the small lots offering.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Raspberries are being quoted this week at 12c per basket. Plums and peaches are lower. A carload of California cherries is expected to arrive this week. Sorrento oranges have gone forward 75c, likewise Valencia oranges. Porto Rico's are off the market. Bananas are at $2 for good stock. Dealers report demand in city dull, but country trade has been good.

FISH—Gaspe salmon has advanced a cent. Brook trout is higher now, being quoted at 25c. Lake fish, such as pike, dore and lake trout are becoming scarce, but whitefish are still in good supply. TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—Canadian small fruits continue to be the leading line. Strawberries are off, only two crates being offered for sale in the whole market one day this week. Raspberries are very slow arriving. The hot wave of the past week has to a slight extent hurt them, as did the rain a month ago injure the strawberries. Huckleberries are coming in pretty freely from the north, and are sound and sweet. Cherries, too, keep up a steady supply. Red and black currants are being shown on all sides, especially the red variety, and some monster gooseberries attract much attention. Early Canadian apples by the basket are being sold rather slowly, as the fruit is small and berries and other lines still have the call. Bartlett pears from California are new and some few excellent specimens of pineapples from the South invited inquiries. Prices on almost everything have declined during the week.

VEGETABLES—Like fruits, much interest is shown in Canadian lines. Lettuce and spinach, although continued to be quoted, are practically done, and the same might apply to radishes. String beans, beets and carrots are offering more freely, and onions, too, are fairly plentiful. Imported tomatoes have taken another spurt, and are plentiful and good. They are put up in handy and neat packages which set them off to advantage. The cabbage offering this week is much superior to what was shown a week ago, some little of it is Canadian grown stock. Green peppers are new and are of fair quality. Potatoes, new and old, stimulate many inquiries. Canadian old potatoes are about done; very few are to be had, and these few have advanced 20 cents during the past ten days. The new potatoes from around Baltimore, Md., are coming in pretty freely, and have declined a little in price.

FISH—Splendid business is being done in all lines. Sea fish are coming in more plentifully, and in greater variety. Fresh water fish, though in good supply, is unable to meet the demand, especially is this so of whitefish and trout, which have advanced to 11c per pound in consequence. Live lobsters around 40c each are to be had, and sea salmon at from 15c to 18c are fairly plentiful, the Pacific fish at 15c and the Atlantic salmon at 18c. A couple of sole imported from England proved a novelty and sold as high as 75c a pound.

A PIECE OF CHALK

Time was when a piece of chalk was the accountant's most approved instrument. When a charge was made it was "chalked up." When it was paid it was rubbed out and there you are. Easy enough, but—are just as simple. And ten thousand merchants in America and foreign countries consider them better.

Give them a trial. Begin in a small way if you like, but TRY THEM and see for yourself how much better they are than any other method of accounting.

The Plan:

If a man wants credit for $10.00 and you think he is good for it, give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign the receipt or note form in front of book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass-books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best. For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Information for Clerks and Merchants Regarding the Products They Sell—How Tapioca is Made.

The Manufacture of Tapioca.

The tapioca plant, Janipha Manihot, was originally introduced to the Straits Settlements from Brazil. Flake tapioca and Cassareep are produced from the root or tuber, which contain hydrocyanic acid, also manihotorin, known as sepsicolytin or fermentation hinderer, on account of its remarkable antiseptic properties. The hydrocyanic acid is very volatile and is expelled by a slight degree of heat; thus no trace of it is left after the process of drying is complete.

The method adopted on new land is extremely simple and inexpensive, and can be followed for three years without the application of manure. The jungle is felled and burnt, after which the land is allowed to weather for about six months before planting. Meanwhile the branches and boughs are lopped off, heaped and burnt. The soil is then scraped with the shankole and cleared of all growth. Slips cut six inches in length are taken from healthy matured plants and planted every five feet, in rows six feet apart. The second year the soil is disturbed to a depth of from four to six inches, and the distance of planting reduced to four feet by five feet. The third year the same method is followed except that the distance is further reduced three feet by five feet.

Three weedings are generally necessary, but this varies somewhat according to the condition of the land. The cultivation of old land—that is land from which three crops have already been taken—is arduous and expensive. After gathering the previous crop's sticks, the ground is first shankoled (hoed) to a depth of one foot, followed by a second operation in which the soil is thoroughly pulverized and weeds entirely removed. Suitable manure is then spread broadcast, after which banks are dug one and a half feet in depth and five feet in width. Planting is followed immediately, the slips being placed in a slanting position on the top of the banks, every two feet nine inches, and just below the surface.

Matures in Twelve to Fifteen Months.

On old land the plant takes twelve months to mature and on new land fifteen months. On old land the plant takes twelve months to cleanse them and removes the greater part of the outer skin, after which they are rasped to a pulp. The flour is washed out of the pulp in large cylinders covered with straining cloth and through the centre of which pass spray pipes for the necessary supply of water. The liquid thus obtained passes through the cloth and the fibre out of the opposite ends to which the machines are fed. After settling in shallow tanks three and a half hours, the water is run off, leaving the flour about half an inch in thickness. This is removed to deep vats, where it is thoroughly stirred and allowed to settle for seventeen hours. It is then dug up, and after all impurities have been carefully removed, the mass is pulverized in a machine and sifted. At this stage the flour is suitable for making either flake or pearl. The methods, however, are somewhat different.

Flake is formed by granulating in round pans heated by a fire to a temperature of 212 degrees. The material is then dried by fire heat on iron plates at a temperature of about 160 degrees. Finally it is sifted and packed for the market.

Pearl is formed by tossing the flour from end to end of a damp cloth cradle, suspended from the roof of the building and reciprocated with a jerky motion by a man at either end and one at the side to prevent the cradle rocking and spilling the flour. It is then sifted and the rest of the process is the same as for flake, except that the roasting pans are at a somewhat lower temperature.

AUSTRALIAN CONTRACT RENEWED.

Sir James Mills of New Zealand, head of the subsidized steamship line between Canada and Australia, arrived in Ottawa recently in connection with the company's contract with the government for a weekly service between Canada and the Antipodes. The government has made a temporary renewal of the contract until August, 1909. The company gets a total subsidy of £60,000 per year, of which Canada gives £37,090.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

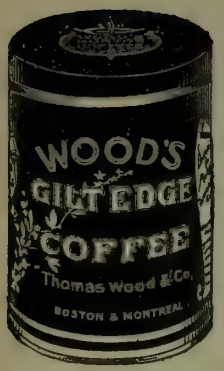
Concentrate Your Energies



ESTABLISHED 1879.

Down through the ages comes this warning :

"Do not talk a little on many subjects, but much on a few."

In some instances you needn't talk at all. Our brands are "a few," but they are inarticulate, and yet "do their own talking."

The only necessary preliminary is the introduction by the grocer to the consumer of each selection by its name, and "the rest is easy."

"To Hold Fast to Quality IN THE Merchandise Offered."

John Wanamaker gives this as one of the cardinal principles of success in mercantile life. And he is right. Once let a store get a reputation of selling goods of quality and the public will make a beaten path to its doors. High quality is particularly necessary in foodstuffs in these days in view of the growing demand for purity and wholesomeness.

Canadian Canners' Peas are the finest in the world.

Grocers and general merchants everywhere find their customers demanding "more of the same" when they have once tried our celebrated brands. Our Grade No. 2, Sweet Wrinkle Pea, is the most satisfactory pea packed. Its superior quality enables you to sell it with a much greater margin of profit than ordinary brands.

Our Canned Peas are sold in four grades or qualities, viz:—

Grade No. 1—Extra Fine Sifted Peas
Grade No. 2—Sweet Wrinkle Peas
Grade No. 3—Early June Peas
Grade No. 4—Standard Peas.

BRANDS:—"Canada First" (Aylmer), "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe" (Bowlby), "Auto" (Canadian Canners), "Kent," "Lynnvalley" (Simcoe), "Maple Leaf" (Delhi), "Lion" (Boulter), "Thistle" (Brighton), "Grand River" (Lalor), "White Rose" (Lakeport).

BULK VERSUS PACKET

If you are still depending on the old-fashioned stock of bulk teas, you are in the same position as the man who climbs ten flights of stairs when there is an elevator in the building.

You are not only like him—losing time—which is money—but you are losing the benefits derived from pushing a high-class tea like which is not only a great convenience, but more profitable. No loss in weighing, no exposure to dust or air, no deterioration in flavor, no loss in interest, no freight to pay. Instead of carrying a large stock of bulk tea, is it not much better to carry a small well-assorted stock of "SALADA" in Black, Green and Mixed? Remember, that besides loss in interest, every tea of whatever growth loses at least one cent per pound every six months in quality, as all teas deteriorate with age.

PICKLING SPICE

We are offering exceptional values in high-grade Pickling Spice. Each of the varieties is specially selected with a view to the best results, so that it can be recommended to the most fastidious trade.

Sold either in bulk or packages.

Our "White Swan," glass front, ¼-lb. package is unequalled as a 10c. line. 4 doz. in a case.

If You Buy Your Tea From T. H. Estabrooks You Will Never Have Any Dead Stock

The dead ones were all bought from other firms. Ask the firms who sold you this dead stock—dare them—to do the same as T. H. Estabrooks has always offered to do, viz: "take back and pay full price in cash for any tea not fully satisfactory." They won't do it. Then why run the risk of dead stock, especially when you can make more profit by selling Red Rose Tea and Estabrooks' bulk blends than any teas on the market.

Two Reasons—You can sell more of them because no other teas equal them in quality, and you are absolutely guaranteed against loss as every pound is guaranteed to pay you full profit.

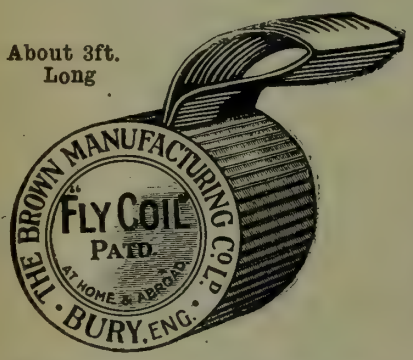
Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kin of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent grocers, who are on the look-out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

TRY A CONDENSED AD IN THE CANADIAN GROCER.

About 3ft. Long



They Used to Say

"You can catch more flies with molasses than you can with vinegar." That was before we made

Brown's Famous "Fly Coil"

It is the only fly catcher worth talking about now. Nearly three feet of fly-catching tape, and holds more flies to the square inch than anything you ever saw! Hang one up and see how it protects your goods! See the flies jump for it! See it jump for the flies, too! You can catch customers for it as easily as it catches flies, and make a good profit.

A Bumper Crop in the West

MR. MANUFACTURER, do you realize what this year's bumper crop in the West may mean to you?

It is the biggest crop in the history of the country and it will be worth a pile of money—much more than any previous crop.

The West will have plenty of money to spend and there will be a strong demand for high class goods.

Now is the time to push your goods in the West and develop a trade that will grow from year to year.

We can help you, as we have the selling organization to place your goods on the market.

We are established in Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton, the three principal wholesale centres of the West. We can take your goods on commission basis, store them at these three points and distribute them to the wholesale trade.

To do business in the West it is essential that you should have live intelligent representation on the ground.

$1.00 Sold $25 Worth of Groceries

It was a thirty mile trip to town and the instructions of Mrs. Smith to husband John were to get a dollar's worth of Windsor Salt at the grocer's—naturally husband John secured his entire list of groceries at the store that was stocked with "Windsor." He spent twenty-five dollars in that particular store.

The reason why Mrs. Smith was determined to have Windsor Salt was and is plainly evident—its uniform excellence, purity, whiteness and dryness. It pays to sell the salt that helps to sell other goods in the store.

The Grocers' Day Off

Monster Picnics on Wednesday, July 15, From Hamilton, Brantford, Toronto, Montreal and London—Grocers and Their Friends Enjoyed a Splendid Outing at Various Points of Interest in Canada—Some of the Funny Things Seen During the Day.

Last Wednesday, July 15, was a day of jollity and pleasure for a good many grocers in different parts of Canada. How they all hit on the same day is somewhat of a mystery, probably only a mere coincidence, but it turned out to be a wise choice, for the weather for all the excursions was all that could be desired. It is estimated that upwards of 13,000 people, including grocers and clerks, with their wives, sweethearts and friends attended the various outings that day. Hamilton Grocers' Association took the usual large percentage of the city's population with them to Niagara Falls. With them were joined a couple of trainloads of grocers and their friends from Brantford and another trainload found its way to the Falls from London. The Toronto Grocers' Association took their usual large contingent of city grocers and their friends to Niagara Falls and Buffalo by steamer across the lake, and the Montreal Grocers' Association took a large number of its members and friends to Highgate Springs, Vermont. Each of these outings, as described in detail, following, proved exceedingly successful.

Hamilton and Brantford at the Falls

Another Monster Picnic From the Ambitious City and Large Representation From Brantford—Committees Have Host of Details Well in Hand.

Better, greater and grander than ever was this year's picnic of the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association, held at Victoria Park, Niagara Falls, on Wednesday, July 15. The Brantford grocers and butchers joined with their confreres from the Ambitious City in helping make "the only picnic" an unprecedented success. Five trains over the T., H & B. and four over the G.T.R., 90 cars in all, took the excursionists from Hamilton and two heavily-laden trains carried picnickers from Brantford.

10,000 Excursionists.

It is estimated that about 8,000 people went from Hamilton, and 2,000 from Brantford. Added to these were 700 who journeyed by special M.C.R. train from London.

The day was an ideal one, so far as the weather was concerned, and a number of people would like to know what kind of a pull the grocers have with the weather man to be immune from a rainy day. Not an accident occurred to mar the pleasures of the picnic and everyone returned home happy and well satisfied with the outing.

Some Novel Features.

Many innovations were introduced and innumerable souvenirs were distributed on the trains and at the grounds. Tea, coffee, milk and lemonade were supplied free and music galore was furnished by the 13th Band, Ruben's famous brass band, an Italian orchestral trio, Highland pipers and the Darktown vocal quartette. Everything that could be conceived for the comfort of the picnickers was arranged for, and every minute of time was crowded with "something doing."

All the excursionists were at the picnic grounds before noon and immediately after dinner a programme of games was run off.

The Games and Prize Winners.

These resulted as follows:

Shoe race, 100 yards—A. Goodenough, M. McCullough, J. Sheridan.

Single ladies' race, 50 yards—E. Ashton, F. O'Neill, M. Caldwell.

Association race, 100 yards—J. Bradley, J. Clendenning, M. Hunter.

Old men's race, 75 yards—T. Shean.

Six turn race, 75 yards—J. Sheridan, L. Brown, P. Smye.

Girls' race, 50 yards—B. Ralston, M. Horning, C. Degeer.

Pick-a-back, 100 yards—Brown and Sheridan, McQueen and McQueen, McDonald and Bradley.

Great tunnel race, 100 yards—Brown, Donald, H. Braford.

Married ladies' race, 50 yards—Mrs. Speck, Mrs. Millborn, Mrs. Rolph.

Chicken-catching contest, open to girls under 16 years—F. Curtis, E. Steinmann, E. Fenn.

Boys' race, 75 yards—C. Hannah, G. Daly, B. Degeer.

Fat ladies' race, 50 yards—Mrs. McCullough, Mrs. Lucas, Mrs. Harris.

Skipping race, girls under 14—May McIntosh, May Moriarity, Mabel Nelson.

Six-legged race, 100 yards—McDonald, Brown and Bradley, Goodenough, Young and Collins, Will, Will and Smye.

Marathon trial (catching pig)—A. Pettit.

Relay race, 500 yards—Kelvert and Lambert, Bradley and McDonald, McCullough and Cheever.

Special Melagama race—Mrs. Arnold, Mrs. Rolph, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Hexamer, Mrs. J. Harris, Mrs. E. Harris, Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Davey.

After the games a couple of bushels of grab bags were distributed to the youngsters and this was one of the most exciting events of the day.

A Successful Baby Show.

Immediately preceding the games a baby show was held at which the members of the committee were conspicuous by their absence. After some hunting a committee of three Hamilton men was appointed to judge the Brantford babies and a like number of Brantford men judged the Hamilton entries. These martyrs were A. Coulbeck, Jim Burns and Joe Bloxham, Brantford, and Wm. Smye, J. Forth and Dr. Emory, Hamilton. Though the judges are still alive, their condition caused some alarm for a while, as they had an awful time in coming to a decision. There were 25 babies from Brantford, and 65 from Hamilton entered. In the Hamilton class Mrs. Dickie was first, Mrs. Potter second, and Mrs. Fillmore third; while the winning Brantford babies were owned by Mrs. Rowe, Mrs. McHugh and Mrs. Cuthbertson.

JOHN FORTH.

The Energetic President of the Hamilton Grocers' Association.

A game of broom ball was played by teams representing Brantford and Hamilton, the former being the winners 3 to 0. John Cammel, Brantford's goalkeeper, saved the day by sweeping everything before him. The heroes of the game were: Hamilton—Semmens, Hobson, Lavis, Cummings, Cann, Lamp-man, Hilton, Markle and Smith. Brantford—Cammel, H. Burns, R. Gowman, H. Hagey, Cop. McDonald, A. Greenside, C. Chevers, J. Wilkinson, J. Hartley.

Catching "Bay" Hill.

The real fun of the afternoon was the catching of the Hamilton secretary, the one and only "Bay" Hill, who in his Sherlock Holmes' act deceived everybody. A prize of ten dollars in gold was offered to the lady who caught him on the grounds without his famous valise in his hand. Even Jim Main and Billy Smye were at sea as to the personality of the clergyman who was limping about the grounds. Mrs. Croal was the lucky lady who won the prize by taking "Bay" by the sleeve, saying, "Hello, Mr. Hill; I guess you're caught."

The members of the various committees who did so much to make the picnic a success were:

Transportation—A. G. Bain, J. O. Carpenter, W. Smye, jr., J. Kirkpatrick, J. Main. Printing—W. Smye, jr., J. O. Carpenter, E. Hazel, James Main. Refreshment—A. G. Bain, E. Hazel, W. Smye, J. Main, G. Cann. Amusement—J. O. Carpenter, H. Taylor, Geo. Dawson, B. Crysler, Geo. Cann, M. A. Hill. Music—H. Taylor, C. H. Peebles, A. Ballentine. Reception Committee—C. H. Peebles, J. Kirkpatrick.

Brantford's Picnic Committee consisted of: President, A. Coulbeck: Secretary, Norman Willits; Treasurer, A. L. Vanstone; Advertising Committee, P. Truss, E. Church: Sports Comittee, Jos. Bloxham, R. Gowman, Hartley Burns.

Secretary E. Sutton, London, looked after the welfare of the grocers and their friends from the Forest City.

A pleasing episode took place on the way up to the Falls from London, when S. H. Palmer, Canadian General Passenger Agent of the Michigan Central, was presented by the officers of London Grocers' Association with a fancy walking cane. Mr. Palmer has attended every annual picnic of the London grocers, this being the eighteenth, and has always looked after the comfort of the grocers' guests.

Sandwiches.

The London excursionists traveled like kings. They went up to the Falls in a solid vestibuled train.

"Bay" Hill's make-up was fine. He wore the regulation choker, frock coat and low-crowned hat; limped painfully because of a short foot, on which was a boot with a high heel and thick sole, and wore goggles to protect his much-used eyes from the bright sun. His hair was slightly tinged with gray and his face was full and pleasant looking, with the ears set close against the head and full cheeks, that gave evidence of good feeding.

The expenses of the Hamilton grocers totalled nearly a thousand dollars.

Bob Cowan and Ed. Knelly played the Alabama coons to perfection, but wasn't it awful for the "lady" to smoke.

The old-timers were there. Jos. Kirkpatrick, C. H. Peebles and Wm. Hazell gave a helping hand and filled the gap when the younger men were engaged.

The catching-the-pig contest proved one of the funniest events of the day, and excitement ran high when the worried porker went dodging among the legs of pursuers and spectators, upsetting them in all directions. The winner kept the pig.

The chicken-catching contest for girls caused lots of amusement, and when the girls fell on the bird the chicken wasn't there.

The Canadian Grocers' badges were very much in evidence, and were much sought after by the souvenir hunters.

Wearing the "green above the red" the 13th Band played a select concert programme during the afternoon.

The "rube" bands administered cold chills by tooting all kinds of discords that have yet been discovered, and many of them that were only discovered that day.

C. S. Proctor represented the G.T.R., S. H. Palmer the M.C.R., and G. C. Martin the T., H. & B.; all of them looking after the comfort of the passengers.

"My, I didn't know there were so many Irish people in Canada," said a United States visitor when he saw the grocers go by on their way to the park wearing The Canadian Grocer badge.

C. S. Porter and Bay Hill gave exhibitions of strength to an admiring crowd in the baggage car on the way to the Falls by blowing up Pratt's balloons.

Hamilton was deserted when the grocers' trains pulled out for the Falls.

"Do you know me, Billy?" said "Rev." Bay Hill to Wm. Smye, who up to that time had been guessing who was the clergyman.

Starting out with one train of ten coaches the Hamilton grocers now require nine trains of ninety cars to carry the crowd, for "everybody goes."

1,000 balloons, 5,000 souvenir badges,

"BAY" HILL.

The Original and Always-Moving Secretary of the Hamilton Association.

1,000 fans, 1,000 grab bags, 1,000 shawl pins, 5,000 souvenir Heintz pins, 5,000 souvenir Lipton pins and post cards, and 1,000 souvenir lead pencils, were given away to the excursionists.

During the day 200 gallons of fresh milk were consumed, and on top of that 300 gallons of lemonade were deposited. With this 400 gallons of tea and 400 gallons of coffee were mixed. Of sugar, 1,500 pounds were used, and besides there was a whole grocery store of other things.

John Forth, "Billy" Smye and "Andy" Bain were here, there and everywhere about the grounds seeing to the comfort of everybody.

The Hamilton grocers know so well how to conduct a big picnic that they should arrange to take in the Toronto and London men, as they already have the Brantford folks.

"Bay" Hill had The Grocer representative so labelled with badges in his efforts to make sure he would not be lost that he got tangled up in the ribbons running for his train.

Most of the excursionists looked like major-generals so plastered up were they with decorations.

Jim Main, who was the "bug" man last year, changed his calling and was the "bird" man this year.

Wonder where the committee were when the baby show was on?

President John Forth, as judge for the babies, says he will never undertake it again. He did not mind the mothers so much, but the grandmothers got him going. John was the proudest man on the grounds.

First Vice-President Geo. Cann was hustling all day. He was not recognized, but was very much in evidence with the Italian orchestra. He was so enthusiastic with his fiddle that he played on one string for some time and did not know it.

Second Vice-President H. P. Boyd tried to stop one lady in the fat ladies' race and had to retire, but says he will be on deck next year.

James Main never tired of handing out bugs, pins and balloons. Some lady insisted he was the secretary and wanted the $10, but Jim said, "all I can give you is a bug."

A. G. Bain, chairman of the refreshments, was at his old post making tea and coffee. You cannot beat him, but Andy says he does not want any hotter place than that——

Semmens and Lavis after the broom ball game were all in. But were at it again helping with the games.

George Dawson did excellent work in the refreshment booth.

W. Smye is in a class by himself. He never tires. He was one of the judges in the baby show for Brantford, and is thankful he escaped with his life. He worked hard all day, and seemed to be just where he was wanted.

John O. Carpenter was a great worker. A cool, steady head is John, and he was very much in evidence all day.

E. L. Connawarf, Christie-Brown's representative, entertained some of the grocers to an automobile ride. Several wholesale men were there and all happy.

It was good to see the oldest members of the association there doing all in their power to make the picnic a success, familiar faces, such as J. Kirkpatrick, C. H. Peebles, C. H. Boyigan, W. Hazell and Harry Taylor.

O. W. Robbins was very busy dealing out his lemonade which was certainly much sought after.

The Grocer noticed among the Hamilton travelers: Fred Small and Ed. Dore, of the Fowler Canadian Co.; Thos. Edey, James Turner & Co.; J. T. Price, Lucas, Steele & Bristol; Wm. Buttram, D. S. Perrin Co., London; Wm. Jackson, Walter Woods & Co.; Horace Hazell, Dominion Brewing Co.; Alex. Fraser, Balfour, Smye; Wm. Gillies, Macpherson, Glassco & Co.; Geo. Morton, of N.P. Soap.

That "rube" band was quite an attraction. As regards individuality in playing they haven't their equal.

What an attraction "The Grotto" was for the thirsty and weary. A perfect oasis with an unceasing flow of nectar—or was it something else? Ask Horace Hazell.

W. K. Booth, of King and Booth, was one of the committee on games. Billy knows his part all right.

Montreal Grocers' Picnic and Banquet

Enjoyable Excursion to Highgate Springs, Vermont, Carries Large Number of Members and Their Friends—Features of the Day's Outing.

The Retail Grocers' Association of Montreal held their annual picnic at Highgate Springs, Vt., on Wednesday, July 15. At 8.30 a.m. an excursion train consisting of eleven coaches backed into Bonaventure Station to take on board a merry crowd to the number of six hundred or more. The run from Montreal to Highgate was made in somewhat less than two hours through a beautiful country, arriving at 10.30 a.m.

Splendid Picnic Grounds.

Upon reaching the grounds those who were never there before were treated to a view of natural beauty which it would be difficult to equal.

The picnic grounds are situated within a pleasure resort known as Missiquoi Park, which lies near the village of Highgate Springs. There are two hills and in the recess between them is a plateau which furnishes an admirable spot for races and other athletic contests. Continuing along a pathway through the grove an excellent view of the bay can be obtained and a small arm of this is crossed by a rustic bridge which brings the visitor to the Hotel Gilmore, built on a promontory jutting out into the bay and it was at this summer hostelry that the banquet was served at 1.30 p.m.

Immediately upon arrival the athletic events were called and were continued until 1.30 when an adjournment was made to the hotel.

The Banquet at Noon.

After an extensive menu had been enjoyed J. A. Laniel, the president of the Association, was called on and a brief but happy speech enjoined the members to keep in mind the object of the association and remember the old adage that, "In union there is strength." He also expressed the opinion that the success of the association should be a source of gratification to the members.

Among those present at the banquet were: J. G. Watson, president of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada; W. U. Boivin, J. B. Lamoureux, J. A. Laquerre, of "Le Prix Courant"; M. A. Laniel, president of the association; A. Lapointe, Miss E. Lapointe, M. Lapointe, A. Laurendeau, Edourd Quintal, L. Guilbault, Alfred Grenier, J. O. Menard, P. Doyle Armand Chaput, of Chaput, Fils & Cie; Jos. Ethier, of Laporte, Martin & Cie; Mr. and Mrs. Malo, L. A. Lopointe, of D. Masson & Cie; C. Mireault, of Heron, Leblanc & Cie; Wilfrid Lorrain, Omer Dion, of McCormick Co.; M. Lambert, of "Le Canada"; A. Put, of "La Patrie"; J. O. Marchand, of "La Presse"; H. A. de V. Somerville, of the Canadian Grocer.

After the health of the King, the invited guests, the press, the ladies and others were duly honored the guests left the banquetting room and found their way back to the athletic field and dance hall. The grocers of the east end of the city played ball against the grocers of the west end. This attraction, however, had a worthy rival in the less strenuous contests which were taking place in the dance pavilion. Many American friends from Highgate and Swanton tripped the light fantastic with their visitors. After extending considerable patronage to the park's refreshment bureau the crowd reluctantly betook itself to the waiting train in the valley.

The run home was thoroughly enjoyable and from some of the coaches a sound of "harmless" revelry might be heard and after a few deals of the cards, the international boundary was crossed and soon the broad expanse of our own St. Lawrence came within our vision and the sun disappeared from view behind old Mount Royal, bringing to a close another successful outing of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association.

Picnic "Nicpics."

Some of those basket-hampers were handled with care—glass.

The "Entente cordiale" between our "cop" and his Vermont confrere was magnificent to witness.

That first race was a little confusing to the judges. They evidently are not accustomed to close finishes.

That ball game demonstrated the fact that there are some pretty nimble boys dealing out the world's food supply.

Your judgments were alright, Armand, but your scrutiny of the prize waltzers was searching.

It beats all how some men hate to go to these functions, but you know it must be done to keep everyone in good humor.

There were not many of these "to keep customers in good humor" men at the ball game. Ladies don't play ball but they can make MERRY the grass-WIDOWER in the WALTZ.

Not many squeeze plays in the ball game. Several, however, were noticed in the dance hall.

Good voice, Mr. Pilon. It takes you to call them to attention.

That whiskey firm whose representative started so many advertising balloons will be arrested for high treason. Vermont is "prohibish."

Vermont girls can dance but they can't beat our own "belles filles."

The Societies for the Prevention of Cruelty will look into that race for fat men. Too bad to make them run up hill.

That's all right, Uncle Sam, you have a beautiful country, but it took a Canadian to find that lake for you.

The sports were entered into with vigor and were characterized by a complete absence of ill-feeling or any other disturbing feature. Everyone took their victory or defeat with a smile and all were out for the fun. The judges were: A. P. Murray, Wm. H. Dunn, Armand Chaput, Jos. Ethier, A. C. Middleton, Z. Hebert, A. F. Hodge, C. T. Wood, W. S. Whissel, Harry Clark, Chas. Norris.

The Toronto Grocers' Excursion

A Splendid Trip Across the Lake and Delightful Ride to the Falls and Buffalo—Wholesale Houses Well Represented.

The weather man was most kind to the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association last Wednesday, when the great event of the trade was held. A more perfect day could not have been desired—clear, not too hot, and no threatening clouds during any part. The excursion to Niagara Falls and Buffalo was a great success. The crowd was large and representative of the trade, and many of the old guard who had been among the first to encourage the annual outing turned out with the younger and moving spirits of the association. It was the twenty-third annual outing and several holidayers remarked to The Grocer that they had missed only two trips in all these years. This was complimentary to the committees having the excursions in charge. This year's committee had worked like the proverbial beaver and the result was one of the best outings ever offered to the grocers of Toronto and their friends.

A Group of Toronto Grocers and Travelers at the Stern of the Cayuga.

A Delightful Sail.

When the steamer Cayuga left the dock at 7.30 she carried over 2,000 excursionists, the majority of them starting under grocers' colors, although two smaller, one a church society and the other the Umberto Primo Italian Society, also had a few friends and supporters on deck. It was to the latter society that a goodly share of the pleasant sail across the lake was due, the splendid band of Glionna enlivening the occasion with classical and popular music. To say Glionna's band means that the music was of the best. The gay costumes of the uniformed members of the society added color to the scene.

Incidents of the Trip.

During the sail over to Queenston, several enterprising firms took advantage of their opportunities to treat their customers to some of the good things they sell. There was that new drink, Orangeade, for which free tickets had been distributed to everyone on board, and it was a most delicious treat and popularized itself immensely. Dalton Bros. had a guessing contest of the lemonade in a large glass jar. Also Pure Gold had a similar contest on extract, and P. McIntosh & Co. on the number of excursionists on board. MacLaren's Imperial Cheese Co. had 'em all guessing on the contents of a jar of beans. Lipton's tea-leaf pins were in evidence pretty generally. Some handsome souvenir badges and buttons were also a feature, notably those of the patriotic Davidson & Hay Union Jack and the complimentary badge of The Canadian Grocer. Both of these were much sought after and appreciated as souvenirs. E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd., distributed to everyone a set of handsome trick playing cards.

Distributing the Excursionists.

On arrival of the steamer at Queenston, special cars were waiting to carry the excursionists to Buffalo, a large number taking in the beauties of the lake port. The majority, however, seemed to be headed for Niagara Falls Park. All of them were safely landed at their destination in good time and order. Many of the Toronto grocers mingled with their Hamilton friends, who also had their annual picnic at Victoria Park Niagara Falls, some 8,000 having taken advantage of this great day and event.

C. F. THORNE.

President Toronto Retail Grocers' Association.

The Grocer's two representatives were kept more than busy looking after this largest of all Canadian grocery picnics. It is estimated that with the visitors from Hamilton, Brantford, London and Toronto nearly 9,000 grocers and their friends congregated at the Falls.

The excursionists from Toronto whose number had been very materially swelled by the arrivals on the 9, 11 and 2 o'clock boats, all expressed themselves as having had a most enjoyable outing and everyone returned home safe and without accident.

Taking the day all through, this year's outing made many friends, and if the same energy is shown next year's excursion should be a record breaker. Why not make it so by having a grand united picnic of the grocers of Ontario, London, Brantford, Hamilton, Guelph, Berlin, Galt, Stratford and Toronto? That would be something like an outing. Get busy!

THOS. CLARKE.

Vice-President Toronto Grocers' Association.

Picked Up on Deck.

The city travelers turned out well. Owing to the big crowd, The Grocer couldn't get around among them all. He, however, noticed the following :

T. S. Grant and J. S. Montgomery, Eby, Blains; R. Muat, H. J. Heinz Co.; E. F. Nettleton, Dalton Bros.; J. Ernest Clarke, Thos. J. Lipton; J. Howitt, P. McIntosh & Co.; Flem. Hayes, Perkins, Ince & Co.; Fred Mason, and Herb. Gosby, Warren Bros. & Co.; V. Bremner, S. Qua, R. B. Blackburn and Mr. Robinson, of Davidson-Hay; E. F. Trimble, Fonner's Orangeade; W. Spittal, Frank Crowley and Frank McCabe, of Pure Gold Mfg. Co.; A. Manning, Todhunter, Mitchell J. Anderson, T. Kinnear & Co.; G. L. Scott and A. G. Hill, H. P. Eckardt & Co.; J. Litster, Pure Gold Mfg. Co.; D. L. McMillan, F. F. Dalley Co.; John F. MacLaren and A. G. Webb, Ogilvie Milling Co.; R. L. Williamson, Swan Bros.; Mr. Sharpe, McColl Bros.; S. S. mott, MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co.; E. Raymond, Lever Bros., Ltd.; J. M. Thom, E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd.; Ed. Hawes, Ed. Hawes Co.; J. Hutchinson, John Taylor & Co.

How some of the fruit men and grocers do love a game of euchre. Ask Charley Kimpton, Dave Ratcliffe, also J. Hutchinson and D. Bell.

Frank Johnston's splendid figure and voice were the envy of all. He knows how to keep things moving.

It was a bright and happy crowd and the badges and decorations added the proper holiday effect. Everybody was decorated except Flem. Hayes and Bob Stewart. Since Flem. stopped playing lacrosse he wears no ribbons.

No wonder "Orangeade" is selling. It's got to with such a boomer as Sam Qua.

Dave Clark's (of Avenue Road) was a pleasant face to see among the boys. Dave is one of the old guard and a past president of the Retail Grocers' Association.

Ginger Ale Wilson seemed to be known by most of the grocers present.

John Butcher and his friend enjoyed the breezes on the upper deck, also the fine Havanas passed around by Secretary Bell.

Everybody seemed to known Jack Wright, of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. He and his running mate, Harry Wilmott, were busy.

H. G. Macdonald, grocer, Sorauren Ave., makes a striking figure. See cut of group taken on boat.

Harry Trent, of Fleischmann's, and Ald. Tom Bredin, of the Bredin Bread Bakery, were inseparable. The one couldn't raise anything without the other, see !

Milton Cork, of College St., took a day off and thoroughly enjoyed himself. He wasn't even impatient at the delay in starting the cars at Queenston.

Theo. Loblaw , though not in business now, couldn't keep away from the old associates.

"Put me off at Buffalo" was changed into "Put me 'on' at Buffalo." Everybody got on.

Funny, but The Grocer representative lost one whole carload of the Buffalo excursionists. Did they stay over at Tonawanda, we "wanda ?"

President Thorne, Treasurer McLean, and Secretary Bell, as well as the entire committee, must have felt flattered at the splendid turnout.

Bailey Snow wasn't as chilly as his name would imply. He was kept warm looking after his share of the work.

Flem. Hayes found a traveler's quotation book. The loser can recover same by applying for it at Perkins, Ince & Co.'s.

THE DRUMMERS' SNACK.

Annual Outing at Alton Will Be Held July 31 and August 1.

That glorious and unique function, the annual Drummers' Snack, is announced this year for Friday and Saturday, July 31 and August 1, and preparations are being made to make it bigger, funnier and more unique than ever. It will be held at Alton, of course, and the programme, at present on the press, promises some excellent features. A new name, quite characteristic, too, "Camp Kilcare," has also been given the resort at Alton.

The concert on Friday evening will, as usual, be one of the big features, and for this even a bigger bill of attractions than ever has been arranged, including some of Toronto's very best lady and gentlemen entertainers. The Hamilton boys, too, will be on hand with something new and stirring.

On Saturday at 9.30 the club's annual meeting will be held, and at 1.30 the great annual parade wil be held to Alton's new park. The programme of sports will include a funny baseball match between teams captained by John Charles and "Mike" Malone, a Baby Show, a tug-o'-war, and a host of races, introducing new and old features.

The C.P.R. is offering single fare from Thursday to Monday, and promise of good weather is all that is needed to assure a big success.

THE CARE OF THE REFRIGERATOR

The following points on the care of refrigerators, while intended for the information of the customer, are nevertheless useful for the dealers and his clerks in advising the customer on the use of this hot weather necessity. The return of mild weather makes the care of the refrigerator a matter of serious importance.

A fact that is not often recognized even by careful housekeepers is that the refrigerator should never be in a damp and airless place. Dampness will warp the wood, and by so doing make the tight closing of the doors impossible. This will admit the warm exterior air, melt the ice and defeat the purpose for which the refrigerator was built. Proper ventilation is an absolute necessity.

Another point to remember is that the doors should be opened as rarely as possible and shut tightly as soon as possible. Try to take out or put in all you have to at the same time, then bolt the door, even if you are "coming back in a minute."

By trying this experiment you will soon see how much colder your refrigerator keeps.

Do not economize by putting in an insufficient quantity of ice. This is a mistake. If you keep the ice box packed, or at least well filled, you will have the benefit of the maximum cooling capacity of your refrigerator; otherwise the temperature within will never be very low and things will not keep as well.

A small refrigerator, well stacked with ice, is more useful than a larger one only half full.

Except in certain cases where it can not be helped, make it a rule never to put food directly on the ice.

If the vent of the ice box communicates with the drain it should be seen to that a good plumber makes the connection in a sanitary way, otherwise the sewer gas from the drain may prove dangerous.

When a pan is used for the water from the refrigerator, it should be so large that it can not overflow before the time comes for emptying it.

Empty the whole box, ice and all, from time to time, and give the refrigerator a good scrubbing. Some people object to this plan as it takes some time afterward for the box to get cold again. But it makes for absolute cleanliness in the refrigerator.

WILL CONTINUE BUSINESS.

In an item regarding the dissolution of W. B. Stringer & Co., Toronto, which appeared in The Grocer last week, the statement was made that Mr. Stringer would carry on the business, and that Mr. McCabe would occupy himself with other interests. The writer was misinformed. A circular sent among the trade at the end of the week, noting the dissolution, states that Mr. McCabe will continue in the same fruit brokerage business at 32 Church Street. The Grocer regrets that the incorrect statement was made.

CAN THE RAILWAYS HANDLE THE CROP?

There is now no reasonable doubt that within a few weeks' time the farmers of the Canadian West will harvest the biggest and most profitable crop in the history of the country. This is a cause of congratulation, but it is one thing to harvest safely a bumper crop and another thing to market it quickly. After the disappointing crop of last year and the months during which the lack of money has been keenly felt there is no doubt that as soon as threshing operations can be commenced the grain will be rushed to the elevators. On every line of railway and at every station in the three western provinces the cry will be for cars and then for still more cars. The railways have at the present time some 3,000 idle cars in the west, but these and many more will be required to handle quickly the big grain crop that will be ready in a few weeks' time. It is the duty of governments and boards of trade to interest themselves to see that every possible preparation is made by the railways to handle the big rush of traffic so soon to commence.

That the railways are alive to the needs of the situation there is good reason to believe but a lively interest manifested by governments and boards of trade will do no harm. It is a matter of vital importance that there shall be no grain blockade this year and every possible precaution should be taken to prevent any such disastrous contingency.

The big crop this year will require the best facilities in order that it may be handled quickly. Moreover, it will be the means of attracting many new settlers and from year to year the transportation problem will become of more and more importance. It is the big question for Canadian statesmen to solve.

THE FLY NUISANCE.

Flies are more than a nuisance; they are a pest. And with modern science charging them with scattering fever and other pestilences broadcast, is it any wonder that the prospective buyer of food articles shrinks instinctively from a store filled with flies?

Absolute cleanliness is one of the best safeguards. Incipient stages of decay in fruit or vegetables always augment the trouble. Get rid of all stock past its prime, even though it must be almost given away. In warm weather it deteriorates every time.

Insist on having the streets kept clean. Town authorities should be urged to enforce this in fly season if at no other time. Flies breed largely in waste animal products. A country resident who noted with wonder the increased number of flies in her home traced the trouble to the fact that a meadow across the road from the residence had been converted that season into a horse pasture. With this fact in mind, it will be seen that the question is not so much one of neatness as a sanitary necessity.

Of course all doors must be kept well screened, and the springs are sure to be stiff. But even then, with so many customers passing in and out during the day, some of them not at all particular about how many flies they let in, enough of the unwelcome visitors are sure to invade the premises. You keep the cheese under screen, yet they flock unpleasantly near. Everything edible must be kept under cover or the public will object. The less you adhere to this rule the more will the flies persist in finding it an agreeable place.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST.

The Western Viewpoint by our special correspondent.

Winnipeg, July 18.—A week of fine weather with one day of much-needed rain has advanced the crop to a simply surprising extent. During the week, the second vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, together with the heads of the big milling companies and the editors-in-chief of Winnipeg's daily papers have made a tour of 1,726 miles, and the report indicates a crop of over 120 million bushels of wheat. It is at least a month yet to general harvest, and many things may happen in that time, but up to the present hour the conditions under which the crop is growing have been the very best that could be asked for. The growth has been strong and the heads are well formed, long, and in full bloom. Having carefully rapped on wood your correspondent feels like saying that a good crop is now practically assured.

Exhibition week is generally considered an excellent barometer for trade conditions in the country and though the fact of the fair at Brandon being held on the same dates as the Winnipeg exhibition had an effect on the attendance from country points, there was a very general round-up of country merchants in the city, and there is but one opinion and that is that the outlook is excellent for fall trade.

The demand for real estate, while it is not active, is healthier than it was three months ago and there is a steady if not a very large stream of British capital seeking investment in the Canadian west. One of the events of the week was the formation of an association of real estate dealers throughout the west. If this association materializes along the lines on which it has been organized, there is no doubt that it will not only help to sell real estate, but it will be a very wholesome check on the boom element which has done mischief in the past. The men at the head of the organization are experienced and reliable, and excellent results are looked for.

It is too early yet to give a definite expression of opinion as to the Grain Act, but there is no doubt that a large number of farmers will be seriously disappointed at the Government not assuming control of the terminal elevators. Just at present, however, the majority of farmers are too busy preparing to harvest their crop to give much attention to Grain Acts or any other acts, for that matter.

TRADE NOTES.

W. J. Nelson, Lethbridge, Alta., is succeeded in the grocery business by G. Bradbeer & Co.

The Sugarman-Sobey Co., general merchants, Stony Plains, Alta., have sold their business.

Leaudre Brault, secretary-treasurer Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal, will leave shortly on an extended vacation to Europe.

Quebec and Eastern Province Notes.

Large Lobster Shipments From Halifax —Prince Edward Island Firm Adopts Cash System—Montreal Discusses Importance of Good Delivery Outfits.

HALIFAX.

With a record shipment of lobsters, the Furness liner Rappahannock sailed for London and Havre this week. The cargo included 21,000 cases and the value of the shipment is roughly estimated at $420,000. This is the second large shipment from Halifax this year, one going forward a short time ago almost as large. So far this season case lobsters valued at almost one million dollars have been exported from Halifax. These shipments will give some idea of the value of the lobster industry in Nova Scotia, as all these fish were caught and packed in this province.

During the past week four large cargos of molasses have arrived at this port from Barbadoes. Among the largest was that of the schooner Zeta, which landed 573 puncheons, 98 hogsheads and 83 barrels.

Reports from the fruit division of the Department of Agriculture, say district No. 6 (the Annapolis Valley) has every prospect of a large crop of fall and winter apples, but the quality is likely to suffer from the depredations of insects and fungus pests. The insectmore particularly referred to is the canker worm. Many orchards up and down the valley are badly defoliated by its ravages. The browntail moth is said to be invading Yarmouth County. They are supposed to be blown from the shores of New England. It looks as though the fruit growers all over Nova Scotia, will in the near future have to reckon with this pest in earnest. Gravensteins and Kings (apples) are said to be doing particularly well this season. Greenings have nearly a full crop; Ribstons, Blenheims, Spies and Baldwins, a medium crop.

The strawberry season is about over. The average daily receipts during the week were about fifty crates, and the wholesale price advanced to twelve cents per box. Raspberries, blueberries, gooseberries and cherries are now coming on the market. The first new potatoes of the season were offered for sale here this week. They are very small as yet. Carrots, beets, peas and beans, all native grown, are now offered for sale.

Nova Scotia eggs were very scarce this week, all the stock on the market being bought up and the receipts were light. They are quoted at nineteen cents. P. E. I. eggs are in good supply at from 16 to 18 cents, but they are in light demand.

The immense growth of the retail trade of Wentzell's Limited, has made it necessary to make some changes in their building, which is now nearing completion. The entire Barrington St. floor will be devoted to the retail grocery and tobacco business and when completed will be one of the largest and most bountifully stocked grocery stores in the province.

J. Fred Miles and family, of Yarmouth, have removed to Sydney. Mr. Miles has purchased a grocery business in the Iron City. Wm. Caldwell will be his successor as manager of Yerxa's Grocery in Yarmouth.

During the past week 17,000 bags of sugar, landed at this port from the West Indies, were forwarded by rail to Montreal.

ST. JOHN.

July 18.—There has been little change in grocery markets during the past week. Oatmeal has declined 50 cents a barrel, but otherwise there has been no change in values. The merchants are looking every day for a drop in flour. At the present time there is a difference between the price of Manitoba's and Ontario's of $1.40, which is very unusual. For the most part, the dealers here have very light stocks of flour.

James McGrath, of the firm of Kane & McGrath, wholesale meat dealers and proprietors of a big cold storage plant here, arrived home last week after an absence of two months in the west, where he has been purchasing large consignments of live cattle for shipment to the local market. Mr. McGrath is greatly pleased with purchases he has made and shipments already received have been advantageously disposed of. Arrangements were made for large orders to be sent forward each week.

The "glad hand" is being extended to William J. Magee, the Charlotte Street grocer and meat dealer, in consequence of his having taken unto himself a bride. He was married on July 15 to Miss Margaret Winslow, of this city.

GEORGETOWN, P. E. I.

July 18.—W. W. Jenkins, Son & Co. are having their store on Kent Street thoroughly renovated and fixed up in fine style. Two large plate glass windows make a very effective front.

A Maclean & Co. have adopted the cash system. The opening paragraph of their announcement reads as follows: "After careful consideration of the possible results, we have decided to conduct our business on a strictly cash basis. On and after July 2 there will be absolutely no exception to this rule." They claim that this is the very best time of the year to launch the system, as most people have money. Asked if they have had any trouble in collections, they say that so far customers are paying up old accounts very well. They report business much better than expected.

Jobbers report business fair. The tendency is toward careful buying. As a matter of fact, the recent financial tightness has been a blessing to most retailers, and has resulted in more careful buying, and, as a consequence, more profit.

Rain, rain, rain, is the cry on all sides. It is now about a month since any has fallen in the eastern section of the Province, and the crops can hardly stand it much longer. The splendid start everything had this spring saves the situation.

There is little change to report in the grocery situation this week. Strawberries which dropped as low as five cents per box are going up again. As a result of the continued drought the bulk of the crop was on the market a short time.

A Maclean & Co. have installed a soda water fountain in their store, and report a record number of sales. Most all grocery stores may operate one to splendid advantage, and it is a wonder more don't get after the profits to be derived from this department.

As a result of a recent visit of the "Surprise Soap" representative, a large number of their yellow caps adorn the heads of the street arabs.

It is reported on good authority that the firm of J. C. Manuel is going out of business. J. C.'s large lobster interests demand more of his time.

Owing largely to the scarcity of fresh meats the demand for canned fish and meats is much greater than it has been for years.

MONTREAL.

July 20.—At this season of the year grocers expect a certain amount of lethargy in trade, but this year business has kept up to a wonderful degree, and it seems on investigating the cause that this is due to the fact that many people are not going to the country, owing to the Tercentenary in Quebec. In view of this, considerable dullness is expected during the week, and for sometime to come, as many of these people will go to the country afterwards. The demand from boarding houses, cafes and other public places is not as good as some time ago, as continued high prices have caused this class to economize a good deal, and even with this precaution some of them are going to the wall. However, this condition it is expected will ease off a bit owing to the fairly general rains which have fallen. Foreign food products are arriving in good supply, which in a measure will help matters.

In conversation with a jobber he stated "that trade was good, but not very remunerative." When questioned about the meaning of this statement he said that sugar was about the only thing going out of his establishment, and that the trade in this line was very wholesome indeed.

G. Graham, corner Drummond and St. Catherine Streets, has returned from a two weeks' outing at Bic. Mr. Graham looks well after his holiday.

Considerable animation and enthusiasm was displayed by a local grocer when questioned regarding his turnout. This appears to be his special field of endeavor, and it must be said that he has gotten results from his efforts as he possesses one of the neatest turnouts in the city. "I believe," stated this gentleman, "that a man's rig does a whole lot in attracting trade." Continuing, he said he thought people are predisposed favorably or otherwise in a large measure by the outfit which delivers their goods, meaning by this the driver as well as the horse and wagon. This man may lay too much stress on this adjunct to a business, but his words contain a large degree of truth. In discussing this point with other successful grocers the same opinion was expressed.

Capt. A. V. Boucher, vice-president of the Castle Blend Tea Co., is in Quebec with his regiment during the Tercentenary festivities.

One large retail grocery firm in the city has shipped $8,000 worth of goods to Quebec, which speaks well for their enterprise.

News From Western Canada

Alberta Butter Finding Opening on Vancouver Market—Brandon Grocers Interested in Recent Local Exhibition.

VANCOUVER.

July 17.—Wholesalers report very good business, with a marked improvement over the early part of the season. One firm shipped four carloads of general groceries to the interior within the past few days, and large shipments of staple lines are also being sent north. These are for the camps, and it is likely that this will continue. Partly because of the demand for cured meats during the warm weather, the price has advanced a shade and has still an upward tendency. Although eggs and butter retail at 35c., there has been no reduction in the price of food staples, which might have been expected by some as an attendant result of the general depression which has marked business during months past.

W. H. Barker, president and general manager of the B. C. Packers' Association, has returned from a trip as far north as the Skeena River. He reports that the pack of sockeyes, as a whole, does not equal that of last year at the same time. At Rivers Inlet it is about one-third of that of last year, at Skeena about the same, and at Bella Coola sockeyes are about the same, while springs are thirty per cent. less.

The strawberry season is practically over, and this year the crop was a very profitable one. During the month of June for which particulars are available, the Victoria Fruit Growers' Association turned over from two to thirty thousand crates of berries, shipping as far east as Winnipeg, and with no report of soft berries sent back. In and around Nelson, the estimated yield is placed at $25,000 for strawberries alone, while for small fruits generally, the amount will be twice that sum. For the lower mainland it is difficult to place an estimate until the season is over and returns are to hand, as so many growers are located in South Vancouver, Burnaby, Port Haney, Port Hammond, Mission and other districts. Altogether the year will be a profitable one, the yield being of good quality, the demand brisk and the prices good. An instance of the high grade of British Columbia fruit comes from Creston, in the Kootenay. Berries from there brought $6 a crate in Calgary, while those from Spokane, on the other side of the line, were selling at $2.50. The difference was because of the care taken by the Canadian grower in putting up a fancy article. That is what pays, and what the retailer likes.

With the fruit districts of the province growing so rapidly, it is hardly fair to quote any particular section to show by figures the progress that is being made. Trees are being set out in all parts. In the boundary, especially where mining has always been supposed to be the chief asset, fruit growing is coming to the fore, and in Southeast Kootenay some of the best fruit lands of the province are to be found. In Creston, for example, there were 28,711 fruit trees, while this year there are 53,740 and next year there will be over 100,000.

Prof. Quail, entymologist for the California State University, has been operating at Chilliwack, in addition to Thos. Cunningham, provincial fruit pest inspector, in the effort to find something that will kill out the destructive hop flea beetle. It has been found that chemical fertilizers must be used freely, as exhausted fertility of the soil invites the attack of insect pests. Rotated crops would help.

A point for butter shippers may be found in the better success of the Alberta creamery butter on the coast market as compared with that from Eastern Canada. The former comes in boxes of prints, while the latter comes in bulk of 56-pound boxes, is thawed up, made up in blocks and again put into cold storage. The result is that the Eastern creamery is not of so good quality, because of the successive operations.

A traveler from the Okanagan states that crops are looking well there in the fruit line and that Peachland will have the heaviest crop of peaches ever known there.

G. A. Layton, of Penticton, has sold his grocery business to E. S. Lake, late of Australia, but more recently of Vancouver. Mr. Lake is an expert photographer, and will conduct a studio also.

Mr. Worsnop, of Grimsby, Ontario, has arrived to take the foremanship of the fruit cannery of the Southern Okanagan Canning Co., at Penticton.

BRANDON.

July 17.—The Brandon fair has been an unqualified success. In the number and quality of the exhibits we eclipsed all former years, while the attendance was quite equal to, if not beyond, all precedent. Looking at these fairs from the grocer's point of view, we might ask if they are a success. Primarily it is an agricultural exhibition, and agriculture in Manitoba is our basic wealth and indirectly these fairs, by encouraging crop raising and stock breeding, do us all good. Directly we benefit by it and it is only right that we should, as we put a lot of money into this in the shape of prizes. The population of our city during this week is doubled, and this means that more than double the usual quantity of food products is consumed. Our hotelmen buy larger than at any other time of the year.

Our merchants do not get all out of the fair that they might. People come here from all parts of these three provinces and if our grocers were to advertise well and wisely at fair times I feel sure they would get a lot of business that usually goes to the mail order houses in the metropolis. We are certainly losing advertising opportunities.

Speaking of donations, your correspondent noted that, as in other years, local merchants offered valuable prizes for quality in dairy butter. Farmers here need to be encouraged along this line. Though this is an agricultural district, yet the butter question often reaches the acute stage in the grocer's experience. On account of the scarcity of help and the unwillingness of what help there is to engage in Sunday labor the quantity of butter does not keep pace with the growth of population, and so a famine in this commodity faces the grocer once in a while. Just now, however, supplies are plentiful and there does not seem much reason for any grocer stopping a farmer's wagon and offering 17c cash for butter and then selling it for 18c.

I noticed at the fair that the first prize last year and the second this year for appearance and style in delivery rigs and horses class went to Smith & Burton, wholesale grocers, of this city.

The half holiday on the 9th was observed loyally by all the grocers. The drygoodsmen who had announced that they wouldn't begin to close until the 16th, fell into line at the last moment when they saw the unity and unanimity of the grocers.

ENTERTAINED U.S. ASSOCIATION.

The F. F. Dalley Co., of Hamilton entertained the members of the Leather Finders' Association of the United States at Niagara Falls on Friday, July 10. Some seventy-five guests were present, including representatives from every state in the union, and it is safe to say that these went away with a good idea of Canadian manufacturing firms.

DRIED FRUITS — Advices from Greece state that stocks of currants available are limited and are being gradually reduced. The new crop is reported as coming on favorably, and there is every prospect of a large yield this year. It is expected that the fig crop will be considerably less than last year, which latter, by the way, was an exceedingly large one. This fact does not necessarily indicate higher prices this year. Locally prices remain unchanged.

TEA—In Japans the shortage in second crop is extensive, as was the case with the first crop, and there is a noticeable advance in the price, but already the teas are almost all taken up, and third crop teas are now looked forward to. The demand for medium and low grades for home consumption, is very heavy this year, and also a considerable quantity is being taken up for Korean and Manchurian trade. These are the causes of the present high prices in Japan, and the outlook is that present prices will be firmly maintained, but if there is any change the probability is that it will be for an advance. Most other lines are neglected, except China Pingsueys, which have shown some activity. Ceylon gunpowders have been slightly more active. There is no change in prices since our last quotations.

Stocks on the spot are small, and as small supplies are coming forward prices rule steady. Jobbers report trade very dull, almost nothing doing. Prices remain the same as at last quotation.

BEANS—The shortage and high price of Canadian beans has brought about the introduction to the Canadian market of beans from India, which come to Canada via England. The "Hindoos," as they are called, are being quoted at a price below the Canadian product. The Hungarian product is being quoted at a price slightly below the native product. The advent of the "Hindoo" product is certainly a triumph of British marine enterprise, and is an evidence of the fact that the world may depend on remote countries for supplies, with safety. Local prices range between $2.10 and $2.15. The demand is good.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—The demand for vegetables continues good owing to the scarcity of fresh vegetables and their high price. Fruits are also in good demand. Fish is neglected; also meats. There has been no price fixed yet for new canned salmon, but during the past few days some large orders have been placed with price open.

TORONTO—Fruits and vegetables, 1907 pack, are passing off fairly well and it looks as if stocks would be pretty well cleaned up before the new goods come in in any quantity. The new prices for 1908 goods on peas, spinach, asparagus, strawberries and rhubarb came into effect on Monday and some little business is being done.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Steady.
Canned Goods—Moving well.
Dried Fruits—Slightly Easier.
Collections—Fair.

Toronto, July 16, 1908.

Business has been somewhat quieter this week with some houses on account of the absence of the travelers on their holidays. The houses not affected, however, report a good general business with the situation improving to some slight extent. Collections continue about on the same basis, with some few renewals being made. The outlook, however, seems encouraging.

SUGAR—The feature of the week locally has been the extension of the district within which the new brands, Beaver and Imperial, may be sold, this now extending to all Ontario. Grocers are buying quite heavily of these as well as of the standard brands. Some of the jobbers are feeling rather strongly because only 20 per cent. of orders in these brands can be secured, and the matter seems likely to stir up some feeling in the trade.

The situation in general is summarized by Willett & Gray, as follows:

"The week under review has been quiet with the tone and tendency in favor of buyers and the close showing 1-32c to 1-16c decline. The market must be classed as extremely sensitive and liable to some surprises under certain conditions. Refiners have fortified their position by buying and controlling sufficient stock for their requirements for 60 days under a normal state of the refined demand. An abnormal demand for refined at any time would change present tone and tendency, with much vigor for the time being. Just a simple equalization of supply to normal demand without any provision thus far made for an increased demand or for carrying stock is not altogether a safe position and leaves open a chance for a quick recovery from whatever further decline may come in absence of immediate buying. For there are no indications of any improvement in raws and a desire to sell is more evident in some quarters than last week, making a very sensitive market within narrow limits. As said last week some 150,000 tons raw sugar should be bought during the next 60 days to provide for a workable stock at the end of that period. If purchased gradually it may not cause any stimulus to the market, but if delayed until urgent needs are met a quick response must be expected. As regards the prospects of a decidedly better demand for refined, there are several reasons for expecting it given in our remarks on refined. At the close sugars from various countries are on offer at or about current quotations with now and then a sale likely at market value, but with a looking for small concessions by buyers generally."

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES — Business is dull with no change in prices.

TEAS—Local business is comparatively quiet at fairly steady prices. The general situation is summed up in Thompson Bros.' weekly circular as follows: "The market, aided by a fair number of export orders, has been fairly active at the opening sales of the new Indian crop and prices for teas of satisfactory character have on the whole been up to expectation; this should strengthen the position for better invoices which are expected from Assam and Darjeeling. Notwithstanding there is a fair trade passing, the price for common kinds continues to dwindle, and 6d may be quoted for common leaf; but this may be partly accounted for by the holiday feeling of the trade, who are unwilling to stock beyond their weekly requirements."

COFFEE—Business locally continues fairly good at steady prices. The situation abroad is rather stronger, with interest centering on the working out of the Brazilian Government's valorization scheme in the face of the new crop. The situation promises to furnish some interesting developments shortly.

DRIED FRUITS—Business is not at all active. Some houses are easing off a little in quotations on bag figs and seeded raisins.

ADVANCE IN TAPIOCA.

The Grocer is in receipt of late information regarding an important change in the primary market for tapioca. The advice states: There has been quite a turn for the better in primary markets, latest cables from Singapore quoting a very important advance amounting to nearly ½c. a pound. The cause of the advance is not stated, but it is supposed that it is owing to short supplies. Cables advise that prices are likely to still further advance." This applies of course on goods for September shipment, which will reach Canada some time in December.

M. J. Bailey, grocer, Waterloo, Ont., has assigned.

ORGANIZING CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION.

Company Being Formed in Toronto to Carry on Various Branches of Business.

"The Dominion Co-Operative Association" is being incorporated and organized in Toronto to establish and operate co-operative wholesale and retail stores in that city and suburbs and all over Canada if the undertaking is successful. The scheme is being floated by the British-Canadian Securities Co. a company-promotion concern, of which Hiram Kiteley and Hugh Macdonald are joint managers, and it is proposed to obtain a charter from the Ontario Government.

The main office, supply depot and storehouse will be located in Toronto and the stock will be purchased in the leading British and European markets. Factories and workshops, too, are among the aims of the association. The capital aimed at is $1,000,000, divided into 200,000 shares of $5 each. There is to be no price-cutting and business will be transacted on a cash basis. The profits will be divided as follows: 50 per cent. as bonus to members, 20 per cent. as dividend on capital stock, and the remaining 30 per cent. to create a fund for the extension of the business. Every variety of merchandise will be handled, and even real estate.

A meeting of interested parties was held on July 16, at which the following provisional directors were elected.

Alex. Fraser, Provincial Archivist, Toronto; H. Macdonald and H. Kiteley, of Kiteley & Macdonald, financial agents, Toronto and London, Eng.; Wm. H. Holtby, of Holtby Bros., contractors, Toronto; Charles E. Anderson, of the C. G. Anderson Lumber Co., Toronto; Wm. Laing Malcolmson, capitalist, London Eng.; Albert Chamberlain, contractor, Toronto (President British Welcome League); Robert J. Goudy, vice-president and general manager Canadian Weber Gas Engine Co., Limited, Toronto. H. Macdonald was appointed secretary of the association and A. H. Cooper secretary of the committee, which will meet weekly to arrange for organization purposes.

TRAVELERS' WEEK-END OUTING.

H. P. Eckardt's Representatives Visit St. Clair and Detroit.

The travelers of H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, enjoyed a most pleasant outing from Friday to Monday last week. Under the direction of S. H. P. Mackenzie they traveled up to Port Huron on Friday and ran down to St. Clair, Mich., on Saturday morning.

The object of the visit here was to visit the works of the Diamond Crystal Salt Co., for which firm Eckardt & Co. are the Canadian distributors. The party was given a most hearty reception by the officials of the company, and were looked after particularly by R. R. Moore, vice-president. The trip through the factory was most instructive and entertaining, and the travelers gathered in a good many talking points on "the salt that is all salt."

After the trip through the factory the company tendered a luncheon at the hotel Oakland, where a couple of jolly hours were spent.

The party left St. Clair on Saturday and ran down to Detroit, where Sunday was spent at the Hotel Cadillac. They returned on Monday. The gentlemen who took in the trip were: A. J. Chalue, J. W. Charles, J. J. Jamieson, H. G. Elliott, St. Geo. Price, T. Waters, W. J. McFarlane, A. McFarland, A. G. Hill, W. E. Sutton, G. L. Scott, U. Stephens, S. H. P. Mackenzie.

DROUGHT EFFECT ON VEGETABLE MARKET.

The continued dry weather has left its mark on everything that grows in the vegetable kingdom. The cheese and butter market is a good barometer of the varying moods of the weather man, but when the vegetable market gets cantankerous it means that the heat has been turned on for too long a time. Forest fires have been raging in certain parts of the Province of Quebec, which have reached a momentous degree. All of this is unfortunate, as it means a lack through the high prices which necessarily rule, of a vegetable diet in the summer time. Things were beginning to assume a serious aspect and then there was a generous downpour of rain which has lasted for a couple of days and nights. Reports which are coming in announce the return of crops to almost a normal condition, with the exception of those which have been entirely ruined. In any case it is thought that the season may be somewhat delayed, but the production on the average will be good. It is a source of congratulation that this hot period has not lessened the prospect of a good harvest in the west, which, after all, is Canada's great asset.

Exhibition week brought many retailers to the city and the wholesalers are keeping open house. Many travelers are in from the road during the exhibition and hence this is a slack week for business.

The general situation shows continued improvement. The weather has been all that could be desired for the crops and from every part of the West come the most optimistic reports. The harvest will be on in another month's time and it may safely be said now that the critical stage has been passed without any damage. The biggest and most profitable crop in the history of the West is about to be reaped and its proceeds will assure twelve months' prosperity in the country west of the Great Lakes.

London Retailers Discuss New Wholesale Terms—Brockville Grocers Discussing Saturday Night Closing—Combine of Housekeepers vs. Market Vendors in Chatham.

LONDON.

July 20.—Trade continues very fair throughout Western Ontario, this city being no exception to the rule. Travelers are now on their holidays a little earlier than usual, and for two weeks to come what business is done by wholesalers will be through wire and mail orders.

Canners have reduced the price of tomatoes 5c per dozen and they may go lower, as both wholesalers and retailers are pretty well stocked up.

Four local wholesale houses were represented at the last meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association, when the new rules as to cash and discounts came up for discussion. The wholesale men blamed the change on the eastern members of the Wholesale Grocers' Exchange, who, claimed to have found the terms to work satisfactorily. Another reason given was that the new method of doing business simplified book-keeping by making all accounts net. The result would be that retailers would get their goods cheaper, but it would take time to regulate matters. E. J. Ryan suggested that the Wholesale Exchange reconsider the new terms and was promised that such might be done if the terms were found not to work satisfactorily. Nothing, however, could be done until the next meeting of the Exchange, which is ten months off.

The Retail Grocers' Association are going after hucksters who violate the market by-law, and will engage a detective if necessary.

The bankrupt grocery stock of Frank Smythe has been sold to Mr. Brodrick for 51 cents on the dollar.

Fruit is being bought up quicker this year than any season in the history of the local market. The supply has been large and the high prices have proven a sort of bonanza to growers. The explanation of the big demand is found in the fact that last year's small crop and consequent high prices resulted in less preserving being done than customarily. This season housekeepers, seeing nothing in the cellars but empty jars, have taken an early start, preparatory to laying away as much as possible this year. Strawberries and cherries have already had their day and raspberries now hold the boards. Why prices keep high in spite of the big crops is explained by the fact that Montreal is now taking much of the fruit that London should have. London's consumption of fruit has increased 50 per cent. during the last half-dozen years, while that of Montreal has grown 500 per cent. Much of the increased consumption is due to the popularity of fruit combinations with ice cream.

A retail merchants' association has been formed by the east-end business men. Among the officers are President Thomas Shaw, of the Retail Grocers' Association, who has been chosen president and E. E. Linnell, one of the executive of the grocers' organization. The object of the promoters is to as far as possible boom the east-end and to prevent people living in that district going down town for what they want. It is the intention to hold a big picnic in Queen's Park on the 25th inst.

E. L. Liddicoatt has taken over and is selling off the bankrupt grocery stock of J. T. McLean, corner Dundas and Rectory Sts.

BERLIN.

July 20.—J. Fiddler, who for many years was in the employ of Dunke & Co., grocers, recently opened up a store of his own on Courtland Avenue and is meeting with success.

There was a time when it was considered that to be successful a down-town grocery store in Berlin had to be located on King Street, or within a very limited stretch of that thoroughfare. By the number who tried to go against this argument and failed there seemed to be a great deal of truth in it, but this theory has been exploded by the successful business being conducted by Stuebing & Son, on Queen Street. Until about a year ago Mr. Stuebing, Sr., was located on King Street, when J. P. Bender, in order to get the stand for a bookstore, paid Mr. Stuebing 100 cents on the dollar and ran off the stock. Shortly after that, Mr. Stuebing, associated with his son Arthur, late of Detroit, started their present business on Queen Street.

William Roos, of Randall & Roos, wholesale grocers, is probably the most enthusiastic supporter in town of the 29th Regt. band of Berlin. When not spoken of as a military band, this organization is the Berlin Musical Society and Mr. Roos has been treasurer of the society for many years and the progress of the band to the position of one of the leading bands of Canada is due in no small measure to his efforts.

BROCKVILLE.

July 20.—At a recent meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association it was decided to again observe the Wednesday half-holiday, beginning on the 8th of July and ending the last Wednesday of August.

Considerable discussion on the advisability of closing at 10 p.m. Saturday nights was noticed at the same meeting. Some of the members were in favor and a few not so minded.

It was finally moved and carried that a committee be appointed to present a petition to the merchants of the town for signatures, which was done, the majority of them signing. The petition is to be brought before the town council with the request that a by-law be passed compelling early-closing on Saturday nights.

The picnic held by the Retail Merchants' Association last year at Beverly Lake, Delta, proved such a success that it has been decided to hold the outing at the same place on Civic Holiday, Aug. 3rd, this year. A meeting was called on the 7ts inst. for the purpose of striking committees and the following were chosen as chairmen: General chairman, Geo. T. Lewis; sports committee, Robt. Craig; transportation, H. Y. Farr; refreshments, J. J. Curran; advertising, Geo. Wright; music and dancing, C. H. Post; decoration and fireworks, H. B. Coates; prizes H. T. Murray; secretary, A. M. Patterson. Arrangements have been made with the Brockville and Westport Railway to provide extra coaches for the transportation of the picnickers. The 41st Regimental Band and also the orchestra has been engaged. Lacrosse and baseball games have been arranged along with other land and water sports, for which excellent prizes will be given.

Two cars of bananas a week are being brought into town and are readily disposed of.

A new bakery firm has started during the past month, having purchased the business formerly owned by M. McCartin. The new firm is Beatty & Ballange. The former having been in the grocery of C. W. Johnston for a number of years.

INGERSOLL.

July 20.—A perplexing aspect of the small fruit crop this season is the high prices that have prevailed since the earliest fruit was marketed. It is difficult to recall a season when the small fruits on the whole were more plentiful than at the present time. The strawberry crop was a bountiful one, short prices were predicted, even by the wise ones, and yet the highest figures for years were reached, and the price remained practically stationary. The same thing may be said of the berries; there is an abundance of them, and although everybody has been anticipating a drop in the price, it has been kept up by a demand which seems impossible to trace, and they will soon be a thing of the past with the price never below ten cents per box. The producers seem to have a different way of marketing their fruits than in years gone by. They take better care of it, don't swamp the market, and seldom appear anxious that they will not get rid of their supply. By this method, which it would seem is really a fact, the merchants don't carry such large supplies that they have to "cut" to get out with a "whole skin." But its the same old story of the consumer having to pay the shot, and, of course, there is no end to the grumbling on the part of the thrifty housewife. Then with fruit expensive and sugar higher than in previous season, laying up the winter's store is really a problem that requires plenty of finances to properly solve.

The merchants and clerks of Ingersoll are not enjoying the recreation during the summer months that was once their privilege, and all because the half-holiday each week has been abandoned. But while there is no regular respite from toil, the merchants know the benefits that accrue from an occasional outing, and they pull "together" with the utmost harmony. On the 28th of this month a big union Sunday school excursion will be run to Port Stanley, and on the strength of a requisition from the merchants and other citizens Mayor Sutherland has proclaimed the occasion a holiday.

A very neat and attractive office building is being erected in connection with the factory of the St. Charles Condensing Co. The new building occupies a site at the front of the firm's splendid factory.

With another autumn already "in sight" there has not been the decline in price of butter that was expected. The creamery product is still retailing at from 28 to 30 cents per pound, while choice dairy butter sells readily at 25 cents per pound.

GALT.

July 20.—Trade conditions in Galt have been exceptionally good during the past two weeks. Of course the beginning of the fruit season is responsible for a considerable increase in business, but trade in other lines has improved considerably.

As a matter of fact, with the exception of one large shop, which is running short time, the financial depression in Galt has entirely disappeared. The many unemployed have secured work, the industries are running full time, and trade in all lines is exceptionally good.

Ald. Radigan, the Main Street grocer, returned last week from a four days' visit to Detroit. "The big cities are all right," he said, in conversation with your correspondent, "but Galt is plenty large enough for me."

An Italian has opened up a wholesale and retail fruit business on Dickson Street. We know his name if we saw it, but we can't spell it or pronounce it. Galt has now three stores devoted entirely to the sale of fruit, which article is also handled by numerous confectioners and all the grocerymen.

On Saturday, July 11, there were three large excursions out of Galt, a fact which is greatly deplored by the grocerymen. "It practically ruins business for the day," said a prominent grocer. "And not only is business affected, but a large amount of money is taken out of town. On those three excursions on Saturday there were over 800 people. None of these would spend less than $3, which would make a total of $2,400. And many of these people can ill-afford the money spent in this manner. Why, I know a neighbor of mine who was going on an excursion to Niagara Falls. She had managed to secure enough money for her fare, and then went to a neighbor's and asked for the loan of a pair of boots. Imagine a woman in those circumstances taking in an excursion." It would appear from the above that the excursions do result in a certain amount of financial trouble.

The grocers and fruit dealers are having a big laugh on the Market Clerk here. One day recently the Clerk announced through a local paper that on the following morning over 2,500 boxes of strawberries and raspberries would be offered at very low prices. Consequently there was an unprecedented attendance of housewives at the Market Square. But they were doomed to disappointment, as only one man turned up, and his stock of fruit was exceedingly small. The hundreds of women started out on a still hunt for the Market Clerk, and the reporter of the newspaper, after which they visited the grocery stores and made their purchases of berries. In speaking of the incident a grocer remarked that the occurrence only emphasized the fact that the grocery stores were always the most dependable places at which to secure fruit.

"Good day, your Worship," is the only salutation being received by Ald. Radigan these days. The genial groceryman has been appointed Acting-Mayor during the absence of Mayor Patterson at Montreal and Quebec.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at Tavistock recently when Miss Annie Matthews was united in marriage to Alexander Sloan, a member of Sloan Bros., grocers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Vert, of Woodstock, at the residence of the bride's father, in the presence of only immediate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Sloan have returned from a honeymoon trip to New York, and have taken up residence on West Main Street, where they are receiving the congratulations of their many friends.

CHATHAM.

July 20.—In discussing the high price of butter, one grocer states that the public are themselves to blame. "It, instead of paying the exorbitant prices asked," he said, "the people would refuse to pay too much, and would instead patronize the groceries, where they can procure what they want at a reasonable figure, the market prices would soon come down. If, however, the public continue to pay 25c a pound for butter when they ought to pay no more than 20c, we may expect to pay between 30c and 40c next winter." It is singular, yet nevertheless a fact, that a great many people prefer to pay more on the market than they would have to pay in the groceries. The result means higher prices, both for the public at large and for the grocers as well. Locally, there is unquestionably a sort of tacit combine among market vendors for the purpose of keeping up and regulating prices, and experience has shown conclusively that the only way to purchase to advantage is to waylay the vendor on her road to the market and make a deal before her fellow-marketers can inform her as to the prices. It stands to reason that a body even of fifty or more grocers could deal with such a combine far more effectively than could the entire purchasing public, and could effect more in the direction of keeping prices where they should be within the reach of the average purchaser. It may sound like a joke, but it has been freely stated that, if the public were excluded from the market and only the grocers allowed to purchase, the public would get things far cheaper than they do.

To show on what slight foundation the opposition to the "open market" is based, a grocer tells of a woman who dropped into his store last Saturday to price some celery. The groceryman politely informed her that the price was a shilling a stalk. Instantly the lady let fire on him, stating that she had been down to the market and could not see a single stalk for sale, adding that the grocers had gone down there early and bought it all up, in order to hold up the price. When she had finished the grocer neatly took the wind out of her sails by informing her that to provide her and the public in general with celery at this season of the year, the much abused grocer had to import it from California, that the celery in question was imported, and that home-grown celery is not offered on the market at this season of the year, and never has been.

One nuisance against which retailers should war to the knife is the insidious Newfoundland 20c piece. "It is the worst piece of money coined," remarked a merchant this afternoon when the Grocer correspondent declined to take a 20c piece handed to him in mistake for a quarter. For many years past this coin has circulated very freely in Chatham and vicinity, and each twenty-cent piece has probably in its rounds cost the retailers several dollars. The tendency of the average purchaser is to pass it off for a quarter, particularly when he purchases from the groceryman; and the latter, having received it, has to choose between dishonesty or loss. It is a pity that nothing can apparently be done to stamp out the nuisance.

Miss May Taylor, daughter of J. P. Taylor, the Park Street grocer, who some time ago left for London to enter as a nurse-in-training, has been compelled by ill-health to discontinue her studies.

L. A. Cummings, who has been conducting the West End grocery, at the corner of West and Gray Streets, for a year or more, has disposed of his store and residence to C. H. Seeley, Grand Avenue. The new proprietor is now in possession. Mr. Cummings' intentions for the future have not been announced.

Jas. H. Kadwell, who recently succeeded Fred Wood in the possession of the Grand Avenue Grocery, has launched into newspaper advertising. Incidentally, he announces himself as a cash grocer, printing the word "Cash" in prominent and significant capitals.

Duncan Ferguson, for some time past a member of V. J. Bosworth's grocery staff, left this week for Windsor, where he has accepted a position with a grocery firm.

Fleming & Tillson, local agents for Flavelle's, Limited, have dissolved partnership. The business will be continued by W. M. Grant & Co.

R. Wigle & Co., Leamington, issue tickets to each customer, punched with the amount of the purchase. When the amount reaches $2.50, the customer is entitled to a handsome pasteline picture with frame for 65c.

Francis Commo, well known in the grocery trade here, passed away at St. Joseph's Hospital on Sunday, July 12, at the advanced age of 80. A native of Montreal, he farmed in this vicinity for many years, and from 1895 to 1902 conducted a very successful grocery on the market square.

Reports from various parts of the county indicate that the bean crop this year will be a very good one. Though the acreage is perhaps a little less than in previous years, better returns per acre are expected.

Lack of labor for picking during the short berry season has been always a difficulty for the growers. To meet this it is suggested that the midsummer holidays commence about three weeks earlier—say June 10—and end about August 1. This would nearly equalize the two school terms, and also release the children for the healthy, outdoor work in the berry patches.

The local retail merchants last Tuesday evening held one of the best attended meetings in several months. In addition to a number of minor matters, the renewal of the Bell telephone franchise, which expires in August, was discussed. The present service was warmly criticized, and the opinion of the meeting was strongly in favor of at least considering an application from an independent company, should one materialize. The following resolution was passed: "That we draft a resolution to the city council and go on record as opposing an exclusive franchise to any telephone company."

In response to an enquiry, Chairman Anderson stated that, it being their rush season, the grocers had been too busy to take up the proposed central delivery system, and would not have much time to deal with it for a couple of months. In company with Harry Andrew, he had put in a day watching the Pontiac system at work. "It is a very good thing," was Mr. Andrew's comment.

Advertising on hotel blotters was also discussed. Recently the various local merchants were solicited to advertise on a blotter prepared for use in all the city hotels. The question naturally arose, "Does this come within the association's resolution prohibiting programme and other advertising?" A majority of the retailers apparently thought so, since the names of only one or two, at most, appeared on the blotter. The association ruled that the blotter came within the meaning of the words, "any card," and the members of the association will be notified to this effect. To the grocery trade particularly, such advertising would be supremely useless, since the average guest at an hotel doesn't buy five cents' worth of groceries. A gratifying feature of the affair was the striking unanimity with which the local retailers turned down the proposition.

A merchants' picnic is to be held at Erie Beach, the new summer resort at the Lake Erie end of the C. W. & L. E. line, on Aug. 19. The idea was broached at Tuesday evening's meeting by A. D. Westman, who frankly took the London retail grocers' picnic as a model. The idea met with unanimous acceptance, and a committee of eight, including two grocers, Wm. Anderson and Harry Andrew, was appointed. Since then the committee has met and made preliminary arrangements. Sub committees have been appointed. Sports and music will be looked after by Wm. Anderson, Harry Andrew, Wilfred McCorvie, H. S. Northwood, G. W. Cowan and T. Walter Poile—the first four grocers—while H. G. Hodges and A. D. Westman will attend to finances and advertising, and G. W. Cowan will make the necessary arrangements with the C. W. & L. E. It has been suggested that all the stores close at noon on Wednesday, August 19. The picnic will include both merchants and employes, and will be made an annual affair.

There is much talk of a housekeepers' combine, for the purpose of boycotting the market vendors. Quite a few housekeepers claim that the vendors are charging famine prices. It is claimed that there is a definite system upon the market whereby competition is stifled and the prices kept uniform. Latterly, besides stifling competition, the vendors have, so say the purchasers, undertaken to boost prices, 25c. butter being one of the results. Housekeepers are just beginning to realize that while they were paying 25c. for butter on the market, they could have bought it for from 20c. to 22c. in the stores. Berry prices are also declared to be exorbitant. The boycott, if it ever takes form, should help the grocery trade. There was a noticeable falling off in buying on the market last Saturday. Vendors, on their part, claim that prices in previous years were too low.

There is another explanation for high butter and egg prices. Creameries and wholesale buyers scour the country, buying up huge lots of this produce and shipping to Toronto and Montreal. The local creamery has four rigs constantly out. The farmers sell to them rather than hitch up and come to the city; hence offerings of butter and eggs are growing smaller. Furthermore, farmers who formerly made butter now sell their milk to the creameries.

Among the company from the 24th Kent Battalion now attending the Champlain Tercentenary at Quebec are W. J. Mounteer, of E. A. Mounteer's bakery, and W. M. Murdock, former proprietor of the West End grocery.

Gaspar Favata, the Italian fruit merchant, has once more looked in the face of trouble. Last week he turned the hose upon a waterworks official who remonstrated with him for lawn sprinkling after hours. As usual, Gaspar was able to put up a good case, and escaped with a $3.75 assessment. Since Gaspar's not very heinous escapades have usually won him much newspaper space and a certain amount of public sympathy at a minimum of cost, the public are now commencing to suspect that the Italian is just a shrewd advertiser.

Harry Mahler, manager of several evaporators, states that he anticipates no difficulty in getting the necessary quantity of apples.

A movement for a Wednesday half-holiday during August is now on foot and will probably be considered at the next R. M. A. meeting. There is also some talk of closing at 6.30 every evening except Saturday, though not in all lines of trade.

The Blenheim and South Kent Telephone line has been extended to Mull, with connections at Harry Saddington's grocery.

The Canada Flour Mills—better known as the Kent Mills—now possesses a brass band. The organization is practically identical with the 24th Regiment band, disbanded last month, and which N. H. Stevens, the company's president, has taken under his wing.

WHERE THE ADVERTISER IS NOT A "BUTTER-IN."

From the N.Y. Selling Magazine.

R. S. Tibbals, advertising manager for the Angle Mfg. Co., of New York, who advertise in general mediums, gave expression to a great truth in an address delivered before the New York Advertising League, when he said that, in a general medium, the advertiser is a "butter-in" and must compete with the text pages for attention.

In this, as in many other respects, the technical or trade publication offers a striking contrast. In such papers the ads. extend and complete the information contained in the text pages, and instead of competition, there is actual and active co-operation.

Such a publication is about the most uninteresting thing conceivable to a man not engaged or closely interested in the lines of which it treats, yet is of absorbing interest and vital value to those whose work lies in that particular field; therefore the waste of circulation to any advertiser whose announcements are appropriate to the medium, is too small to have any appreciable bearing on results.

The ad. in the trade or technical paper is not a "butter-in;" it belongs there. The prolonged absence of any considerable number of them would not only make the reader feel that he was being deprived of a valuable source of business news to which he is entitled, but would decrease the interest in and circulation of the best of such publications, as well as the publisher's ability to make it worth its price.

Work the Indispensable Condition for Success in Every Career—Faith in Oneself and One's Firm a Very Necessary Factor—The Right Kind of Salesman Must be a Human Dynamo—How Self-restraint Brings Success.

By Walter D. Moody—Serial rights for Canada purchased by the MacLean Publishing Co. from the publishers, A. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

CHAPTER XII.

The Right Kind of Salesman.

You shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you.
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
Thou Fortune's champion!
When the hurly burley's done. When the battle's lost and won.
To attempt a great work is to become a great worker.
No man rises without being knocked down a few times.
The front door to success lies through the garden of duty.
A salesman's science never dies so long as it is doing something.

Successful salesmanship is a product of the positive qualities. Its component parts might best be indicated in the statement that the right kind of a salesman has what his negative brethren have not.

In place of being a knocker, he is a booster; in place of being an order-taker, he is a business-getter; in place of being fussy or over-anxious, he is composed, but aggressive; in place of being a wheel-barrow, he is a great mogul; in place of being a know-it-all, he is keen and dignified; in place of being quick-tempered, he is self-poised and genial; in place of being a sky-rocket, he is a wear-weller; in place of being all head and no soul, he is a mixture of both; in place of being an old-timer or a down-and-outer, he is an up-and-inner.

By this I do not mean to imply that right salesmen possess all the positive qualities that enter into successful salesmanship, but the average is good. I have known many "top-notchers" in our profession, not one of whom but was marked by some specific qualification that easily distinguished him from the man of mediocre ability.

One Special Quality.

In every case there showed development of some one positive quality to a marked degree—such as educated enthusiasm, unswerving fidelity to purpose, persistent determination to win, a thorough knowledge of his own business and a reasonable conception of business interests in general, with a fair balance of other requisites, like tact, honesty, and good-fellowship.

It goes without saying that an indispensable condition for success in every career is contained in a single word—WORK.

The little girl was perfectly correct in her answer when the teacher asked her to give an example of a quadruped.

"A horse," was the reply.

"Correct. Give another example."

"Another horse." No room for doubt there.

And thus, in this and every other age, in the lives of all men who do things, there has been but one way to spell success, and that is—W-O-R-K, WORK.

A salesman may be brainy, but he must work; honest, but he must work; diplomatic, but he must work; optimistic, but he must WORK.

If he would graduate from the classes we have been discussing in the nine preceding chapters, and come into the field of endeavor worth while, he must work.

What does an optimist do?

Having the choice of many opportunities, he chooses them all. Just the reverse of the pessimist, who, having the choice of two evils, chooses both.

Again, being of good cheer and good faith, he counts every day a good day in his struggle for self-mastery and higher and better results, looking toward permanency.

The only sure way to win is to commence to win from the start, and then—keep everlastingly at it.

Faith Necessary to Success.

Another and most pronounced feature of successful salesmanship is faith.

It is exceedingly difficult to get many otherwise bright and capable men to realize that their lack of success is more often due to a lack of faith in themselves than to any other one thing.

I shall never forget the inspiration that was mine when I first thoroughly learned the lesson of the value of faith in one's self and surroundings.

For several years I was equally interested with four others in a jobbing business which was located in an isolated market, and which yielded but a fair working salary to its owners. I grew restless because we were unable to build the business up to a point of greater profit, and determined to cut loose and seek more lucrative fields, where there would be some possibility of expansion.

Having carefully considered several propositions, I finally selected the one that, so far as I could judge, held forth the best advantages for a permanent and successful future.

The deal closed, I removed to another and much larger city to enter upon a three years' contract as sales manager for the largest house of its kind in the world, employing a force of forty general salesmen and twice as many stock or house men. I entered upon my new duties filled to the brim with enthusiasm, believing that I knew salesmen from A to Z, having traveled myself ten years, before taking charge of our own salesmen in the business that I had just left.

But I soon learned that I still had a great deal to learn in the management of so large a force. The experience was not only newer and larger than anything I had previously undertaken, but my new house had not up to that time conducted a thorough sales department under a managing head, such as was then being installed in all large concerns.

This meant that I had two new propositions to work out—the organization of the men and the organization of the department. And right here, with all due respect to our men—for they were the best in the business—let me say that, for a new man coming into a new house to tackle a new proposition like that, where so many traveling salesmen were concerned, was like running a college freshman up against a Rugby football team for the first time.

Naturally the men regarded me with suspicion and as an intruder, coming among them perhaps to limit their freedom and to make their future a nightmare of red-tape rules and regulations.

Carefully I figured this all out beforehand, and well did I know that I should have to gain their confidence before instituting any radical new policies.

Somehow or other things did not progress as nicely as I had calculated they would, and I began to construe their attitude toward the new departure as being hostile to me. The men were slow in making or reciprocating friendly overtures, and instead of taking things easy, working the meanwhile along the lines of least resistance, I began to force things; but I soon learned the error of such a policy. Everything was really going along as well as could be expected under the circumstances, but I could not see it that way.

THE "HOUSEHOLD WORD."

Most of us can think of quite a number of commercial names that are really "household words." There is only one thing which can raise an article of commerce into the household word class, and that is, Persistent Publicity. The man who travels for a firm whose name is a household word with its trade has an easy time of it compared to the representative of a less known concern. The traveler for an obscure firm is badly handicapped in the race for orders! As far as the trade is concerned there is no method of obtaining wide publicity at a moderate cost equal to advertising in the trade press. Persistent, progressive advertising in a trade paper which holds the full confidence of its readers is the best letter of introduction any firm can give to its travelers.

Independent of Any Combine!

¶ The policy of "Live and Let Live" seems to be entirely sidetracked in the Canning business for the time being. Unusual conditions last winter have brought about a keen spirit of competition, with low prices apparently the main object of some people regardless of actual value. We believe above everything else in sticking to quality, and no amount of price-cutting will make us lower our standard. To our mind the everlasting cry of cheapness is not the only way to win trade, and in urging the superior excellence of Essex Brand we're figuring on next year as well as this.

¶ The Essex factory is thoroughly modern, very complete, and equal to all the requirements of high-grade canning and preserving. Whatever we do we do thoroughly, and in acting entirely for ourselves independent of any combine we are able to serve the best interests of the trade and insure their hearty co-operation and goodwill.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

The two days' rain which has fallen, will, it is expected, give some considerable impetus to the cheese and butter trade, which, owing to a lack of suitable pasturage, was getting into very bad shape indeed. Fortunately these rains have been very general in the province, and this is just what was needed, as the drought was general. In conversation a gentleman from the townships expressed the opinion that, since the rain, the pastures were looking well, but he added that the downpour did not come a moment too soon. In many places in the country farmers were obliged to carry water for their stock, as the sources of supply in the pastures were completely dried up—a condition which has not been known, in some instances, for a great many years.

Some few weeks ago we drew attention to the practice of shipping short weights in cheese, and on that occasion pointed out how this was possible, even with the Government inspection. It might at first seem that it was the fault of the Government inspectors, but this was also shown not to be the case. The number of inspectors is too small for the work which they have to do, and the penalty in case of conviction is far too light. When these conditions are all summed up it just comes to this, that the shippers have got more than a gambler's chance in their favor. The chances of detection are so small, and the amount of the fine in case of detection is so paltry, that it lays heavy odds in favor of the shipper. It is true that a certain amount of short weights might result from mistakes, but the English buyers are sending so many, and repeated, reports of the discovery of short weights that it becomes imperative that something be done in the matter, as Canada's reputation is at stake. It seems too bad that a permanent injury should be done this highly important branch of trade between Great Britain and Canada owing to the perfidy of a few unprincipled shippers.

Shipments of cheese from Montreal last week were 73,803 boxes, as compared with 83,279 boxes for the previous week, and 94,286 boxes for the corresponding week of 1907. Total shipments from Montreal since May 1, 607,322 boxes, as compared with 709,388 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Shipments from Quebec since May 1, 18,155 boxes, as compared with 25,999 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Total exports since May 1, 625,457 boxes, as compared with 735,387 boxes for the corresponding period last year.

Receipts of cheese for the week ending July 18, 102,034 boxes, against 110,841 boxes for the week ending July 20, 1907. This shows, in spite of the warm weather, that the receipts of cheese were nearly up to last year's mark. The market is steady, and the price ranges from 11¾c to 12c.

The butter market, like that for cheese, has been affected adversely by the long-continued period of hot weather. These weather conditions hardened the market a bit, but it is thought it will now go back to a more reasonable basis. Even with advanced prices the demand is astonishingly good. Reports from England indicate the fact that Siberian and Australian butter is not being offered in large amounts, and considerable doubt seems to exist regarding the probable output which may be expected from Siberia. The high prices which are prevailing in this country have cut off some of our export trade, but, notwithstanding, a fair volume is being exported to fill hand-to-mouth orders of the English buyers, who are hanging off for lower prices. Altogether it looks as though a good business might result if the price here becomes a little more favorable.

From reports it seems as though London's demands this year were insatiable, owing to the Franco-British exhibition which is going on there at the present time, and other attractions which are flooding London with visitors.

Receipts of butter for the week ending July 18 were 23,772 packages, against 26,055 packages for the same period of last year. Exports of butter last week amounted to 9,059 packages, as compared with 10,878 packages for the previous week, and 4,032 packages for the corresponding week of last year, Total exports since May 1, 46,552 packages, as compared with 15,369 packages for corresponding period of last year. For export purposes 23½c to 23¾c is paid; in round lots 24c to 24½c is the price, and to grocers butter is quoted at 25c.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, July 22, 1908.

Canadian packers continue to speak encouragingly of the situation these days and this is indeed pleasant after the long months of depressed conditions which have existed since the middle of the winter. The past week was another good one for the Canadian factories, both export and home demand continuing very active.

The British market still stands on the 61 shilling rung reached a couple of weeks ago, and the demand for Canadian bacon in England is brisk. Danish shipments last week were 35,000, somewhat below the average set during the spring months, and this, together with the very light deliveries from the United States, undoubtedly help to keep the market steady on its high basis.

The only fly in the ointment from the packer's standpoint, is the fact that the farmers are not sending in a sufficient quantity of hogs. Just now they are somewhat busily engaged in harvesting operations and the supply has dwindled materially in consequence. Prices offered remain at the same place as last week, viz., $6.75 for hogs f.o.b. and $7.15 off cars at factory. With outlook for a continuance of good business very encouraging and with the supply of hogs available none too plentiful, it looks as if even higher prices than this would be reached before fall.

The situation in American markets is summed up in the following paragraph from the New York Journal of Commerce:

"The speculative trade in hog products has been active during the week past and prices have been very irregular and generally lower compared with those of the week previous, particularly in pork, which up to the beginning of the week from the lowest of the month showed an advance of almost $2 per barrel. The general trade has been good but scattered, with the local crowd buying as well as packers. There was also some buying for foreign account as well as by shorts. The speculative interest in these markets were somewhat broadened because of the bullish hogs situation, due to the large receipts of hogs. There was considerable realizing in lard and ribs by the long interests, who were taking profits, while in pork the feeling in mid-week became weak and prices declined fully $1 per barrel on liquidation and selling against stop loss orders, from which prices ruled irregular and slightly higher.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—A stronger feeling has prevailed in the market for live hogs since last Wednesday, owing to decrease in receipts, and prices have advanced from 25c to 40c per 100 pounds. The demand is good. Hams and bacon are particularly active. The prices remain unchanged since our last quotation, but there is a feeling that advances may take place in some lines before long.

BUTTER—Although creamery butter has the call quite a lot of dairy is being bought. Tubs are preferred to prints, because the hot weather detracts somewhat from the handling of the blocks. Farmers are not making such large quantities now, but appear to be sending their milk to the creameries.

POULTRY—Young ducks have declined in price and spring chickens are a little easier. Trading has revived during the week and both supply and demand have been better than for weeks past. A few dead birds have been shown on the market, but the quotations are for live weight.

PICKLE MAKERS TURNED DOWN.

A number of representative Canadian jam and pickle manufacturers waited on the Government at Ottawa some time ago and asked that the tariff on these and kindred lines be increased. After some months' delay, during which time the manufacturers had been kept waiting and hoping against hope, the Ministers now inform the jam and pickle men that the assistance asked for would upset the Government's settled fiscal policy, and that they cannot, therefore, grant the request. The Ministers' state that the claim for more protection is all right, and the quality of the Canadian product of the best, but the granting of such a favor would cause other industries to want more protection. The status of the trade will, therefore, remain as heretofore, and not as the daily press aver that the duty on the product of jam factories will be removed altogether.

There is this point, however, that the British preferential clause allows competition in Canada by English manufacturers, and as a consequence there is talk of the closing of some factories in this country.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Flour Declined in Montreal on Easier Markets—Cereal Business Looking Up—New Wheat Offered.

The probability of strong flour markets noted last week was not maintained, the situation changing enough to permit of even an easier feeling. This was reflected in a decline of 10 cents on several grades in Montreal, on a dull market. In Ontario the market is easier, but prices are unchanged.

The cereal business in Ontario seems to be looking up, dealers reporting more favorably the last week or two. In Quebec and the East it is still dull, and the outlook is not very encouraging.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Royal Household, Manitoba spring wheat patents and Five Roses have declined 10c per barrel since our last quotation. The demand locally is very dull. However, there is slightly more activity in the country. Other prices remain the same.

FEED—Manitoba shorts can be purchased at a slight reduction, the minimum price having gone down to $24 from $25. Locally, demand for all sorts of feed is very dull, and dealers report the volume of business as coming in small orders. Carlot sales are not frequent these days.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—The market has a considerably more steady tone than at last reports, and the feeling is, if anything, a little easier. Prices locally are unchanged. New wheat is being offered, but as yet has not been made use of, though the quality seems promising.

CEREALS—Business seems to be improving, and dealers report a considerably better tone in the markets. Some firms report having done better business in July than expected, and these expect a gradual improvement from this time on. Local demand is very good, considering the season. Supplies are coming in quite sufficient quantity to meet the demand, and some new wheat is being offered. Prices now quoted are as follows:

BRINGING SUGAR FROM CHINA.

Shipments Coming for British Columbia Firms—Prices Below Local Offerings.

Vancouver, B.C., July 17.—Reference was made some time ago to a shipment of sugar brought from Scotland and placed on the market here, just a little lower than the product of the British Columbia Sugar Refining Company. This was placed at a time when a raise had been made in the price of sugar in the east, and though the Scotch shipment may not have been the cause of it, anyway, there was no increase here. The sugar was brought via the Suez canal, and the heat in the passage through the warm latitudes is stated as the cause of lumping. This was not serious, and a roll of the sack was sufficient to pulverize the lumps. Otherwise the sugar arrived in fine condition, and being all placed before arrival was soon disposed of. Now, a shipment is to be brought in from China, which is much nearer British Columbia than Scotland. The prices quoted are for yellow $4.40, as against $4.60 asked for the local product, and for granulated $5.25, as against $5.50. The quality is assured.

HOW MACARONI IS MADE.

This is how macaroni is made: To very glutinous wheat flour is added a plentiful supply of dried eggs. Mixed with water, this becomes a dough, which is so thickly kneaded as to be difficult to impress with the fingers. Then it is carried to a round press perforated with holes, through which the dough is pressed by means of a heavy plate worked by a screw. The result is macaroni without holes in the sticks. Pipe macaroni is made through a similar press, with the difference that a round piece of metal makes the central hole. As it issues in long, snaky ropes from the bottom of the press they are violently fanned to prevent them from sticking together and are afterward taken out into the open and laid on long bamboo poles to dry. Two or three days' exposure in the warm, sunny air of Italy makes the dough pipes hard and brittle and fit to use for food.

FOR THE VACANT DIRECTORSHIP

Gentlemen Intimately Connected With Trade Mentioned for Vacancy in Bank of Montreal Board.

Considerable speculation is being indulged in regarding the vacant directorship on the Bank of Montreal Board. Among the numerous names mentioned in this connection are two of peculiar interest to the grocery trade of Canada, Robert Meighen, President of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., and A. Baumgarten, of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co.

Both of these gentlemen preside over the destinies of great commercial organizations, which deal in two chief commodities and in each case they represent the highest development of business enterprise in their lines.

Robert Meighen was born near Londonderry, Ireland, in 1838, and with his mother and several other children came to this country and settled at Perth, Ont. A large store in that town, well-known for years, bearing a sign Meighen Bros., testifies to the business ability of the family. Robert Meighen's ambition soon outstripped the town of Perth, and he became associated with his brother-in-law, George Stephen. Together they built railroads and other things which make a young country grow, but it remained for Mr. Meighen to accomplish the master stroke of his life by organizing the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. This institution represents the last word in the flour and feed industry. The growth of this institution has been highly satisfactory, and to-day it is regarded as one of the great business successes of the land.

Some time ago there appeared in The Busy Man's Magazine an article telling of the success of the Germans in Canada. Among the various men mentioned in that article was A. Baumgarten, of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co. Mr. Baumgarten has for many years presided over the destinies of this institution and during his tenure of office it has progressed favorably. At the present moment the names of these two gentlemen and many others are mentioned in connection with the vacant directorship on the Board of the Bank of Montreal. Whilst it does not come within the jurisdiction of the grocery trade to discuss the merits of the other candidates for the honor, it may be said that the bank would be highly fortunate to obtain the services of either Mr. Meighen or Mr. Baumgarten. Both of these gentlemen occupy prominent positions in the social and business life of the City of Montreal, and are in possession of those qualities which would render their counsel eminently useful in the conduct of Canada's premier financial institution.

KEEP OLIVE OIL FROM SUN.

Olive oil is frequently exposed to the direct rays of the sun, or stored on upper shelves exposed to a high temperature, to its quick deterioration. If the grocer sells oil thus exposed and thinks he has escaped loss, he is greatly mistaken, for the consumer is quick to detect the loss of flavor and color, and foregoes buying any more of that brand, and possibly seeks the service of a more careful grocer.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Home-Grown Berries and Small Fruits Excellent in Quality — Some Splendid Plums From California and Peaches From Florida—Canadian Tomatoes and Cabbages Displace the Imported Varieties — Fish Supplies Short.

Red, white and black raspberries are the leading features of the Canadian fruit markets this week. The recent rains have improved them greatly, and large quantities are offered. They are of first-class quality. Huckleberries, thimbleberries and gooseberries, too, are rather plentiful, and cherries are a good crop.

Of imported fruit, California plums and Georgia and Florida peaches are the winners. Watermelons in carlots are daily arrivals, and bananas are very free.

Green corn, of home-grown variety, has made its appearance. Although there is no large quantity offering what supplies there are look exceedingly well. Canadian tomatoes and cabbage have displaced the imported lines, and, in fact, home-grown vegetables have pretty much ousted from the markets all other lines. Potatoes are slow arrivals; stocks are low, but the demand is very fair.

Fish lines are in good demand, but supplies are scarce. The sea fish are easing off somewhat, but fresh water fish are very hard to obtain.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Two dollars represents about the common point for bananas in price, although there are some to be had for $1.50, and some of the Venezuelan stock, which is very fine, brings $2.50. Despatches from the West Indies indicate an effort on the part of Mexico to enter the banana-producing field. However, so far this country is not proving a serious menace to Jamaica, Porto Rico, or other West Indian islands. The northern countries of South America are coming to the front as producers of bananas, and the cultivatian of this fruit is spreading along the northern coast of South America. Some very fine fruit is coming from Guiana and Brazil. Bananas now being recognized as the poor man's fruit and meeting with a world-wide distribution, the countries which have the climate are beginning to experiment with its cultivation. The minimum price of lemons has advanced, nothing being procurable under $2.50 now. Other lines remain the same in price.

VEGETABLES—Dealers are complaining of a scarcity of native stock, which is due to the long drought which has prevailed generally throughout the province. This condition exerts a tendency to keep prices pretty high, and the gradual decline in price in native products which usually occurs at this time of the year is not amounting to any substantial proportions. Sweet potatoes are off the market here. Egyptian onions are in good supply and are being quoted at 2c. Other lines remain the same in price as at the last quotation. Trade has been very dull and dealers generally complain of nothing doing, which is due to the continued high prices.

FISH—Eastern salmon are not arriving so freely and the season is nearly over. The price will be higher. Haddock and cod are still plentiful, and prices are unchanged. Lake fish are scarce now and prices have advanced on both frozen and fresh. Mackerel is scarce. Demand for smoked fish is dull owing to warm weather. Canadian lobsters are out of the market.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—The rain during the week certainly improved the fruit, judging by the appearance of the market these days. The berries and small fruit lines look plump and clean, and even during the rainy days induced buying.

It is to be hoped the storm of a few days ago did not injure the peach crop to the extent reported in the daily press. Imported lines look exceedingly well, a remarkably good showing of Florida peaches being offered. California plums, too, show up well, and home-grown cherries are a splendid crop. Raspberries are coming in more freely, look better than a week ago and are easier in price. Plenty of fruit is being offered and buying is being done extensively. There are no radical changes in price, except that oranges are much lower.

VEGETABLES—A little freer supply in the Canadian lines appears to be the striking feature this week. Prices, too, have eased somewhat. Home-grown tomatoes have given the imported variety a black eye, and Canadian cabbage has displaced the imported vegetables. Green corn is the new offering. Business on the whole is very fair, and the goods put up in fancy packages have a good demand.

A $300 FISH.

A trial importation of English soles was made into Canada recently. The fish were shipped from Bristol and landed at Halifax. As the quantity was too great to supply the wants of the Maritime port, a number of fish were sent on to Montreal and Toronto. One of the fish offered in the latter city weighed 600 pounds. It was cut up and sold in steaks to the hotels and restaurants of that place at 50 cents a pound. This would mean $300 for the fish had it been sold entire. The smaller soles were sold at the rate of 75 cents a pound. It is not unlikely that similar importations will be made later on.

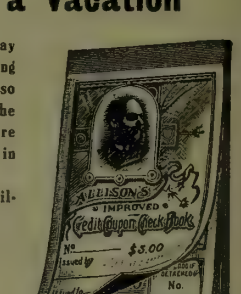
No matter how vigilant you may be, the Allison Coupon System is a better safeguard against errors and petty losses than your own presence and watchfulness.



Here is how it works:

If a man wants credit for $10.00 and you think he is good for it, give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign the receipt or note form in front of book, which you tear out and keep. FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Information for Merchant and Clerks Regarding the Products They Sell—Origin of Honey Bees.

Origin of Honey Bees.

All the honey bees in this country having originally been imported from Europe or Asia, there is no racial difference between the wild ones and the domesticated; those that live in trees are simply the descendants of those that from time to time have taken "French leave" from their owners' hives and reverted to a state of nature, according to David Almon in Outing.

The vast bulk of the wild bees are of the German or black race, while the standard domesticated bee is the Italian; but that, however, is only because the Germans were the first to be introduced here. Just when the Germans came is in doubt, but it was sometime in the 17th century, certainly it was not until near the close of the 18th century that any bees were found west of the Mississippi.

The Indians used to say they could mark the advance of the white man by the appearance of bees in the woods. The Italian bees were first imported in 1860. Better tempered and more industrious than the Germans, they have become very popular with apiarists; but as many still keep the German bee, and others have the hybrid formed by the crossing of the two races, while countless Italians now have taken to the woods, there to breed more hybrids, it is clear that there is no sure way of distinguishing between the wild bee and the domesticated.

The Banana Industry.

Port Antonio, Jamaica, B.W.I., is the greatest centre of the banana industry in the world. Millions of bunches of the fruit are exported annually from there, requiring from ten to twenty vessels weekly, and as high as twenty-three ships have cleared within that time. Night and day the beautiful west harbor is dotted with white hulled craft (so painted as they keep the fruit 10 degrees colder waiting for cargoes. Bananas grow on plants from 12 to 18 feet high, cultivated in rows about 10 feet apart. A plant matures in about a year and then for some time bears a bunch annually. Natives gather the fruit when ready for shipment. Some is brought down in small two-wheeled carts lined with dead leaves to better protect the fruit, and drawn by two small donkeys or horses. Oft-times the small land owner will gather his solitary bunch or so and carry it on his head, frequently a distance from eight to ten miles, to the wharves, where he disposes of it to the fruit companies. Loading the ships is a most interesting sight—scores of men, women and children march in a steadily-moving procession each with a bunch on their heads. As they pass a certain man detailed for the purpose he makes a swift movement with a long, sharp machete, cutting off the superfluous portion of the stem. Other laborers take the bunches, tossing them one to another until the various bins of the ship have been carefully packed with choice green and unbruised fruit which ripens in transit. Labor is plentiful and brings about one shilling (25 cents) a day. On this amount a native will support his wife aid family, although it should be stated that the women and children of the household will probably work a portion of the week.

Sago From the Sago Palm.

Sago is the product of the sago palm tree and is procured as follows: The tree is felled and split lengthwise, exposing the pith within the trunk, which pith is extracted and crushed by heavy mallets. The pulp thus procured is washed in long wooden troughs in running water and then dried sufficiently to admit of loading into junks for Singapore, where the product, then known as "raw, unwashed sago," is thoroughly washed in vats and through running water until a clean white flour is obtained. This flour is then dried in the sun and packed in bags for export as "sago flour." The process of making pearl sago begins, as described above, with the clean but wet flour, and large, flat furnaces are used, over which the flour is spread to a depth of, say, two-thirds of an inch, and toasted until granulated, after which it is set aside to cool and finally packed in bags for shipment.—The Spice Mill.

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

FRESH HERRING

Of all that is said on the subject of canned fish, the essential point is—are the fish packed fresh ?

Herring quickly show the effect of any deterioration, as the flesh loses its firmness and becomes dark in color.

Maconochie Bros. herring are distinguished for their firm, even texture and clear, white color. To accomplish this almost unlimited facilities are required ; but Maconochie Bros. method of handling fish is so complete that, in the first place, it insures absolutely fresh packing, and, in the second place, preserves the inimitable natural flavor.

Sell Maconochie Bros. herring—satisfy your customers and see your profits grow.

"To Hold Fast to Quality

IN THE

Merchandise Offered."

John Wanamaker gives this as one of the cardinal principles of success in mercantile life. And he is right. Once let a store get a reputation of selling goods of quality and the public will make a beaten path to its doors. High quality is particularly necessary in foodstuffs in these days in view of the growing demand for purity and wholesomeness.

Canadian Canners' Peas are the finest in the world.

Grocers and general merchants everywhere find their customers demanding "more of the same" when they have once tried our celebrated brands. Our Grade No. 2, Sweet Wrinkle Pea, is the most satisfactory pea packed. Its superior quality enables you to sell it with a much greater margin of profit than ordinary brands.

Our Canned Peas are sold in four grades or qualities, viz:—

Grade No. 1—Extra Fine Sifted Peas
Grade No. 2—weet Wrinkle Peas
Grade No. 3—Early June Peas
Grade No. 4—Standard Peas.

BRANDS:—"Canada First" (Aylmer), "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe" (Bowlby), "Auto" (Canadian Canners), "Kent," "Lynnvalley" (Simcoe), "Maple Leaf" (Delhi), "Lion" (Boulter), "Thistle" (Brighton), "Grand River" (Lalor), "White Rose" (Lakeport).

QUALITY versus PRICE

There are two things to be considered when buying goods, the QUALITY of the article, and the benefit you will derive from the sale of high-class merchandise, or the PRICE, and the detrimental effect the offering of an inferior article will have on your trade.

"SALADA"

represents the highest quality of tea—a unity of flavor, purity, and deliciousness that at once raises it to the pinnacle of tea superiority. Its quality and value "loom up" conspicuously above a hundred imitators.

"SALADA" has done more to put the tea peddler out of business than all other teas combined.

Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kin of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent grocers, who are on the look-out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

By its NOVELTY! NEATNESS! and CLEANLINESS

Hang up a couple of coils and see how much they improve the appearance of your store and increase the comfort of customers.

When people see a good thing like this they want it! And you sell lots of them! Why not catch customers as well as Flies?

Brown's "Fly Coil" is easier to use and easier to sell than any Fly Paper.

A Bumper Crop in the West

MR. MANUFACTURER, do you realize what this year's bumper crop in the West may mean to you?

It is the biggest crop in the history of the country and it will be worth a pile of money—much more than any previous crop.

The West will have plenty of money to spend and there will be a strong demand for high class goods.

Now is the time to push your goods in the West and develop a trade that will grow from year to year.

We can help you, as we have the selling organization to place your goods on the market.

We are established in Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton, the three principal wholesale centres of the West. We can take your goods on commission basis, store them at these three points and distribute them to the wholesale trade.

To do business in the West it is essential that you should have live intelligent representation on the ground.

Perfect Vegetables

Years ago we realized that much of the inferiority of domestic pickles was due to the use of imperfect vegetables. So we sent an expert abroad to investigate. When he returned he brought with him from various parts of the world the seed of vegetables which were known to be absolutely the best obtainable for pickling purposes. By judicious crossing and experimenting we are able to instruct the farmers who grow for us how to produce perfect vegetables for Ozo Pickles from seed which we supply. We also ferment, clarify and mature our own vinegar which is spiced according to an unequalled formula. Try a bottle of Ozo Pickles on your own table! It's a most convincing argument of Ozo superiority.

Practical Advertising for Grocers

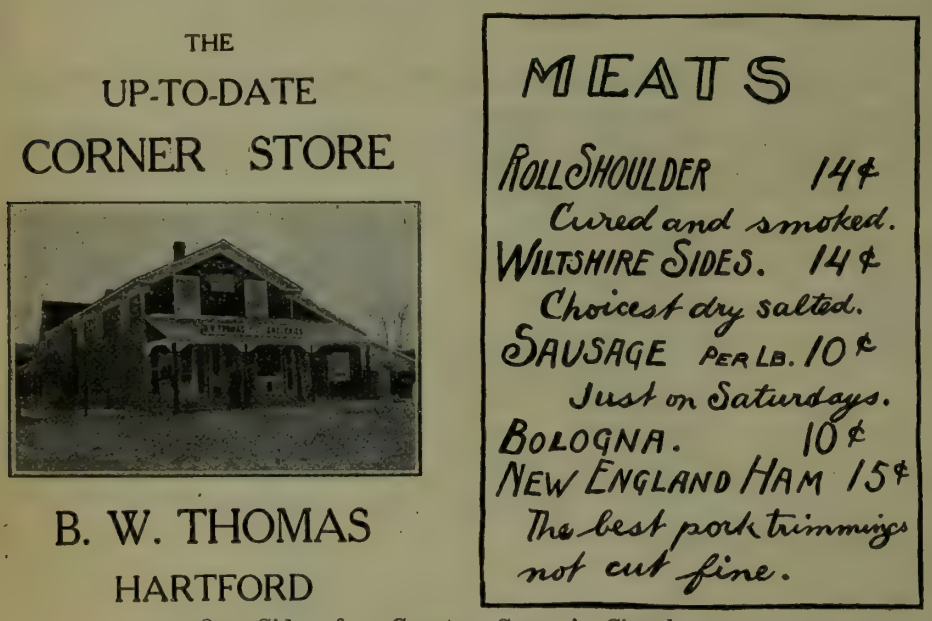
Advertising Regarded as Insurance, How the Matter Works Out—Examples of Ads. That Will do the Work—How One Country Merchant Covers His Field—Suggestive Talks for the Grocery Ad. Man—Conducted by W. F. Ralph.

Have you ever considered an advertising campaign from the standpoint of an insurance policy?

You insure against such contingencies as fire, shipping disaster, dishonest employes, etc., as a matter of course, but the moment some one mentions advertising as a business-builder for your particular benefit, you immediately begin to "hedge" and vow that you cannot afford such an expensive luxury, etc., etc.

Have you ever thought that the greatest of all commercial calamities—loss of trade—can be insured against?

The "premium" represented by the cost of advertising is, in proportion to the importance of the security afforded, no higher than other insurances; in fact, it is considerably smaller and soon becomes a minus quantity. Any other kind of insurance is an expense:



One Side of a Country Grocer's Circular.

worse than that—it is a dead loss so long as there is no "claim."

But the insurance of trade represented by advertising carries a direct profit with it. It covers not only the risk of losing trade, but also the minor risk of being compelled by competition to carry on business at a diminished profit.

Thus the "insurance premiums" represented by your advertising outlay, are so systematically recouped by the current and simultaneous increase of profits that, instead of being regarded as an investment of capital, as they ought logically to be, they are almost invariably written off, year by year, as a current expense.

Think it over—you who have been accustomed to regard advertising as so much blue sky and hot air. It's a thoroughly practicable business proposition and should be considered in no other light. Keep up your advertising "premiums" and you won't have to "die to win."—Everybodys Magazine.

Some Comments.

Of course, the writer of this didn't mean to convey the impression that everyone who bought newspaper space and put something in it was insured against loss of trade! Advertising should never be confused with mere space-filling. An advertisement in the true sense is a thing that really pulls business.

When you are advertising, you are dealing with housekeepers who are everlastingly on the lookout for anything that affects housekeeping. When they see a grocer's name printed in display type they expect to find something house-keepingly interesting above that name. "If that something is sufficiently interesting to them personally, and the grocer they usually do business with isn't offering anything as good or better, you can bank on some extra business.

There's not a great deal of use in merely stating that your name is Blank and that you are a family grocer—that statement doesn't contain anything personally interesting to your prospective customer. But if you add that you are offering some extra fine berries, of which you have only a limited quantity at the special price for one day only of 10 cents, then your ad begins to get interesting. There's any amount of proof extant that the foregoing is as true as Gospel.

A Good Example.

The Freeze's Grocery ad., which occupied 12-inch, 3-column space in the Morning Albertan, of Calgary, is a good one. Not a wasted word in it. On the day this ad. appeared, many Calgary housekeepers may have been perplexed as to what particular dainties they would have for that day's meals; but, confronted with Freeze's ad., with its wealth of economical housekeeping suggestions, doubt would speedily vanish. It's a safe bet that Freeze's ad. pulled business.

For the Country Grocer.

Some time ago the case of the grocer in a small hamlet without a newspaper was dealt with. The other day we received a most interesting and effective little circular along this line from R. W. Thomas, of Hartford, Ont.

Mr. Thomas does business in a small hamlet, the population of which is about half Indian, there being only about seventy white people on his mailing list.

His circular is issued on a sheet of coated paper, ten by eight inches in size. On one quarter of one side of this sheet is printed a half-tone of the store accompanied by its title in type.

The rest of the circular is made up of various priced items accompanied by very bright and breezy paragraphs. These are typewritten or written by hand in the first instance and duplicated as many times as required on a duplicating machine. The result is a complete little store newspaper, as attractive as it is original; and we are not the least surprised to learn from Mr. Thomas that the results from its use are eminently satisfactory.

We have only favorable criticism to make of Mr. Thomas' method of advertising, which seems to be suitable in every way to the local conditions with which he is confronted. Some of the paragraphs are exceedingly brightly written, and cannot fail to produce a favorable impression upon those who read them. Read these:

"Sal Soda—If you dissolve it in soft water it is the nicest thing you ever used to clean the Cream Separator—2 lbs. for 5 cents."

"Bread—Don't you think it would be cheaper and easier to buy bread during the hot weather? It would save a lot of fussing around the hot stove, and then you can always depend on getting your bread nice and fresh."

"Wilson's Fly Poison Pads—Each packet has killed a bushel of flies. If properly used there will be no dead flies lying around."

"Lightning Fly Paper Poison—This works just the same as the other paper, and there are three sheets in a package."

"Tanglefoot—The sticky kind. What they have they hold."

The three fly paper paragraphs were each illustrated by crude, but effective and comical drawings of flies.

Incidentally, if Mr. Thomas is as modern in all his store methods as in his correspondence and advertising he ought to be making a great big success, as no doubt he is. With a well designed, well-printed letter head, neatly typewritten, and with a modern duplicating machine included in his store equipment he can show his heels so far as modern equipment is concerned, to most grocers in towns the size of Hartford. He deserves credit for his enterprise. But, as he says in his letter, "These things pay."

His successor, Mr. Thompson, has had twenty years' experience in the wholesale grocery business in Ireland. He took possession last week.

George Wilson has brought the general business of Dawson Bros., at Bell's Corners, near Ottawa, but will not take possession until March next.

FROM THE WHOLESALERS' STANDPOINT.

An article appeared in these columns recently regarding the prize and subscription nuisance and advising the retail merchants to refuse to give such favors. This has caused some little comment, but the matter needs to be treated from a little different standpoint.

If it is inadvisable for the retailers to give such subscriptions to the public, why should the wholesalers be asked to do it for the benefit of the retailer. This is putting the shoe on the other foot, but its a shoe that will fit without any stretching. When the merchants' associations arrange a picnic or excursion, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred one of the first things that is considered is the matter of getting subscriptions and prizes from the wholesale houses, and a committee is appointed to canvass them for this purpose.

The matter is just as much a nuisance to the wholesaler as to the retailer. The wholesalers in most cases grant the favor because the practice has grown so that they feel they are under a sort of obligation to do so. But it is safe to say they do it very grudgingly. In some cases the retailers' associations will offer the excuse that the contributions received are paid for in the way of advertising. There may be some pretence of giving value in this way, but in the majority of such cases, this is only a pretext to get the money, and the firms are forced into doing advertising which they do not for a moment want to do, and which will bring them practically no return.

The practice is not at all along business lines, and should be discouraged. There is too much money made out of these association picnics and outings through taking advantage of the wholesale interests. They should be run on good business principles and should be self-supporting.

A DECLINE IN SUGAR.

The decline of 10 cents on all grades of refined sugar which came rather suddenly on Wednesday afternoon was not altogether unexpected. It is thought that the refiners are doing a little speculating to stimulate buying, which is said to have been rather light at some large distributing centres. The raw markets earlier in the week showed somewhat easier conditions, and this might be used as an excuse, but for the fact that late cables from New York indicate the renewal of a stronger position. If the decline is made on the above supposition, it will only be temporary, and prices may be restored to the old basis before next issue. What will be the line of action, however, is exceedingly difficult to prognosticate. One thing may be said, however, and that is, with the heavy demand of the mid and late summer season to come, retailers cannot make any mistake by buying sugar on the present basis.

THE FARMER IS KING.

In another column appears an interview which the chairman of the U. S. Steel Co. gave the New York Herald. Mr. Gary's grasp of the business situation is so great that any opinion he may express is of value, but it is of special importance at this time when every man of affairs is waiting and watching for developments. It is of special interest to readers of the MacLean newspapers, which have for some years been urging business men—merchants and manufacturers—to draw closer to the farmer and take an active part in any movement for improving the conditions of the agricultural classes and developing the productiveness of the land. In other words, we should not be content with making and selling what is actually required, but we should be creators of business by increasing the buying power of our customers. The farmer is the business man's best friend but there are a lot of the latter who do not rise to it.

THE WEST AND THE RAILWAY COMMISSION.

Speaking in Montreal last week Mayor Ashdown, of Winnipeg, gave expression to a feeling of discontent in the West with the working of the Railway Commission and argued that a section of the Board of Commissioners should sit in Winnipeg to hear the complaints of western shippers. He protested against being put to the inconvenience of having to travel to Ottawa on every occasion when he had something to lay before the Commission. Similar sentiments were expressed by several speakers at the Western Canada Boards of Trade Convention in Medicine Hat last month. It was stated that many matters of vital importance to western interests have been before the Commission for months and that consideration of these questions was delayed by the rush of work originating in the province where the Commission sits. One or two speakers urged that there should be a western section of the Board to hold its sessions in the West and attend only to western matters, but the general opinion of the delegates was that this would be impracticable. If there were practically two Boards, one for the East and one for the West, dealing often with the same questions there might be a conflict in decisions which would lead to inconvenient results. The convention came to the conclusion that the situation would be very much relieved by the appointment of a western man on the Railway Commission and a resolution to this effect was adopted unanimously.

There is no doubt that western sentiment demands the appointment of a western man well versed as to conditions in the West and determined that western problems and complaints shall have their full share of the attention of the Commission. Such an appointment would increase the public confidence in a Board which already possesses the favor of the people of Canada in a marked degree. That such an appointment is in contemplation at the present time there is good reason to believe and it is likely that the new appointee will be able to do very much to relieve the situation about which complaints are now heard so frequently and for which Mr. Ashdown has proposed a remedy which is scarcely practicable.

Grocery News From Coast to Coast

Eastern Province Notes.

Potato Outlook Bright in New Brunswick—Halifax Houses Bringing in Ontario Hams and Bacon—Good Lobster Season on P. E. I.

ST. JOHN.

July 27.—Eggs and butter both advanced in price during the past week. Eggs are now quoted at 17c to 25c a dozen, the latter figure for henery stock. Butter is selling at from 20c to 13c for good dairy stock and as high as 28c retail for creamery. These are better prices than are usually obtainable at this time of year.

Strawberries are about done, a few late ones bringing 17c a box. Raspberries and blueberries have made their appearance and are selling at 11c to 13c for the former and 10c to 12c for the latter. New potatoes are selling at $1.10 to $1.25 a bushel. The heavy rains of last week have improved the outlook so far as the potato crop is concerned, as the long continued season of dry weather had caused some uneasiness. If weather conditions continue favorable the potato crop this year should be a record breaker.

New vegetables of various kinds are now coming in quite plentifully and the prices are becoming fairly reasonable.

Beef is quoted at from 7c to 10½c a pound and lamb is in good supply, though the price is still pretty stiff, being 18c to 20c a pound for hind quarters.

Standard oatmeal dropped 50c a barrel and cornmeal advanced slightly.

Business generally is very good for the time of year.

A. J. S. Copp, M.P. for Digby (N.S.), was in the city last week on his way home from Ottawa. Mr. Copp is recognized as an authority on fishing and he takes a keen interest in the affairs of his constituents who are largely fishermen. Speaking of the fisheries in his section of the sister province, he said the fishing generally this season had been very good. The shad fishing was not, however, up to the mark and some steps would have to be taken at once to deal with the shad fisheries. The commission which was now investigating the matter would meet in Digby on the 29th. Mr. Copp also said that another commission was to be appointed soon to go into the question of lobster fishing, etc., and a betterment of conditions was looked for.

The Charlotte County Weir Owners and Weir Fishermen's Association intend holding a picnic at St. George on August 10. A business of the association will be held in the morning and this well be followed by a public meeting, to be addressed by prominent men. In the afternoon sports will be held. The day's programme will conclude with a band concert and ball in the evening.

C. E. Starr, of Canning, N.S., who was in St. John last week, is authority for the statement that there will be a shortage this season in the apple crop Mr. Starr is interested in fruit growing in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and is considered an authority on existing conditions as well as the prospects for the present year in fruit-growing.

Regarding the fruit outlook for this season, Mr. Starr said that in his opinion it would be about two-thirds of the average crop, taking into consideration all varieties.

The lobster season just ended has been one of the most successful for years on the north side of Prince Edward Island. The largest catch taken by a single boat was by Skipper Alex. McLaughlin, whose catch totalled thirty thousand pounds. The first lobster of the season was landed on April 20th and the last on July 10th.

HALIFAX.

July 27.—Business conditions throughout Nova Scotia are good, the grocery trade being especially so. Failures are few and collections are fully up to the average. The commission men have all the business they can handle. The strawberry season just closed has been the best for years, and there was no slump in prices, all the stock being quickly bought up as soon as it was marketed. Butter is in good supply but the price keeps up. The best creamery is quoted at 26 cents, and dairy in small tubs is selling at 24 cents. These prices are considered high by many of the dealers. Eggs are not so plentiful and in consequence the price has been advanced. Nova Scotia stock is quoted at 20 cents and Prince Edward Island eggs at 18 cents.

Stocks of local cured smoked meats are pretty well cleaned up and many dealers are now importing hams and bacon from Toronto. No local grown tomatoes have yet been marketed. American tomatoes are selling retail at two pounds for twenty-five cents. Lots of old potatoes are still on the market and the stock is in good condition. New potatoes are now coming in but very slowly. There has been a slight decrease in the price of oatmeal. It is now quoted at $6.15 to $6.30.

Chickens are on the market but those offered for sale are very small. They are quoted from 75 cents to $1 per pair.

The market is well supplied with fruit, bananas being in abundance. The quality is only fair, and the poorest stock is sold at very low prices. Pears are quoted at $3 per box and plums at $1.75 to $2 per crate. No Nova Scotia apples are on the market yet, but the early varieties will soon be along.

Boutilier & Co., of Centreville, Digby County, who are the pioneers in the kippered herring trade of Nova Scotia have recently increased the capacity of their plant and will add sardines to the lines of fish put up in future. The firm has carried on private investigations with a view to bringing their brands of prepared fish up to the Scotch standard, and their output, now largely placed in the American markets, commands prices equal to those paid for the best Scotch cure, the methods employed being identical. Two power presses, purchased in Aberdeen, Scotland, have recently been installed, by which the cans used are pressed from the sheet tin in one piece, and the entire plant in its workings is of the improved type. A private electric light plant furnishes light for the company's factory, wharves, warehouses and general store. The firm has recently adopted a cash basis for their business. They pay their help regularly and will not transfer an item on their books for goods purchased in their mercantile establishment, which is one of the largest general stores in Digby County. A. Boutilier, the head of the firm, is considered one of the most prosperous men engaged in the fish business in Nova Scotia.

The West India Liner, Sobo, which arrived here this week, landed five hundred packages of molasses, 350 barrels of sugar, and ten thousand bags of sugar.

NEWCASTLE, N.B.

July 25.—J. D. Paulin, of Newcastle, grocer, is enlarging his store on Castle Street, to accommodate his growing business.

Miss Bessie McIntosh, late clerk for S. M. Dunn, has set up business for herself in Harcourt.

F. Afton Batson, of Campobello, general merchant, has assigned to Harold C. Purves, St. Stephen.

Charles Moffat, McAdam Junction, and Luke S. Albert, of Caraquet, general merchants, have assigned.

David and Pinkhas Goldenberg, of Campbellton, have entered into partnership as general merchants.

Fernie Wholesalers Secure Favorable Distributing Rates—Disastrous Fire in Fort William—Novel Windows in Saskatoon.

VANCOUVER.

July 25.—Cured meats are stiffening up, the wholesalers and commission men giving as the reason that there is a shortage in supply. Not so very long ago light breakfast bacon was 17½c, but now it is jobbed at 19c and 20c. Premium hams were 17¾c and 18c, and now are 19½c. Premium bacon is also up a cent, being 25c to 26c. An increase is also noted in lard. When Swift & Co. and Freye, Bruhn & Co. were cutting prices two or three months ago, it dropped to 12½c, but they evidently soon saw the error of their ways. It got back to 13½c, and is now 14c, with another advance of ½c in sight.

The Empress Manufacturing Company, which lost its building by fire some time ago, is again ready for business. It is the intention to erect a cement or brick factory. This company makes a specialty of jams, pickles, extracts and coffees.

At the annual meeting of the B. C. Packers' Association, held on Monday last, the balance sheet for the last year was presented showing a fair profit, and officers were elected. The old Board of Directors was re-elected, as follows: W. H. Barker (General Manager), Aemilius Jarvis, E. W. Rollins, E. E. Evans, Campbell Sweeny, William Murray, K. K. McLaren, W. Braid, and Robert Kelly. One or two interesting features of the report were that while twelve canneries and one cold storage plant were operated, the profit was $68,146.07, a 3½ per cent. dividend being paid, the balance of profits earned being added to working capital. There is on hand canned salmon valued at $91,983.91, and there has been used in preparation for this season's pack material inventorying at $517,912.21. Stock of frozen fish in cold storage on June 27th, $23,000, and sundry accounts, $28,986.42. There was $74,901.85 owing to the banks, with outstanding accounts at the same date of $8,817.51. The report remarks that the run of sockeyes last season on the Fraser was almost a total failure, the pack being less than 60,000 cases. The total pack from all points was 139,805 cases canned salmon, 180 tons mild cured salmon, and 2,783,978 pounds of frozen salmon and halibut, besides a small quantity of cod, herring, sturgeon, etc. Quite a large part of the canned salmon was of the cheaper varieties, the packing of which shows little or no profit, the lower grades of salmon being in demand owing to the short supply of sockeyes.

Fernie wholesalers are elated over the action of the C.P.R. in granting them distributing rates. They are of the opinion the result will be to give them control of the wholesale trade throughout the Crow's Nest Pass district, although it may interfere with the business done from Nelson and Calgary. The advantage should be a considerable one.

An arrival from the Okanagan states that the tobacco crop in the vicinity of Kelowna is in fine shape, much of it being already two feet in height. There is a large increase in the acreage this year, the area being about 60 acres, as against 20 to 30 in former years. Those growing are: J. Casorso, 14 acres; Holman, Upton & Monckton, 10; M. J. Monckton, 6; T. Renwick, 3; D. McEachern, 4; J. B. Fisher, 5; J. Lytle, 5; W. J. Peterman, 2; A. Anderson, 1½; A. H. Crichton, 8; Roy Sweny, 1. Plants were supplied in many cases.

A point of interest came out before the Pork Commission at Edmonton, namely, that the reason American cured pork was imported by wholesalers in that city was because the Canadian article is inferior in keeping qualities, and was consequently unfit for the northern trade, for which the American meat was brought in. Apart from how it applies in this particular instance, the same thing is often said about other lines. A number of articles could be named in the trade which are called for by customers wanting the best, and in most cases it will be found they come from the other side of the line. The price is higher, because of duty, etc., but even that does not interfere with good business. Packers and manufacturers should learn that the best pays, and that quality should never be sacrificed to get a cheap article on the market. There is good money in the ham and bacon business in the West, and Pat Burns, the cattle king, is always crying out for the farmer to raise hogs. But unless the treatment is good, the high-class American article will continue to hold the market.

The increase in the rate on butter from $1.30 per hundred to $2.14, from Calgary to Montreal, may, if maintained, result in the shipping of more butter to British Columbia, and may even curtail production, as it will mean a loss of one cent to the shipper. This will, of course, fall back on the producer. As it is now, there is more second grade butter in Alberta than can be disposed of on the local and the British Columbia market, and the surplus has been shipped East. With a greater quantity shipped here, some interference may be made with the price of the lower grades, although the first will always be at the best figure. Good butter is never a drug on the coast market, and the call for the best is unceasing.

John Prentice, one of the pioneer commercial travelers, and now representing Nasmith & Co., has returned from a trip to the Old Country.

Fred. Richardson, not the man with the same name who travels for the Ames, Holden Co., but the man who has been a grocery traveler, and is now in business in Victoria, is again in the hospital, having been injured in a wreck in the Kootenay. Perhaps no other traveler in Canada has been the victim of more accidents, and if there is a railway or steamboat wreck in the West, one can almost bet that he is in it.

R. C. Abbott, manager of the Glenbrook creamery at Mission Junction, is much pleased over the fact that his product won second prize at the Dominion Fair at Calgary, when 26 creameries competed. This notwithstanding that the butter had to be shipped 500 miles during very warm weather. It also speaks well for the farmers of the Mission district. The Glenbrook Creamery scored 96.5 points, or one-half a point lower than the winner of the gold medal.

FORT WILLIAM.

July 25.—One of the heaviest losses by fire that has ever visited Fort William occurred on Monday afternoon, the 20th inst., when a fire, originating in a wooden warehouse at the rear of the departmental store of the John King Co., wiped out the whole of the John King block and did serious damage to the Snelgrove-Waddington block adjoining it. A heavy south gale rendered the work of coping with the fire extremely difficult and in a few minutes the premises of the King Co. were beyond hope. This company's entire stock of groceries, hardware, furniture, dry goods and liquors was a total loss. The adjoining block was occupied by Kirkup & Wilkie, grocers, whose stock was to a large extent damaged by smoke and water. As soon as the fire was under control arrangements were made for carrying on a portion of the business of both firms, Kirkup & Wilkie securing an office and entering into an arrangement with two other firms, Evans & Hayes and Hayne & Campbell, to handle their orders, until the losses were adjusted and they could re-open their own quarters. Mr. King was absent in Quebec at the time of the fire but his manager, Mr. Fraser, arranged for the renting of two stores and in one of these the wholesale liquor department was opened on Wednesday, while the grocery business was moved into the Frodsham block on May St. The King Co. has a large warehouse on the local track of the C.P.R. in which the reserve stock of liquors and groceries were carried, so that they will have considerable stock on which to re-open their two branch stores. The property on which the King Co.'s store was situated is among the most valuable of the business sites of the city, being worth from $500 to $600 per foot, and in one of the best business sites on Victoria Ave. Until Mr. King's return no plans for the rebuilding of the block have been made, but there is little doubt that he will arrange for rebuilding with as little delay as possible.

J. Teeft, of Port Arthur, has purchased the store on the corner of Finlayson and McMurray St. from A. Calhoun, and has put in a complete stock of groceries. This corner grocery is in the centre of a district which has recently built up rapidly and has a good population tributary to it.

Last winter a determined effort was made through the Board of Trade to promote the local growing of produce in order to get fresh vegetables at more reasonable prices than those shipped in from east and west. The freight rates serve as a protective tariff, and the local growers can always depend upon getting a much better figure than the grower in Eastern Ontario or Manitoba. As a result of the campaign a number of market gardeners have come in and have taken up land near the city. In some instances they were given the land under a five-year lease on condition that it was cultivated and in other cases they purchased the land, paying from $50 to $80 per acre. Already some result is being attained in the growing of radishes, lettuce and such vegetables, and it is expected that that there will be far more local-grown potatoes this fall than ever before. With new potatoes at $2.40 per bushel to the retail consumer the field for growing these should be an excellent one. A number of 100-acre lots have been cut up into five-acre plots for the purpose of disposing of them to market gardeners, and agents report that they are selling readily. This should not only be profitable to the gardener but should relieve the local produce situation considerably. Most of the produce thus raised is brought in and sold to the grocery trade, but the gardeners are contemplating the formation of a market and disposing of the stuff by public auction on certain days in the week.

SASKATOON.

July 24.—A fine display of Sunlight soap is to be seen this week in the grocery window of J. F. Cairns, on Twenty-first St. The window is an extensive one and the greater part of it is taken up with this display. In the centre is a pyramid built with this useful household article, and in the background is a clothes line from which hangs several articles of apparel, looking as white as snow, having probably just been washed. On the outside of this arrangement are four big arches built with large soap cartons. Mr. Cairns has just ordered a car of four hundred cases of the soap from Lever Bros., Toronto. The east part of the same window is confined to a tea display. Here Tetley's tea is to be seen done up in all sizes and is priced at 40c, 50c and 60c. In the centre of the packages is a big sign made with loose tea and lump sugar. The tea is used for a background while the white sugar forms the letters, "Tetley's Tea." Inside the store Miss Lloy conducts a tea demonstration and her stand is well patronized by the lady customers.

OTTAWA.

July 28.—Preparations for the Pure Food Show, which the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association will run in connection with the Central Canada Exhibition this fall, are about completed, and it looks as though the affair was going to be a grand success. Manufacturers from all parts of the country have taken space and they promise to put in attractive displays. A splendid new building has been turned over to the association by the Exhibition authorities for the use of the exhibitors, and this will be devoted entirely to pure food products. An attractive feature of the fair is that the exhibitors will be enabled to derive the extra advantage of the night advertising, since the building will be open during the evenings as well. Some six hundred lights will be used in the one building alone. Messrs. Forde & Johnston have just left for the West, and expect to dispose of practically all that is left of the space on the trip they are taking. The association will have full charge of the fair, and if they cannot make a success of it with an attendance of over one hundred thousand people during fair week, it will not be their fault.

Most Ottawa grocers are quite satisfied with the volume of trade that is passing. They say that business is no more quiet than it usually is during July and August.

President York, of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association, states that sales have been well maintained. Mr. York has the interests of the association before him at all times and makes a good chief executive.

Herb Ellis, who runs a store with his brother just across the road from Mr. York, was secretary of the association for nine years, and is another enthusiastic member. His worthy successor, A. G. Johnston, was out hustling for business when a representative of The Grocer dropped in. Mr. Johnston is always hustling. His father, with whom he is in business, is responsible for many of A. G.'s good qualities, in that he is an up-to-date grocer in his ideas, and has always shown good example in this respect.

C. J. Prevost, one of Ottawa's best-known retailers, is another grocer who spends a great deal of his time out of doors looking after his interests.

F. W. Forde, Rideau Street, gets out a very attractive little blotter every month, which seems to be appreciated by his customers. Mr. Forde is quite a valuable citizen, taking much interest in educational and civic matters. He is on one School Board.

Quite a number of Ottawa grocers were seen going around with officers of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who held their convention here. There were some two thousand in attendance, and they left quite a lot of money in Ottawa retail stores. Walter Walby, who is the proprietor of the Cecil Hotel, an "hotel for commercial men," was the recipient of a very nice present from a section of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Walter is widely known among traveling men who come to Ottawa.

A fire broke out at Wilson's grocery store at the corner of Frank and Elgin Streets at 4 o'clock Saturday morning, July 18, and damage was done to the extent of about $2,000. The blaze started at the rear of the shop, but the origin is only a matter of conjecture. There was a large stock of matches at the back, and it is presumed that the rats did the rest for the fire. An alarm was turned in, and the firemen were quickly on the scene. They worked hard as usual, and within three-quarters of an hour they were back at the station. A lot of the stock was saved from damage by the firemen spreading tarpaulins over the goods.

J. P. Valiquette has just opened up a drug department in connection with his grocery store located on the corner of Dalhousie and Clarence, all dispensary being done by Mr. Valiquette himself. Mr. Valiquette formerly kept a drug store in the city.

At the meeting of the Retail Clerks' Association in Foresters' Hall last week an address was delivered by Mr. John Flett, of Hamilton, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor of Canada. Mr. Flett gave a history of the labor movement, showing how it has increased and described it in its full strength as it stands to-day. He claimed the clerks were justified in their demands for shorter hours. To win their campaign he counseled the drafting of a comprehensive appeal, and the dividing of the city into districts with a number of canvassers allotted to each district. Then the enlisting of ministers and other influential men in the army to fight the battle would ensure the success of the campaign. Mr. Flett asked for personal service, strict attention to detail and combination of effort. The power was there, and if it were only exerted would accomplish the object in view. The speaker was enthusiastically received.

The flow of milk in the vicinity of Ottawa has fallen off 25 per cent. in the last four weeks, largely on account of the dry weather, and many families are now unable to obtain sufficient milk from their dealers to keep them supplied from day to day. An increase in the price of milk before September is possible.

Wm. Kipp pleaded guilty to a charge of having kept his butcher shop on Dalhousie Street open after 9 o'clock on Saturday night, July 18. The defendant asserts that his shop was open only for the purpose of sending out goods that already had been purchased, the constable which laid the charge, expressed his intention of charging Kipp with keeping open another store on the same street. The case was adjourned.

KINGSTON.

July 27.—Well, the boys are talking up a big grocers' picnic for September. Like Milwaukee beer, the grocers' picnic made Kingston famous. Coburn, of Comfort Soap fame, will swear to that, and when it comes off, don't miss it if you are less than a 100 miles away. Bert Robertson is looking after the Victoria Day celebration. This will fit him for doing his share in the grocer picnic. Bert is always ready to give a hand, and does it willingly.

James Crawford brought in a car of new potatoes last week and ran them off quickly as the local market potatoes are like nutmegs in size.

Dan Dennis has been on the sick list for several weeks. We hope he will gain strength rapidly so he can help as in former years to make a success of the picnic.

David Shaw, formerly a grocer, but now of the dry goods firm of Newman & Shaw, was in a runaway accident and nearly killed. He is now on the road to recovery.

The most popular and humane movement of late in the grocery trade here is the early closing, all stores closing sharp at 6, excepting Saturdays. We are going to try 10 o'clock for Saturdays. It can be done by united effort. So could business be put on a cash basis. What rot giving credit! If a man borrowed $2 from you and tried it again without paying, you would insult him. Yet you keep on giving out your goods (cash) without a murmur. Well, what do you say, cash or credit?

George Crawford is well pleased with the broom business he bought out several months ago. It is a change from the grocery business, and it is change George is after. I hope he may have lots of it to jingle.

A few grocers are thinking of spending their holidays at the Methodist camp to lead the simple life for a time.

Lee & Kirk are doing well in their milk and store business.

Dairy butter is seldom asked for here. It is hard to get it good, and, cheap butter paper is generally used, and it is annoying. Wiarton Creamery is well thought of here, the agent handled nearly a ton last week. Eldon, Victoria and Port Perry makes have their places also in the public taste. A good ad was put in one of our local papers lately, "In everybody's mouth—Wiarton Creamery butter." A good package for campers is a 4 or 5-lb. crock of good butter.

The egg market went up in jumps, and scarcity is the word. I wrote different houses and word generally came back "Haven't enough for my own trade." Seems strange with all the incubators and patent artificial hens now in use all over Canada. The hen industry is increasing every year. Yet once in a while we get to the shortage crisis.

Death visited the home of C. H. Pickering, grocer, last week, and took their little six-year-old boy away, leaving sad hearts, which only those who have had a like experience can understand.

How many kinds of granulated sugar do you handle? It's getting as bad as baking powder. The man with the grip will soon come around with a bundle of labels telling you he will give you a brand of your own. Every grocer here sells sugar at cost or 5c advance. Of course, we have to compete against wholesalers who sell to consumers. If these wholesalers would cut out the retail sales the wholesale part would increase, because retailers do not like unfair competition. Let us hope they will. Some houses allow their representatives to sell to hotels and restaurants, which seems a questionable procedure.

Say, Mr. G.T.R., this butter is soft. It was to be sent in a refrigerator car, and it doesn't look like it. "No," he said, "it came in an ordinary car from Toronto." The same butter was sent from Wiarton and placed in an iced car there. Complaint has been laid to the Government, and I hope they will loose the lash. These large corporations take liberties and they want to get shown up at times. A new railroad company is putting in new lines around Kingston, and we may get a spur. Opposition will do good. Kingston has no main line running into it which is a detriment. A little suburban train meets all trains about two miles out from the city.

Marshall Reid, grocer, lost a valuable horse last week from paralysis of the throat.

Kingston has a go-ahead appearance this summer. The sound of the roller and crusher making roads, the miles and miles of cement walks, and about 100 new houses are in course of erection, many of them of cement. John Litton, at one time a grocer, but now a large contractor, is erecting artificial stone residences.

ST. THOMAS.

July 27.—The many readers of The Grocer in this progressive city will be interested to know that you have a correspondent and will appreciate the fact as one more evidence of its importance.

St. Thomas merchants observe the Wednesday half-holidays during July and August, almost to a man closing at 1 p.m. The grocers and their assistants appreciate the breathing spell immensely. It has had the effect of persuading the public to do all their buying in the forenoon, and helps to give the grocer a standing of more importance in the community as no business is really more necessary. This move illustrates what can be accomplished by their united action. The merchants who refused to sign the agreement to close about ten years ago and who at first kept their places of business open found after a few years that they had lost the patronage and respect of many of the citizens as the closing movement was popular from its inception, and they gradually fell in line after realizing the error of their ways. Merchants who compared their sales before the half-holidays were in vogue and since found that they did not lose business thereby, but that the customers gave their orders more quickly with less kicking and just as much was accomplished in the half-day as previously required all day.

It is surprising the number of people who cannot pay the grocer that are able to take holiday trips and at that with the easy grocer's money. How very indulgent the business men are to suffer for it, and how easy with united action on their part it could be stopped. No such dishonesty should be permitted.

Grocers in the old days had an idea that they were obliged to sell sugars at cost, but in this city they are selling sixteen pounds for a dollar, and everybody is apparently satisfied.

T. S. Poole and P. L. M. Egan, of this city, accompanied the London grocers on their excursion to Niagara Falls on the 15th.

Frank Price, wife and family, are visiting their parents in this city. Mr. Price is now one of the leading grocers of Brandon, Man., and as his father, J. H. Price, did one of the largest grocery businesses ever done in St. Thomas, his son is following in his footsteps.

GALT.

July 27.—Business in all lines is exceptionally quiet at present. Not unusually quiet, as the months of July and August are always regarded as slow months. Compared with the same season last year, however, the volume of business shows a decided advance.

The berry season is almost over, and many housewives are complaining of the high prices which obtained during the entire season. Strawberries never were less than 3 for 25c, while raspberries have never gone lower than 10c per box. A good many were sadly disappointed in buying the last-mentioned fruit. They held off until the last moment, confident that the price would drop. But it didn't, and now the good ladies are forced to hustle around and get a supply of raspberries, which are already scarce, for preserving purposes.

The apple crop in Waterloo County will be the largest in years. Fruit dealers are already offering harvest apples at 2 cents apiece.

The business men of Galt are making arrangements for a big picnic to be held in Victoria Park, Berlin, on Thursday, August 18-20. The function will be confined to merchants, clerks, their wives and sweethearts—the clerks' sweethearts, of course. At the meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association, at which the picnic was discussed, a member was loudly applauded when he made the statement that the merchants of Galt were altogether too slow in getting together to enjoy an outing. "It will be of immense benefit to us," he concluded, "to get better acquainted."

Local merchants find the handling of imported fruits unprofitable. A good portion of the fruit is spoiled when it reaches Galt, and considerable more is lost in this manner before it is disposed of. How do the merchants in other towns find it?

Allan Deans, of the Red Front, has returned from a business visit to Hamilton.

Mr. Alex. Sloan, who recently joined the benedicts, has been honored by the people of Galt. The teachers of Knox Church presented him with a handsome gift, and the members of the congregation and Board of Managers sent along a handsome set of silverware.

LONDON.

July 27.—George W. Stevenson, grocer, Richmond St., has made an assignment to W. R. Meredith. It is said the liabilities are not very large.

Raner & Campbell, grocers, Richmond St. north, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Raner will continue the business, while Mr. Campbell has purchased the stock and good will of R. J. O'Neil, West London. The latter intends going out West.

Raspberries came in very plentiful during last week, the result being a drop in retail price to ten cents. There promises to be an unusually large crop of thimble berries.

The East-end Merchants' Association intend holding a picnic at Springbank Wednesday afternoon. Many of the downtown grocers will join them. Others will accompany the market gardeners on the occasion of their outing at Springbank.

There will be no Wednesday half-holiday next week owing to Civic Holiday coming on Monday and the Old Boys' reunion.

The McCormick Manufacturing Company's employes' annual picnic at Port Stanley on Saturday was a big success. A splendid programme of games and sports was participated in by the biscuit and candy-makers and all seemed to thoroughly enjoy the outing.

Next week the grocery travelers will be back on the road and business will begin to boom again.

As a result of the efforts of the Retail Grocers' Association three hucksters appeared before the Police Magistrate this morning. One of them, John Hopper, was fined $5 for violating the huckster by-law; that is, selling vegetables and fruit on the market in the street which they do not grow. President Shaw, of the association, told the court the grocers were greatly troubled by these hucksters, who get down in the market early and buy up supplies and the grocers are then at their mercy. The result is that the grocer has to pay a higher price than he otherwise would, and the general public also suffers. Hopper was fined $5 for using a measure with a false bottom. He had to pay over an additional $5. The other persons accused of violating the huckster by-law were a Hebrew and his wife. Neither could speak English and the services of an interpreter were called in. They were given a good lecture and warned that repetition of the offense would mean penalty; namely, a fine of $50.

Notwithstanding that this is the holiday season wholesale trade keeps very fair, warehouse staffs being kept busy filling telegraph, telephone and mail orders. Payments keep up very well. All staples are firm. Japan teas are very scarce and high; Ceylons and Indias unchanged. There is no change in sugars, though raws are a little dull. Local retailers appear well satisfied with trade conditions and with the outlook.

BRACEBRIDGE.

July 27.—Grocers from this centre report better trade during July than any month since navigation opened. Last Thursday some twenty launches from the lakes, with each owner carrying its quota of friends, visited the town and during the afternoon the streets seemed alive with up-to-date tourists. The grocers are alive to the wants of its visitors and while the streets seemed crowded with fair strangers, the stores were also each doing its share of the extra rush.

Peter Hutchison and family are sojourning at Fort Carling.

W. Hanna, of W. Hanna & Co., of Port Carling, was a visitor to town on Thursday and he reports trade improving. In conversation with him he says that since the store adopted the cash system, they find trade much better than heretofore, which speaks volumes.

GUELPH.

July 27.—The first fantastic dab at showing off Wyndham Street and the very many fancy lights on that street was demonstrated on Friday night and about 5,000 citizens came down street to see where their money was being spent. The City Hall and Wyndham Street are certainly a picture, but, great Scot, when the market opened up on Saturday morning and raspberries were $3 per crate of 26 boxes, and butter from 28c to 30c, the people began to see that Old Home Week is going to touch their pockets, and for once it pays to be an alderman or be a very near relative or a visitor.

A. M. McLaren has returned from Niagara and New York after a pleasant visit.

This is the last that will be written by your correspondent on the half-holiday either for or against, this year. It is funny after all that two of the hardest knockers are off on their holidays, one to the Old Country for two months, the other to Muskoka for six weeks, and one other about to go on an extended trip. Now, really, do those gentlemen need a half-holiday? Not by any means. But why knock some poor clerks' holidays or some grocer who cannot afford a week off? Enough said.

All roads lead to Guelph this next week, and even Earl Roberts and Admiral Kingsmill will be here. The grocers will be open all the time, and this will be our harvest. But come and see us and we will do our best to fix up a good time for you or a tent to sleep in. There is nothing doing now but Old Home Week for everybody, and it's in the blood.

The raspberry season is now practically over, and hundreds of people here have not been able to get any, all waiting for the cheap fruit. But it, like the cheap strawberries, has failed to connect. Cherries were a snap. 45c to 75c was a good price, and many more cherries were sold than raspberries. Last year the price for No. 1 cherries was $1.50, this year 50c was nearer the mark. Blueberries this year are also cheap, from $1.10 to $1.50 for good quality. The grocers, fruit dealers and wholesalers are at their wit's end to know what to do in the way of bringing in stock. Don't be afraid. The telephone and telegraph are handy, so don't load. Buy carefully and run short, rather than load up, as there is bound to be a reaction. Just go easy and buy right and no plunging. There is money in it.

WOODSTOCK.

July 27.—Since the local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association passed quietly out of existence several months ago no attempt has been made at re-organization and no move in that direction seems probable at the present time. Merchants freely admit that there is lots of room in Woodstock for an organization of the kind, but when the association was in existence it received so little support that there is not much encouragement in the recollection to stir anybody else in the organization direction.

Business among Woodstock grocers this summer has been very good. They are not complaining to any extent, though business is perhaps a little behind that of immediate previous years. A varying number of men have been out of work, and this circumstance has perhaps caused merchants to keep a closer lookout on their credit accounts. Most men, in theory, are in favor of the "no credit" system, but in actual practice, especially in a town of small size, where personal friendship counts for so much, it is a different matter to keep charge items off the books.

A grocer remarked the other day that he didn't think there were as many flies to bother people this year as there were last. It is to be hoped that their number is decreasing. There is wide room for a change. Many people who know something of the danger of disease transmission by means of flies, are in absolute dread, in getting goods from fly-infested stores. It is, of course, a difficult matter to keep them out, but screen doors, fans and plenty of mosquito netting are excellent preventatives.

There is no general weekly half-holiday in Woodstock this summer. An agitation was commenced, but it didn't succeed to any extent. In the minds of many, the half-holiday scheme, so far as Woodstock is concerned, is about played out. Jewelers, dentists, lawyers and barbers are the only ones this summer who close up their shops or offices one afternoon each week, and on the part of the general public there is a lot of kicking about this. Some of the larger stores are adopting the practice of giving half the staff an afternoon off one day and the other half the next. This works out well and saves patrons the inconvenience of finding the store closed when they want to do business. Woodstock has to cater to the farming trade, without which Woodstock merchants would find it hard to live. It is contended, in opposition to the half-holiday, that if a farmer or his wife come to the city to shop, and finds stores closed, that the person next time will go somewhere else. Last year, grocery stores and various other lines, were closed on Wednesday afternoons, barber shops Thursdays and banks on Fridays so that farmers hardly knew when to come to town, for their supplies.

There has been a plentiful supply of fruit on the local market, but prices have been high and this, with the high prices of sugar, has been felt by the housewife. The apple crop promises to be comparatively light.

J M Ross, manager of the Woodstock Cereal Company, a South African war veteran and captain and adjutant of the 22nd Regiment Oxford Rifles, has gone to Quebec as adjutant of the composite "black" regiment, of which a company from the 22nd forms a part. Capt. Ross is a fine military man and the present acknowledgment of his ability is appreciated by his many friends here.

The opening of the new railway from Woodstock to St. Mary's, passing through Embro, is a great thing for the farmers in the district served. The road fills a long-felt want.

CHATHAM.

July 27.—Thngs are rapidly shaping themselves for the forthcoming merchants' picnic to be held on Aug. 19 at Erie Beach. Since last week the committees have been diligently at work, making the necessary arrangements and mapping out a good programme of sports for the great day.

There is some prospect that when the proposed central delivery system goes into operation, the Chatham grocers will go the Adrian and Pontiac, Mich., merchants one better by instaling an auto delivery. Now that all the main streets of Chatham are paved, such a system seems feasible; indeed, the dry goods firm of H. W. Ball & Co. have been using an auto for delivery purposes for a year and more. Quicker deliveries and an ultimate reduction in running expenses are a result.

An echo of the Ridgetown Canning Company by-law of a year and more ago has just been sounded in legal circles. It will be remembered that Ridgetown passed a by-law granting the promoters of the projected Ridgetown Canning Company certain concessions, in return for establishing a factory. The factory never materialized. Now Ridgetown has brought action against Messrs. B. V. Hole, C. B. Keenleyside and several other Londoners for a sum in the neighborhood of $550, to cover expenses incidental to passing the by-law.

Wm. Potter, the Queen St. grocer and ex-alderman, who is also Past Grand Patriarch of the I.O.O.F., was a prominent guest at a gathering of Blenheim Oddfellows on July 23, for the purpose of welcoming Grand Master, R. R. Brett, of Essex.

Smith & Jermyn have opened a new fish market on the market square. The new firm are keeping open the week round and till 10 p.m. Saturday nights and are doing considerable advertising. They deliver to all parts of the city. For many years past Chatham has been dependent for its fresh fish supply upon itinerant vendors and small boys carrying freshly caught carp and catfish from door to door. An up to date fish store supplying fresh lake fish should meet with a hearty welcome.

Chas. Burnie, of Dresden, is to be the new proprietor of Jas. N. Massey's grocery. Mr. Burnie was engaged in the grocery business in Dresden up to a few years ago, and has since been connected with W. M. Drader's factory staff in this city as foreman. Mr. Massey last June purchased W. D. Sheldon's liquor agencies, and is retiring from groceries to give his attention to the new business. He has been associated with the grocery business since his teens, and has won a wide popularity among all classes, resulting ultimately in his election to the city council, where he is now in his third year of service.

Fred Wood, who recently was compelled by ill-health to dispose of his business on Grand Ave. to Jas. H. Kadwell, is now soliciting orders for E. R. Snook. Mr. Wood has had 20 years' experience and somehow can't get away from the fascination of the trade.

W. T. Gregory is buying tobacco in Leamington and vicinity for the Imperial Tobacco Company. The price now being offered is 6½ cents a pound.

Henderson & Morriss, Leamington, have moved their bakery to the Coultis block on Talbot St. east. Their new premises are very attractively fitted up.

The new Kent Canning Company's warehouse was completed a few days ago, and is now in use.

Do grocers stop to think that in most cases they are paying meat prices for the paper in which their bacon is wrapped? The same applies to other meats, as many as three thicknesses of paper sometimes being used. Of course it is charged for as meat. The grocer, however, cannot sell it in the same way.

Another matter where weight figures is in connection with cheese. The grocer has to pay for his cheese at factory weight. After leaving the factory, it is never weighed a second time. Green cheese weighs more, however, than old cheese. Nevertheless, the grocer pays extra for old cheese on the ground of better quality and is allowed nothing for the falling off in weight, unless he calls attention to the matter. Grocers state that they have met with cheeses from 5 to 6 pounds short, though 2 or 3 pounds is a fair average.

HAMILTON.

July 27.—The optimistic feeling in regard to better trade conditions is growing rapidly in this good town. Cheering reports of good crops all over the country is putting fresh heart into all of our business men and manufacturers. Large orders are coming in from the West. All of this is very pleasing to the grocers who have been carrying large accounts on their books, and who are hopefully looking forward to the settlement of some of the old scores. The city is just closing a large contract for electric power, with the Cataract Power Co., for light and power for pumping water, which will be followed by street railway extension and equipment, giving employment to thousands of workmen. All in all, it looks more like good times here than in a decade before.

The trade miss the kindly chat of the travelers who are away on their holidays, but expect to be regaled with some tall stories about the way in which they enjoyed themselves on their return.

DEATH OF CANADIAN COMMISSIONER.

Peter B. Ball, Canadian Agent at Birmingham, Passes Away as Result of Operation.

The news was received with regret by many friends and business acquaintances this week, of the death of Peter B. Ball, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Birmingham. The end came as the result of an operation, but up to the present further details have not been received. Mr. Ball was a son of the late Rev. William L. Ball, formerly of Woodstock, and later of Guelph. His mother was a daughter of the late Peter Brown and a sister of the late Hon. George Brown. The late commissioner has done a good deal in his efforts to build up Canada's trade with the United Kingdom, and his kindness to many Canadians who have approached him in business interests is remembered in a good many quarters.

TRADE NOTES.

W. Watts has opened a grocery store in Brandon, Man.

G. A. Layton, grocer, Penticton, N.B., has sold his business to E. S. Lake.

The grocery stock of M. Asnin, Winnipeg, has been sold to L. Goldstein.

An extension has been granted Tate & Black, grocers, Boissevain, Man.

Arnold Christie has purchased the milk condensing factory at Mission, B.C.

J. M. Closson, general merchant, Pense, Sask., is succeeded by W. C. Thorburn.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Evaporated Apples—Firmer.

Sugar—Weaker.

Teas—Firm.

Dried Fruits—Bad reports.

Pork—Advanced.

Produce—Firmer.

Montreal, July 29, 1908.

There have been a few advances in prices this week, but no declines worth speaking about. Sugar, however, is rather weak and a decline would not surprise. New York refiners have dropped their prices. Wholesalers are not all of them well supplied with sugar, and a decline would induce buying in considerable quantity by many. Japan teas and Indian and Ceylon blacks are quite firm, while cheaper grades of blacks are weaker in tendency. Coffees and spices are quiet. New pack strawberries and peas are now being delivered, and appear to be giving satisfaction. Old pack canned goods are gradually being cleared off the market, and when the new stock arrives it will likely be put into empty warehouses. Some discouraging reports have been coming from California recently. Apricots are up nearly 20 per cent. and prune prices have been withdrawn. There has been an uninterrupted spell of extreme heat in that part of the country. A good crop of currants is expected, according to reports from Greece. Evaporated apples are firmer. Pork has been advanced. Butter and egg prices are a little higher, while cheese quotations are firm.

Collections are reported as fair to good.

SUGAR—Weakness characterizes the local market for refined sugars, and a decline would not surprise. There have been declines in New York this week in refined. Beet sugar is also weak. Wholesalers, some of them, are poorly stocked and a drop in prices would result in more or less buying activity. This, in turn, would have the effect of firming up the market again, especially should the refiners' stocks be of a limited nature. It is generally believed that New York refiners are none too well supplied.

DRIED FRUITS—It is expected, according to Grecian reports, that the currant crop this year will be a good one, and that prices will rule about the same as last year. Those in a position to know something about the yield place the crop at 170,000 tons, but, of course, this is purely speculative, as others place it as low as 140,000 tons. So far it is estimated that 150,000 tons of currants have been shipped since the harvesting of last year's crop, against 125,000 tons which had been shipped at this time a year ago. An opening price has been made on Valencia raisins, but little activity is reported in this market as yet. Advices from California are of a discouraging nature. Continued extreme heat has altogether altered the face of things, and whereas the prospects were splendid a couple of weeks ago, things do not look nearly so bright to-day. Prunes, apricots and peaches have suffered. All districts seemed to have been affected except the Santa Clara Valley, which was already in poor condition owing to the fruit having been dropping in quantity from the trees. Apricots, which should be of large yield this year, and, consequently reasonable in price, are nearly 20 per cent. higher. Prune prices have been withdrawn. Some dealers have taken orders for prunes at opening prices and these will now be filled by the shippers at a considerable loss. Raisins look good, but little definite information has been received as to the prospects.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Declined 10 cents.

Prunes and Apricots—Firmer in primary markets.

Beans—Firm.

Toronto, July 29, 1908.

The absence of the travelers on their holidays and the continued boiling weather seems to account for a somewhat quiet condition of business this week. Some firms report quite optimistically, saying that wire and mail orders have been keeping them quite as busy as usual, others are frank in admitting poor business. Everyone speaks hopefully, however, of the outlook after the harvest operations are over.

So far as changes are concerned, the grocery markets are practically dead this week. Some little excitement developed over the sugar situation this afternoon on receipt of the reduction of 10 cents made by the St. Lawrence and Redpath interests. Otherwise the situation so far as staples are concerned is absolutely featureless.

SUGAR—The advice of the decline of 10 cents by the St. Lawrence interests, followed shortly by the Redpath's early this afternoon was not altogether a surprise. While the general demand has been good here, it is said that buying in other parts of Canada has not been as brisk as desirable, and that the decline was made by these interests to stimulate buying on the part of the jobbers. Coupled with this is the report of easier markets abroad. Conditions generally are summed up by the New York Journal of Commerce as follows:

"The effect of declining European beet markets and the quiet demand for refined the past week was to strengthen the hand of buyers. As a result distressed sugars broke spot prices over 3-16c on sales of about 75,000 bags. Cuban holders generally speaking have not been pressing their sugars for sale, the stock in the island being 98,000 tons. Receipts at Atlantic ports were 14,275 tons less than estimated meltings and the stock—264,998 tons—should not carry refiners along more than two months. With only about 50,000 tons Cubas available, it is figured that 50,000 tons beets must be purchased, to say nothing of Javas. The world's visible supply is 261,000 tons less than last year. The refined sugar demand has been disappointingly light the past week, brokers and refiners alike complaining. The business moving is of a hand-to-mouth character, and it is pointed out in some circles can hardly be expected to become excited so long as distributors have no inducement to stock up. Consumption has been affected by the trade depression, particularly in the confectioners' branch, but, on the other hand, this should have been offset by the increased demand incidental to cheap and plentiful fruit and the hot weather.

It is argued that when the large refiners get ready they can stimulate buying by the old method of dropping prices and then advancing same. In this regard it should be noted that the 5.30c less 1 per cent. rate for standard granulated by the American, Howell and Arbuckle shows a margin of 108 points over raw sugars, which is full even for the summer months. There is still no indication of any change by the larger interests in the matter of making contracts, though the Federal and Warner allow 28 days' delay at the 5.40c less 1 per cent. basis.

Beet sugars sold off sharply for the old crop options in sympathy with reports from this side and better weather prospects abroad. Trade is dull the world over and besides the effects of Russian selling are feared."

It is thought by some responsible parties that the decline in Canadian refined was made with the same purpose as suggested above, to stimulate buying.

At time of writing the other refiners had not been heard from and the decline could not be noted as general. It is altogether probable, however, that they will follow suit.

How long the decline will last, considering the present situation of the markets, is an extremely difficult matter to prognosticate. This much can be said, however, that the present is a good time for the retailer to buy sugar, and no mistake can be made by buying pretty freely on the lower basis reached as a result of to-day's decline.

TEA—Business locally is very dull with no new features.

Thompson Bros.' weekly circular sums up the general situation as follows:

"Although no distinct change in the market has taken place during the week, the sales have passed with a slightly better feeling throughout. The total offerings of new season's teas for the past three weeks have only amounted to 6,056 packages, making it apparent to buyers that they are not likely to be over-supplied for some time, so that a more hopeful feeling is becoming noticeable. It is reported from India that the quality from Assam is improving, but owing to the exceptionally heavy rains experienced in Cachar and Sylhet the quality from these districts will hardly for a time be up to their usual standard."

COFFEE—Business locally seems to be less active this week under summer conditions.

Willett & Gray, in their weekly report, say, in part: "Owing to the fact that the Santos coffee is now arriving in fair quantities and the new crop in full swing, the Government of San Paulo has decided not to make any further sales of their holdings, either in this country or in Europe, not wishing to compete with their planters during the most active season of the crop. It is but natural that the wishes of the planters should be heeded, as the taxes raised to pay the expenses of the valorization come entirely out of the pockets of the planters. The larger receipts, as usual, make an impression upon the option markets, but after awhile the desire to obtain supplies from the new crop outweighs the effect of the large receipts, and the active business in the second half of the year more than balances the increased supplies. While the buyers in this country have been insisting upon the Santos coffee they require being described according to their wants, it will be difficult to obtain good quality until perhaps later in the season when the unripe beans disappear. Then again, as it has been so often stated, the present crop yield is the result of very irregular flowerings, and it will not be an easy matter to get the quality to which this country is accustomed."

DRIED FRUIT—Prices are unchanged and there are no new features to report in local markets. Reports from California tell of increasingly strong markets in prunes and apricots.

NO BORAX PICKLE USED.

Despatch Makes Incorrect Statements Regarding Methods Used by Canadian Packers.

The following despatch from Ottawa which has been given some prominence by the Canadian dailies this week is arousing some interest among the trade in Canada:

"The Local Government Board of Great Britain will hold an inquiry into the use of preservatives by exporters of ham, bacon and other meats. The statement has been made that much of the Canadian bacon and hams sent to England is pickled in borax. The use of preservatives has occasioned considerable alarm in the Old Country, which has resulted in orders being issued for the proposed inquiry on the subject."

The statement regarding the pickling of Canadian meats in borax is certainly entirely without foundation. Local packers say that a sprinkling of this chemical is used on the outside of the packages, but that no borax whatever is used in the pickling. The statement appears to have been made by someone who has no intimate knowledge of conditions in the industry. Under these considerations the story does not seem to have much validity.

OUTLOOK IN THE UNITED STATES

New York, July 15.—E. H. Gary, chairman of the U. S. Steel Co., the greatest business concern in the world, when asked to express an opinion on the business outlook in America, said:

"In looking into the future, from commercial and financial standpoints just at this moment, we happily are forced to take into consideration the condition of the crops, and crop prospects are excellent, I might say wonderful.

"There lies the key to the situation. Enormous quantities of corn, wheat and oats are to be harvested and marketed, and that means that the railroad companies must prepare to handle those products. I say 'must' because there is a certain element of compulsion in the proposition.

"The railroads must move the grain and other farm products.

Cause and Effect.

"They can adapt their equipments to the circumstance, either by the use of their surplus or by borrowing money, and we know that they can now borrow plenty of money if they need it. Thus, if you care to follow the line of cause and effect, you can see that the demands on the railroads mean added demands on the steel plants in the matter of materials as well as on hundreds of other branches of industry and manufacture.

"To get right down to the foundation of fact, it must be said, as on many other similar occasions, that the farmer is the king of the steel corporation's output, as the railway companies take about one-third. I will add this in connection, that the demand for structural iron is increasing all over the country and the tin plate department is also very active. Here again you can trace the demand back to the farmer and the gardener, whose products fill the cans for the year's consumption.

"The general condition is like that of the great wave breathing confidence and solidity sweeping from the middle west and west over the recently afflicted east."

WAS FORMERLY TORONTO BROKER

Wm. Dane, Father of Fred Dane, of Dane & Co., Passed Away in Ireland.

News was received with regret among the trade in Toronto this week of the death of Wm. Dane, father of Fred Dane, grocery broker, Belfast. Mr. Dane, who was in his 78th year, had been ailing for some time, and was at a seaside resort for the benefit of his health when the end came. Some years ago he was a familiar figure on the street in Toronto, having carried on a brokerage business for a number of years, leaving for Ireland about 14 years ago. Fred Dane is the only son, but three daughters survive in Ireland.

T. E. Hartley, of Kearley & Tonge, the London tea merchants, has been in Toronto this week, and is spending some weeks in Canada, looking over business prospects.

PIMENTO OR ALLSPICE.

Is the dried, unripe berry of the pamento tree, known as Eugenia pimenta or pimenta officinalis. The trees is a fine evergreen, growing 20 to 30 feet high, of the myrtle bloom order, very common in Jamaica, the West Indies and South America. Its leaves are of oblong or oval shape, of a deep shiny green color, and about four inches long. It is largely cultivated in plantations called "pimento walks," but grows to perfection in a wild state in Jamaica, whence British importations have been mostly derived, hence the name Jamaica pepper.

The berries are light and brittle, of roundish form and crowned with the remains of the calyx, generally in the form of a raised, sear-like ring. Each horn contains two dark brown reniform seeds. They are called "allspice," from the fact that they have the flavor of cinnamon, cloves and nutmegs combined. The corns are about the same size as huckleberries, and are sometimes adulterated with mustard husks. There are also inferior kinds, such as pimento acris.

LET US HAVE THE SIGNATURES.

A couple of anonymous letters have been received at this office recently bearing on different phases of the situation in the trade. We should be glad to publish these, but cannot do so unless the writers will make their identity known. In cases where the writer does not wish his name made public this can easily be arranged, but all communications must bear the writer's name as evidence of good faith before they can be considered.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS—

Salmon advancing.
Reduction in canned tomatoes.
Corn syrups reduced.
New Japan teas arriving.
Cocoa and chocolate reduced.

Winnipeg, July 25.

In spite of dog days there is considerable activity in wholesale grocery circles and the business outlook is very bright. Crop reports continue very encouraging. One or two districts in Manitoba complain of drought but upon the whole the crop outlook is by far the best in years and it is confidently expected that the returns will be sufficiently large to compensate for the disappointments of last year.

Cohoe salmons are advancing. This is a year of a short pack and prices will be high. Gallon tomatoes have been reduced. New Japan teas are arriving and they are quoted at about the same scale of prices as last year.

CANNED GOODS—A reduction is announced in the new prices of gallon tomatoes. The canned goods situation continues very interesting and further developments may occur at any time. The local wholesale houses are getting a special line of corn, tomatoes and peas from the Canadian Canners to sell at 20 cents per case less than "group 2." Only 25 per cent. of their orders for this grade are being filled and therefore they cannot guarantee delivery in all cases.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Winnipeg Correspondent.

Winnipeg, July 25.—The situation of the crop, which is the big factor at the moment, continues to be of the most satisfactory character, in fact, it could hardly be more so as the weather throughout the week has been hot with light, cool winds and occasional showers, and the reports are continuous that the wheat is well headed and beginning to fill in a most satisfactory manner. There are damaged spots, of course, but just at present the most cautious are figuring on a crop of from 105 to 110 million bushels, and this would be more than sufficient to set the country humming like a hive of bees. Indeed, it is pretty well doing that at the present time for trade is certainly brisk with the wholesale houses, the railways are getting everything ready for a rush movement once the harvest is on, and the Free Press of Winnipeg is getting everything underway for its annual inspection, which has now begun to be regarded as the authoritative statement on crop conditions for the year. The fact that the election for the Province of Saskatchewan has been set for the 14th day of the month, is an indication of the time when harvest is expected to be general in that Province, which is always a little later than in Manitoba.

Barley harvest will be general in Manitoba in another ten days, and there are a few barley fields that will be cut during the coming week.

The live stock market is active, but with lower prices. The receipts for July have been enormous, running in some instances over 5,000 a week, and though the drop in the British market has lowered prices, more especially for export cattle, there is still a good margin in the prices offered. The drop has had one good effect and that is to keep back on the ranges some of the cattle that were not too well finished and which ranchers had a tendency to rush forward while prices were high. The market for butchers' cattle is depressed owing to heavy receipts, for, of course, the steers spoken of as too light for export, when they get to Winnipeg are thrown into the butchers' class and there is not at present sufficient consumptive demand to clean up the stocks coming in.

Hogs are coming in in fair numbers, but the demand is good and the price advanced another ¼ on Friday, making the price for tops 5¾, off cars Winnipeg, with 6c paid for occasional lots of extra choice.

Winnipeg is feeling the effect this summer of the mad rush to sell feed and dairy cows last fall, of which mention was made at some length in these columns. The make of butter has been very light all season, and the prices high, and it looks as if butter would be both scarce and dear next winter.

The make of cheese is also light and prices have held high all season. There are not wanting signs that the lesson of the cows has been laid to heart, for there are a large number of farmers not only trying to buy cows this season and making preparations to go into butter making for another season, but those who have cows show a determination to hang on to them. There have been larger exhibits of choice dairy cattle at the fairs and the owners of pure bred dairy stock report a very good demand for both cows and heifers.

The milking shorthorn is receiving more attention than has been the case for some time, and there were some very successful sales of Holsteins following the Winnipeg, Brandon and Regina Fairs. The present shortage will be worth putting up with if it brings forth fruit such as this.

The general revival of trade seems to have stimulated interest in Western stocks, and the inquiry has been good all week, while a number of Western stocks were listed in London. This comprised £1,500,000 four per cent. City of Winnipeg bonds, and £113,700 five per cent. City of Regina bonds. Several Western school districts are calling for tenders for their debentures.

ENJOYED ANNUAL PICNIC.

Employes of E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, Toronto, Have Jolly Outing at Bond Lake.

Bond Lake, on the Metropolitan Railway, is the Mecca of many a happy picnic and excursion party from Toronto. It is safe to say that this year no more pleasant gathering has been held on this lovely spot than the second annual picnic of E. W. Gillett Co.'s employes on Friday, July 24. As was advised on the programme "everybody looked pleasant" and this was the case, through the day, with exception of the little upset during the ladies' 50-yard dash. Three special cars took the excursionists, numbering one hundred and eighty, at 9.30 and 10 o'clock from the North Toronto terminus and safely landed all at 11 o'clock. President Wm. Dobie and his various committees of games, sports, etc., officered by Assistant General Manager G. H. Macfarlane, Treasurer J. R. Kirkpatrick, Secretary Geo. Hepburn, Sales Manager C. E. Moyle and Superintendent of Factory A. P. Craig were on hand and looked after the comfort and happiness of everybody. Even The Grocer representative was assigned the pleasant (?) duty of umpiring the baseball game between the office staff and factory team.

Oh, yes, Harry Barker, of Harry Barker Company, served the dinner and lunches. Nuff Sed!

One of the most novel features was the engagement of Sousa's Band (from the Ward) and in the absence of the renowned Phillip, the crank was turned ly Signores Spaghetti and Fidelini. Besides the above, D'Alessandro's string orchestra of five pieces furnished the best of music. Sousa's Band, by the way, came in and went out to the park on the way freight. This was a new advertising stunt of Phillip's.

Like everything that E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, do, the picnic programme was a novel and well arranged one, systematic arrangement being evident in everything. After the various games were run off Mr. Dobie, at the conclusion of supper, presented the prizes to the successful competitors. The list of events and the winners were as follows:

LADIES' CONTESTS.

1. Needle Threading Contest—1st, Violet Gostlin; 2nd, Bessie Ferguson.
3. Potato (on spoon) Race—1st Minnie Burkholder; 2nd, Bessie Moore.

15. 100-yard Dash (open)—1st C. E. Moyle; 2nd, J. M. Thom.

Baseball game won by factory team.

Tickets for a free ride on the electric launch were presented by Mr. Dobie and many took advantage of the trip on the lake.

The return journey was made at 7.30 and everyone acknowledged a happy and pleasant outing. The Grocer, as well as the Gillett employes, owe their thanks to Mr. Dobie for a delightful outing.

No Profit From Impatience.

The trouble? Impatience, that's all—the common fault of most young men who want to get on in the world. Impatience is about as useless a thing as any young man can encumber himself with. It produces no end of worry and absolutely nothing in the way of profit.

The trouble I was experiencing was due to impatience, and was for the most part an imaginary and not a real trouble.

If there was discord in our work together, it was simply and solely because I was continually anticipating something of the sort—as the boys would say, "sort of egging it on in my mind."

I worked on in that mental atmosphere for several months, chafing inwardly at this chimerical enmity between the men and their manager, at the same time putting on the best front I could muster.

Finally, one morning I had an awakening. It was a rude shock, but it did the business.

While speeding along on an "L" train to the office, I began to arraign myself something after this fashion:

"You're a nice sort of sales manager! You preach faith continually to your men, and you haven't a drop in your own veins. You're not willing to meet your men half-way on confidence, while expecting every man jack o' them to give to you, a stranger, the fullest degree of that precious article. Here you've been building up trouble for yourself in your mind all these months on account of the sins of the other fellow, when the trouble lies entirely with yourself. Now, this can't go on much longer. This whole business is mere mental moonshine, if you only had good horse sense enough to realize it.

"There's nothing in the world the matter, excepting with yourself. Sweep the cobwebs of distrust out of the place where your grey matter is supposed to be—and likewise the despondency out of your mental atmosphere, and things will look different.

"You are doing good work. You have heard no complaint from headquarters. Your methods are all right. Both will win out in time if you'll give them a fair chance. Now, brace up and have faith in your house, your men, your proposition, and yourself.

"That's all you need—just faith, coupled with good horse sense."

There was no rebuttal evidence. The examination finished, on reaching my office I rested the case, and that was all there was to it.

From that hour, things took on a different hue. Everything connected with my department moved forward with a vigor and a satisfaction that were reassuring, to say the least.

That mental blue-print of myself was my salvation, and added immeasurably to the comfort and well-being of all concerned.

It's a great thing to have faith in yourself—not too much, but enough to keep you from slipping backward in the race for success.

An Interesting Incident.

The famous Glasgow clergyman, John McNeil, while preaching in Chicago during the World's Fair year, wishing to emphasize the value of faith, related the following rather remarkable incident which occurred in his career as pastor. Said he:

"Many Christian people have their prayers only half answered because they have not sufficient faith that they will be answered in full. Let me illustrate that.

"During my pastorate of a certain church in ——, we had occasion to make extensive repairs, and the church was heavily in debt. It worried me a great deal, and I made it a subject of much prayer. A stranger called on me one day in my study, and to my utter amazement he said: 'Mr. McNeil, you do not know who I am, and it does not matter. I understand you have a debt on your church that you are anxious to pay. I have heard a great deal about you and the work you are doing, and I want to help you with that debt.'

"Taking a check-book out of his pocket, he tore out a blank and laid it before me on my desk. 'There,' said he, 'fill that out for the amount you require, and I will return later and sign it,' and he was gone before I could stop him.

"I sat there looking at that blank check, failing to comprehend what it all meant. 'Surely,' said I, 'he does not realize that the amount of our debt runs into thousands of pounds sterling. He would never give that much if he knew. But he told me to make it out for the full amount. No. He couldn't have known. I'll put down half the amount. I am afraid when he sees how large it is he will not sign even for that amount.'

"After a little the stranger returned, asked for the check, and with scarcely a glance he affixed his signature, took up his hat and left without another word.

"Mechanically I looked at the bit of paper, felt it, searched it; at last the name drew and held my gaze. With peculiar force the truth dawned upon me, and likewise the genuineness of the check. The signature was that of a wealthy and philanthropic man whose generous acts were well known to me, although I had never met him before. When I realized that he meant what he said, and could easily have paid the whole amount of the debt, I said, 'O man of little faith! I will never doubt again.'"

That story is a faithful picture of many men in the business life who fail to take opportunity when it is offered.

To every salesman opportunity opens the door to success. Those who perceive and enter gain the treasure. To those who do not heed, opportunity says:

Master of human destines am I;
Fame, love, and fortune on my footsteps wait;
Cities and fields I walk; I penetrate
Deserts and seas remote, and passing by Hovel and mart and palace, soon or late
I knock unbidden once at every gate.
If sleeping, wake; feasting, rise before
I turn away. It is the hour of fate,
And they who follow me reach every state
Mortals desire, and conquer every foe
Save death; but those who doubt or hesitate,
Condemned to failure, penury, and woe,
Seek me in vain, and uselessly implore.
I answer not, and I return no more.

—John J. Ingalls.

Successful salesmen—those who make territories yield a permanent, profitable business, the sort who "wear" well—must and do possess strong positive force.

Doubt befogs mind force. Indecision crucifies precision of action.

Inoculation of doubts in the salesman's mind poisons his enthusiasm.

Persuasion Depends on Enthusiasm.

There is little doubt that the degree of a man's power of persuasion depends upon his earnestness and enthusiasm.

Persistently thinking right means persistently acting right.

The true salesman learns what kind of thoughts count; he thinks them, acts them, until they become a part of his being, forming the directing force in his success.

The right kind of salesman begins by training himself. From the first mistake in the first town of his first trip until he lays down his grip for the last time, he is in constant training.

Early in his career he discovers—and what a power that discovery is!—that the same tactics he would employ in training his horse would, if used upon himself, secure him against doubt and failure.

Over and over again with infinite patience and determination, he declares to himself with spirit, "I will" and "I am"—until he comes to a thorough belief in his power to win men and sales. Right thinking and right doing—those are the means by which he keeps his name at the top of the sales list.

The right kind of salesman has no fear of opposition, whether it be from his customers or his competitors.

How well he knows from experience in his early days that to listen to rebuff with his ears that hear is but to succumb to a greater force than he himself possesses! Sharp thrusts received in the school of experience cause him to be watchful. Constantly he cultivates the thoughts and habits in himself that teach him how to parry successfully all negative influence from within or without.

Success From Optimism.

All successful salesmen are optimistic. They see only the side of things that wins, and recognize no superior among competitors. The real salesman so schools himself that he is able to sell a poor line of goods on a poorer territory, solely upon the strength of his own personality. What a mighty human dynamo he is when he finds his lot cast among circumstances wholly congenial! And so the world about him always moves onward to better and bigger things; slowly but surely he leaves behind to rust and shrivel and die every adverse suggestion, everything that has tended to lessen his power.

It is lack of brain activity that keeps the class of salesmen that go round and round and round, year in and year out doing things in the same old way, always hugging the despicable place at the bottom of the sales sheet.

It is lack of the kind of brains that work and dig and sweat till they find a way to get things done, brains that go to the bottom of things, brains that are always looking for better things, brains that never give up a problem till they find a way to solve it.

The Human Dynamo.

In mechanics to-day the electric dynamo stands as the highest development of mechanical power. Among salesmen the highest is the human dynamo, the man whose brain is charged with dynamic force; whose heart is on fire with enthusiasm and push; who leads the strenuous life and likes it; who is always dissatisfied, always fighting for bigger and better results; who sets his goal-post far out in the field of endeavor, and knows no rest until he reaches it; who is on the keen scent for newer and better ideas to help him in his work; who is willing to sweat blood to get what he wants; who believes the head of his house and his manager know as much as he does; who believes the credit man will give both himself and his customers a square deal; who believes that the buyers of the establishment that pays him his salary know as much about buying goods as he does about selling them; who knows that the goods of his house are good goods, the right kind, and will sell, and that he can sell them; who spurns the habits of indifference, of shirking, of mischief-making, of arrogance towards customers, of mutual jealousy the "click" habit; who avoids, as evidence of weakness, such thoughts as "Oh, what's the use? The sales manager's got it in for me. He's a dreamer, anyway. I always get the worst end of everything, no matter what I do." The model salesman avoids, as worst of all, the habit of fault-finding and criticism of superiors. He is the kind of salesman that forms the title of this chapter. It is that kind, and no other, that gets the big prizes in the business game.

What are you, Mr. Salesman?

A human dynamo, or just a common member of the Sons of Rest? Never mind the other fellow—how is it with yourself? That is the question.

Are you cultivating confidence in the value of your own ideas, and in your power to use them? Did it ever occur to you that you could do as well as others, if you would only bring yourself to believe it?

I have observed in many successful salesmen the desire and willingness to grasp at every good idea from any source that will aid them in making sales. The humblest men in our profession are those who are at the head.

Get Good Ideas Everywhere.

I remember on a certain occasion issuing a statement to our traveling force which was intended to inspire in them an optimistic survey of the month upon which we were about to enter. The statement contained facts and figures of the month just ended, showing the percentage of increase in various departments, and wound up with a forecast of the month to come as viewed from the standpoint of the managing staff. The men were all in from the road, winding up a period of house trade, and about to depart for a "filling in" trip.

A few minutes after the letter had been distributed, I chanced to saunter down "Salesmen's Row," the name the stock-boys had given the aisle that skirted their long row of desks. My approach was unnoticed by a group of salesmen clustered about the desk of one of our "Sons of Rest." who happened to have the distinction of being the ringleader of a small coterie of professional critics.

He was reading aloud to the others from my statement, and had reached the part concerning the forecast of the coming month when he laid the paper down and in a tone of withering sarcasm said, "Umph! The idle dream of an office man."

Catching the exclamation on passing, I wheeled and squarely faced him. Perceiving me standing there for the first time, he became confused. His eyes sought the floor as he blurted out, "A fine letter, sir, and right to the point. Hit the nail right on the head. Yes, sir, hit the nail right on the head."

Six weeks later the man who led the force in point of sales and general efficiency bustled into my office, just in from his trip. Warmly extending his hand, he said in tones of deep appreciation:

"That statement you compiled just before I left home did the business. It helped me wonderfully. It was tough work landing business this trip; but on one occasion when I had sweat blood with a dealer in my sample-room without being able to sell him, I pulled out your letter and read it to him. Stamped as it was with the authority of the house, it made an impression, helping me to get some hard orders that otherwise I would have lost. Send me that kind of stuff as often as you get it out."

His attitude coupled with that simple statement, furnished the key to his success, namely, that he was alert, and made use of everything that could possibly contribute to his success in salesmaking.

A day or two later brought in the other man, the leader of the Order of the Sons of Rest. As may easily be imagined, he reported a poor trip. He had all manner of excuses to offer for his failure. Failure and excuses go together.

If such salesmen could only read what takes place in their employer's mind when weighing the salesmen on his staff, one against another, there would be at least a slight hope of their being graduated from the Order of the Sons of Rest, but their untrained powers of calculation do not admit of their philosophizing so far.

Believing the opportunity was at hand to arouse Mr. S. O. R. Van Winkle from his state of selling-lethargy, I asked him whether or not he had found the statement issued by the sales department just before he left of any use to him on his trip. He looked perplexed, scratched his head, and remarked that he could not remember just what statement I referred to. There were many statements issued. He thought he could find it in his grip, where he carried all current mail from the house; he would look it up when he returned home that evening.

"No matter. Let it go, let it go," said I. "It's too late to use it now, but let me remind you that that little piece of paper you misinterpreted to your fellow-salesmen as 'An idle dream of an office man' helped one of our men to increase by a goodly margin, while you have been idling along in an atmosphere of self-satisfied self-efficiency, which has amounted to nothing more than inefficiency."

The salesman who hopes to get on in the world comes to know sooner or later that Knowledge is proud that he has learned so much;

Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.

PRESTIGE.

Prestige is defined as the influence which arises from reputation. That being the case, it naturally follows that anything which effectively spreads a firm's good reputation is a direct aid to prestige. Most travelers prefer to work for a firm which has prestige with the trade. The very weight of a name often helps a good deal. All concerns which persistently advertise in a good trade newspaper have more or less of prestige with the trade; because the fact that a firm persistently advertises is convincing evidence to the retailer of that firm's progressiveness and prominence in the trade. No use talking; live trade newspaper advertising, does tend to make the travelers' path easier to tread!

A GROCER'S "SUNFLOWER" WINDOW

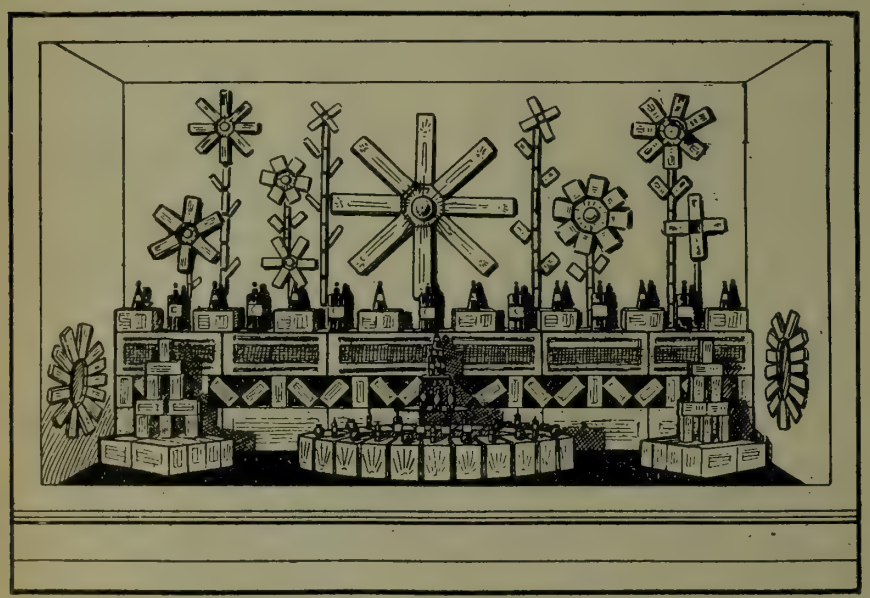
A Timely Hint for an Attractive Summer Display—Bottles and Cartons Furnish the Material for an Effective Showing.

Sunflowers are coming out now in all their glorious yellowness. Just the time to get in an applicable window which will make people think of them, and at the same time be a thoroughly good attraction, both for your store and the goods displayed. The engraving shown herewith suggests a sunflower window, which, as well as being timely, is attractive and offers opportunity for good work in the window. The sketch and suggestion appeared recently in the Modern Grocer.

The wall in the background is made of boxes and cartons, topped off with bottles. The stars, built of cartons, are tacked to the background as are also the stems, which appear to support them. A few cartons are placed along the stems to suggest leaves. Where a good many cartons are used in the circle the effect suggests a sunflower immediately.

A circle of boxes is built in the centre of the floor space where each box is crowned with a bottle or a jar. In the centre of this circle of boxes is a pyramid of bottles towering up well above the floor display.

A couple of pyramids—one at either side of the window—are made of cartons. The background effect is an easy way to lend height to the display in a simple way, entailing very little work and very little stock.



Suggestion for a Sunflower Grocery Window.

CHANGING WINDOW DISPLAYS.

If you have a window in your store, study how to get the maximum of advertising value out of it. See to it that it is changed at least once, and, if possible, twice a week. Remember that the possible customer is frequently attracted or repelled by a window display. She sees the window before she sees the interior of your store. It is most important that the outside of your shop should be made inviting in every way.

When you meet a person you look first at his eyes. When you meet a tea and coffee store, you look first at its eyes—the windows. If the "eyes" are interesting and suggest possibilities, you have a natural desire to know the possessor better. Look to your windows.

ELECTRICITY AS AN ADJUNCT.

Don't let the item of increased expense stand in the way of your having electric fans in your store during the hot-weather season. The overhead fans are best, because they are not so rude—they are not likely to disturb your customer's headgear or disarrange her carefully dressed coiffure. This may sound like a trivial thing, but it is none the less important. You will find that your lady customer will stay all the longer if she is made cool and comfortable—and the longer she stays the more she buys—that is, if you or your clerks are good salesmen. Electric fans in summer are quite as necessary as electric lights in winter.—The Spice Mill.

Henry T. Thomson, Zetland, has purchased the general store business of Mr. Mallough, Belmore.

OTTAWA'S NEW HOTEL.

Walter Walby, proprietor of the Cecil Hotel, Ottawa, is meeting with splendid success in his new venture—an hotel for the commercial men. Mr. Walby's sixteen years' of experience have taught him that commercial men will give preference to an hotel which caters to them especially, and with this in mind he put up one of the prettiest and most comfortable hotels in this country. There are about one hundred rooms, forty having a bath in connection. All have running water, and are bright, sanitary and comfortable in every respect. The dining-room is first-class, the cuisine being perfect, while the service is all that can be desired. From Mr. Walby to the newest bellboy all are particularly anxious to please the commercial travelers, which certainly has a whole lot to do with the comfort of a class of guests who are too often left to shift pretty well for themselves—so long as they pay up—except during dull winter months.—Advt.

Winnipeg Industrial Exhibition

Splendid Showing of Horses and Cattle—British Columbia and Ontario Well Represented With Fruit — Agricultural Motor Competition a Point of Interest—Winnipeg Manufacturers Poorly Represented—Some of the Grocery Exhibits.

Written for the Canadian Grocer by our special Western correspondent.

Winnipeg, July 25.—The eighteenth annual exhibition of the Winnipeg Industrial Association was last week brought to a highly successful closing. There are many points of interest in connection with the exhibition, but the most outstanding feature, entirely new from anything in previous years, has been the agricultural motor competition. It is the first time in the history of an industrial exhibition in Canada that such a thing as an international agricultural motor competition has been held. Some idea of the importance attached to such a competition is gathered from the fact that the Federal Government at Washington sent a special representative to watch the tests. The Government of the Argentine also sent a man. There were motors here from all parts of the United States, Canada and Great Britain. The first part of the competition was held in the grounds of the exhibition, when the motors were tested for hauling powers, and the second and most important test was made in a field a short distance from the exhibition grounds.

Peculiar Weather Conditions.

An agricultural motor must be good for plowing if it is to be considered at all. The day set apart for the plowing tests it rained and it rained and it rained, and nothing could be done. The day following the road to the piece of ground set aside for the plowing test was one sea of mud, and Manitoba mud at that. One thing was demonstrated to the Queen's taste and that was the ability, or rather the suitability of the motors to go over bad roads. It is not likely that anything in the shape of a motor will ever encounter any road worse than those went over. It took a whole morning to move them to the field, but in the afternoon the motors all got to work. Among them were three machines of the International Harvester Company, and Marshall's, from Great Britain. Two of the heavier machines had difficulty in reaching the ground. The English machine burns coal oil instead of gasoline for fuel. The Cockshutt Plow Company very kindly loaned all the plows used for the trial and also their experts to put them in order. This was a great help in making the test a uniform one.

The rain that made the roads so bad certainly gave the motors the ideal soil for plowing for the sod turned over like cheese. There were no stones and the engines were able to travel right along and do very satisfactory work. Short furrows were the order so that spectators might notice the turning qualities of the outfits. Two hours steady plowing was done, the machines drawing from three to six 14-inch bottoms each.

The third day of the trial was devoted to an expert examination of the interior parts of the various machines. This was too technical for the ordinary fair visitor, but it was most interesting to note the large number of farmers who were anxious to learn something of the construction and management of these machines. On Saturday, the last day of the exhibition, the results were handed out. The judges were William Cross, for many years master mechanic of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and A. R. Greig, of the Manitoba Agricultural College.

The decision was based upon the excellence of the motors as general purpose machines, not laying undue emphasis upon their success in any one test, but rather upon their uniform usefulness. First place was given to the Minnard-Haines, of Minneapolis, a 30-horse-power four-cylinder tractor with a score of 117.6. Second to the International Harvester Company, for a 15 horse-power, single cylinder engine, which scored 117 points, and third, to the Marshall engine, a two-cylinder, 30 horse-power, with a score of 108.3. None of the outfits scored under 100. The selling price f.o.b. Winnipeg of the respective winners in the order named is $2,270, $1,800, and $2,700, while their respective weights, equipped with fuel and water are: 13,530 lbs., 9,920 lbs., and 10,680 lbs. It might be remarked in passing that almost the entire credit for the holding of the competition at the Winnipeg industrial is due to A. Burness-Greig. In a chat your correspondent had with W. L. Ellis, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, he said: "I consider this one of the most important departures that has been made along the line of practical agriculture motors, because it has given the builders of this class of machinery an opportunity to get together and see just wherein their various machines are at fault for practical use in this country. Take the Marshall people. from Gainsboro; they frankly admitted that they were up against soil conditions which they had never seen before, and the experience would be of great value to them in constructing motors for use in this country. I have watched the competition very closely on behalf of my Government and feel that it has been not only of great interest but of great profit for me to be here."

Splendid Exhibit of Horses.

The motor competition has been dealt with first and at length because of its novelty and its importance. One of the most interesting things was to walk back and forward between the motor competition and the ring where the heavy horses were being judged. The Winnipeg Industrial has always had a high reputation for its exhibit of horses, but this year the number and quality of the horses is ahead of anything that previous years have brought into the ring. Prof. Carlyle, Dean of the Agriculture College of the State of Colorado, and a graduate of the O.A.C., Guelph, and George Gray, of Newcastle, Ont., acted as judges in all the heavy horse classes. Prof. Carlyle is recognized as one of the greatest authorities on Clyde horses on the continent of America, and his verdict was that the classes were all exceptionally well filled and that many of the horses shown, if taken to the International at Chicago, would make the American breeders of Clydesdales sit up and take notice. One exhibitor, Mr. Tabor, of Condie, Sask., who has six mares and fillies, all the get of one stallion, Baron's Gem, a descendant of Baron's Pride, was really urged to go to Chicago with this particular string. It would be difficult to imagine six horses of varying ages showing more uniformity of type and conformation.

The Canadian west has always been known as a Clydesdale country, but in the last few years, owing to the large influx of American settlers, there has grown up considerable demand for Percherons, and already a number of breeders have gone into the business of raising these horses. For the first time a large exhibit was made, and some really splendid specimens of the breed, both black and grey, imported and home-bred were shown and came in for a good deal of favorable comment from the judges. It is quite safe to say that never in the history of the Winnipeg Industrial has so keen an interest been taken in the breeding of heavy horses. Geo. Pepper, of Toronto, who was here with his string of light horses, remarked to the writer that never in the history of Canada had there been so great a demand for heavy horses as at the present. It would not, he said, be possible to buy for love nor money ten carloads of good horses in Ontario at the present time. The west is short of horses; the United States is short of horses, and England herself has few to spare. Mercer & O'Neill, of Markdale, Ont., were exhibitors of both light and heavy horses. They brought up a string of ten of the latter, and it is understood that not one of them is going back to Ontario. All of which goes to show that though the agricultural motor has no doubt come to stay, it has not by any means taken the place of the horse, not is it likely to do in the next quarter of a century at least.

Fine Showing of Cattle.

From the standpoint of the breeder of beef cattle, the exhibition was also a great success. Never have finer herds of Shorthorns, Herefords, Polled-Angus and Galloways been brought out and never have the herds been shown in finer groom. The writer has attended every exhibition held in Winnipeg since the opening one in 1885, when the late lamented Walter Lynch was one of the successful exhibitors of Shorthorns brought up by him from Guelph by way of St. Paul, Minn., and from there by river boat to Winnipeg. It has been most interesting to follow the development of the live stock exhibit since those early days when things were very crude indeed and the man who bred fancy cattle was regarded by his neighbors as little better than a fool. It is a far cry from those unregenerate days to the present when a single herd on exhibition represents an investment of any where from twenty-five to seventy-five thousand dollars, and breeders come from every part of the great Dominion to Winnipeg.

Some splendid sales of cattle were effected at this exhibition, there being a number of buyers from the American side. Nor was it only cattle that our American cousins wanted. One dealer from Chicago offered W. H. Bryce, of Arcola, Sask., $3,500 cash for a team of young Clydesdale mares, which offer was not accepted as Mr. Bryce considered them of more value to him as brood mares, each having produced a splendid colt this season.

Other Interesting Features.

From the standpoint of manufactures, particularly of machinery in motion, and agricultural machinery of all kinds, the exhibition showed a marked advance on other years.

As usual, British Columbia was in with a splendid display of fruit and timber, and, marvellous to relate, old Ontario has at last awakened to the opportunities of the west as a fruit market, and the Government put in a very fine display.

There was not very much in the way of fresh fruit, but a magnificent display of apples that had been held in cold storage, fresh tomatoes, and honey. Crowe & Hodgens, who were in charge of the exhibit, certainly won golden opinions for their province for their courtesy in furnishing information, and it is to be hoped that from this beginning there will be great results in the way of fruit shipments from Ontario to Winnipeg in the future. Tnere is ample room here for both Ontario and British Columbia.

There are many other things in the exhibition that might be noted, but the ones touched upon seem to the writer the points that would be of the most general interest. From the standpoint of attendance and monetary receipts the fair was a decided success notwithstanding the fact that one day was almost a total loss owing to the very heavy rain. —H.

Some Grocery Exhibits.

Unfortunately the exhibits in the Manufacturers' Building were by no means representative of the industries of Winnipeg, and the West. Moreover, they were not so numerous as in former years. Perhaps the grocery field was represented better than any other, but many exhibits were conspicuous by their absence and the majority of the exhibits were from the East. The Winnipeg manufacturers for the most part ignored their own exhibition.

Blue Ribbon, Ltd.

Blue Ribbon, Ltd., was one of the few Winnipeg firms having an exhibit, and their display, from its interesting and novel character, attracted considerable attention. In a large well-situated booth several employes were busily engaged packing Blue Ribbon Tea, and thousands of visitors stopped to examine the interesting processes. It is safe to say that Blue Ribbon tea interested many visitors as a result of this novel exhibit.

Blackwood's, Ltd.

Blackwood's baking powders, pickles and aerated waters were well displayed in a big booth. Being the only Winnipeg pickle and baking powder firm to have a display, Blackwood's should reap increased rewards for their enterprise.

57 Varieties.

The Heinz 57 varieties were displayed in the same handsome booth illustrated a few weeks ago in connection with the report of the Winnipeg Pure Food Show. Pickles, sauces and relishes were served to many visitors, and as the Heinz booths are always in charge of experienced demonstrators, the results obtained are invariably satisfactory. The Heinz demonstration campaign is a great assistance to the dealer in selling the 57 varieties.

Canada Maple Exchange.

Toothsome samples of the various maple products put up by the Canada Maple Exchange, Montreal, were served to many visitors during the progress of the exhibition. Small's maple creams were especially popular.

Walker Bins.

Stuart Watson & Co., Winnipeg, agents for the Walker bins, had a splendid exhibit in a favorable location. The goods of several Winnipeg firms were displayed in the silent salesmen, and on the shelves. The exhibit was an object lesson to visiting dealers, and many stopped to examine the up-to-date fixtures displayed.

Ridgway's Teas.

Richards & Brown, the Winnipeg agents for Ridgway's teas, had an attractive booth devoted to a display of this high-class line. The Ridgway teas are rapidly gaining popular favor in the West, and the display at the exhibition interested many new friends.

Purity Flour.

The products of the big St. Boniface mill of the Western Canada Four Mills Co. were well displayed in a large booth near the entrance of the Manufacturers' Building. Winnipeggers are proud of the big mill across the river, and "Purity" and the other brands of flour made by this firm are very popular in the West.

Jell-o.

An interesting display of the Jell-o products of the Genesee Pure Food Co. attracted the attention of many housewives attending the exhibition. Winnipeg ladies were introduced to these products at the Pure Food Show recently, and many from out of town were interested in the display at the exhibition.

Drewry's.

A handsomely illuminated display of Drewry's aerated waters made a pleasing picture for the eye. The Drewry products are well known throughout the entire West.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Hendery, of Rose & Laflamme, returned to Montreal after a short holiday.

F. C. Harp, one of Brantford's energetic grocers, made a pleasant call at the Toronto office of The Grocer on Tuesday. Mr. Harp, with Arthur Coulbeck, president of the Brantford Grocers' Association; James Bros., another grocer, and A. Wiles, were on the way back from a jolly holiday trip by boat up to Mackinaw. The way these brothers in the trade fraternize speaks well for relations in the grocery business in Brantford.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

During the past week the cheese market has been watched with considerable interest by all parties interested in the buying and selling of the article. In some quarters there appears to be an idea prevalent that a decline will take place, but more are of the opinion that there is going to be an advance before anything else.

In the meantime English houses seem to be of the opinion that our quotations are too high to be attractive, and they are not coming forward as numerously as of yore, and, as a result, shipments are not nearly what they should be at this season.

Illustrating conditions one finds, upon looking up the figures, that receipts since the opening of the present season amount to 768,541 boxes, while shipments total but 683,575 boxes. The balance, which is still unaccounted for, is 84,966 boxes. Against this one may compare the season of 1907. Up to the corresponding date, receipts of new cheese had been 909,938 boxes, while exports amounted to 818,486 boxes. The reason ascribed for the falling off this year is the high prices which have prevailed, and which have frightened English buyers, who have been anticipating lower figures which do not seem any nearer realization as the season progresses.

Holdings on the other side are not large by any means, and exports going forward these days represent purchases for actual needs.

Owing to the high price of the finest cheese in England, and the number of short sales, there has been lately a phenomenal demand for inferior grades.

Quotations run from 11¾c to 12⅛c. Old cheese is becoming quite scarce, as are also twins.

Receipts of cheese last week amounted to 90,511 boxes, against 103,456 boxes same period last year. Shipments from Montreal last week amounted to 76,253 boxes, against 73,803 boxes same week in 1907. From Quebec last week 2,044 boxes were shipped.

Dealers report a fair local trade.

Butter has commanded just about as much attention as has cheese, and those who handle both are almost as uncertain of the future of the butter market as they are of the coming situation in cheese. As in the case of cheese, prices demanded of Old Country houses are too high to warrant much trade. For finest creamery butter exporters are asking between 23½c and 24½c, while they will not sell dairy under 20c, while others will not part with holdings even at these figures.

Markets are firm here and abroad. Our make is small when compared with last year, receipts so far being 189,113 packages, against 199,733 packages. Weekly receipts are also lighter, being, last week, 16,901 packages, against 20,026 packages corresponding week in 1907.

Owing to the high price demanded for feed last fall it is probably only natural to expect that receipts would not be as large this season as last. In the first place, the number of cows possessed by farmers is not as large as formerly, many hundreds having been sold, as it was found too costly to stable them for the winter. Those cows which were carried through were not fed properly, and as a result are not yielding the milk this year that they would under ordinary circumstances.

The make of butter in England is fairly good, but there is, nevertheless, a lot of trade which desires Canadian butter, and a certain amount must be secured from the Dominion which is not procurable elsewhere.

This demand, coupled with the local consumption, firms up the market wonderfully, and prices are maintained at a high level they would not reach otherwise. Still, present figures are considered reasonable enough, under existing circumstances.

Shipments of butter from Montreal last week were little more than quarter what they were the same week a year ago, being but 2,621 packages, against 11,344 packages same week 1907.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, July 29.

The situation among Canadian packers is a little easier this week from various reasons, though business still continues very good.

For the first, the British market, which has been offering up to 61 shillings for three or four weeks, is off a little, being easier in tone, and prices now being on a basis of from 58 to 60 shillings. This will tend to some slight extent to put a brake on the extensive export business which has been done during the past month. The outlook, however, continues good and large business will probably be done with this market until fall at least.

The Danes, although busy with harvest operations, are sending over about 35,000 weekly to the British market. Last week their "killings" aggregated 36,000. United States packers sent over 16,000 boxes. This has supplied the demand and a little more and the easier feeling is evident in consequence.

For the first time in several months the local packers are getting enough hogs; that is, at the prevailing prices. Farmers and drovers seem to be working together to get all they can out of the packer as is quite natural, and in consequence, prices have been getting up about as far as was possible. The high prices have brought out a better supply of hogs and the factories have been offered rather more than they cared to buy. This accounts for a little slump of 10 cents this week, $6.65 to $6.70 being offered f.o.b. and $7.05 off cars at the factory. The hogs coming in are of fairly good quality.

The situation in United States markets for the past week is given in the following summary from the New York Journal of Commerce: "The speculative trading in hog products has been less active and the feeling weak and prices generally lower due to further liquidation, and the outside trading somewhat smaller. There was some pressure to sell by the local crowd, as well as selling by packers and commission houses. The receipts have been fairly liberal and prices of live hogs lower. The general buying was by the short interests during the entire week. The estimated stocks of lard and pork at Chicago showed accumulations since July 1, while ribs a small decrease. In cottonseed oil the market during the week has been unsettled and prices very irregular, being at the lowest early in the week, but closing at the highest. There has been quite a large trade under heavy liquidation, while the buying was speculative as well as by shorts and refiners."

EGGS—Freer in supply, but lighter demand is now the feature. Cooked and smoked meats, which are going freely during this hot spell, is held accountable for the lack of things doing among eggs. In the face of these facts, however, prices remain unchanged from a week ago. Extra choice new laid eggs are at 24 cents, and for good eggs between 21 and 23 cents is asked.

CHEESE—Another quiet week is passing. Newspaper reports tell of sales on the cheese boards at various points in the Province at pretty fair prices. Locally, however, quotations are the same as a week ago.

BARBADOES GRANTS A PREFERENCE.

Will Favor Canadian Trade if We Give Advantages on Sugar.

The Barbadoes Legislature has passed a law giving Canada a preference of 20 per cent. on flour, cheese, cordage, butter, hay, oats, peas, fish, lumber (other than pitch pine), bacon, hams, iron and steel nails, spikes, rivets and clinches, shingles, bran, sulphate of ammonia and mixed manure, soap, beans, horses, boots and shoes, fish and meat (canned), iron or steel bars, hops and rods, on condition that the Canadian preference is altered so as to leave a clear $6.72 per ton in favor of West Indian sugar, as against sugars from foreign countries. Canada's trade with Barbadoes is only 7½ per cent., the United States 40 per cent., Great Britain 45 per cent. The new tariff extends to goods from all British countries, and will benefit Great Britain at the expense of the American manufacturer quite as much as, if not more than, Canada.

THE HIGH-WATER MARK in Low-water Times

That's the record of

SHREDDED WHEAT

to August, 1908.

While other cereal concerns have cut down advertising and show a decreased business, Shredded Wheat is advertising more extensively than ever and shows an increase in sales of many thousand cases over the sales for corresponding month of 1907.

The reason? You know it if you know Shredded Wheat. No other cereal food can match it for strength-giving, body-building material, for economy, or for wide culinary uses.

No other grocer makes a larger profit on Shredded Wheat than YOU do—no "deals," no premiums, no "sugar," no bribes. The same old policy—A Square Deal for a Square Dealer.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Flour Dull and Unchanged—Oatmeal Declined in East, Advanced in Ontario —New Wheat Coming in.

The flour market is practically featureless this week with prices on the same basis and demand, both at home and abroad, poor. Both millers and buyers seem to be in a waiting attitude and it seems scarcely likely that anything new will develop until something definite regarding the western wheat crop is evidenced. Some small lots of flour are going forward to Great Britain but the amount is scarcely large enough to warrant any attention.

Rather an anomalous condition exists in regard to oatmeal. In Montreal a decline of 25 cents occurred, probably as the result of dull business. In Ontario, on the other hand on account of large purchases of oats by United States buyers and small deliveries, an advance of 15 cents on rolled oats and oatmeal has been made. The outlook in the cereal market is quite encouraging.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—There is but little going on in flour circles. Prices remain about the same while demand locally is poor at present, though considerable inquiry for new crop flour exists and prospects are that very satisfactory orders will be placed. Export demand is practically nil.

THE BEAN CROP OF 1908.

Prospects Better Than Last Year With Acreage 20 Per Cent. Greater.

Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

Chatham, July 28.—It is a little early yet to estimate the results of the bean crop of 1908 with anything like precision. Nevertheless, the present outlook is for a very good crop. Conditions this year contrast noticeably with those of last year. Last year the beans had many obstacles to contend with. This year conditions have been favorable almost from the start.

Last year about 50,000 acres were planted. Late frosts in the spring, and the heavy frost of July 2, wrought considerable damage, so that not more than 40,000 acres were harvested. Furthermore, the crop averaged little more than 15 bushels to the acre. The crop of 1907 went short about 200,000 bushels. At the present writing old beans are very scarce.

Buyers, however, look for a heavy crop this year. They state that the acreage is 20 per cent. more than last year, and prospects are good. The plant is so strong, however, that the harvest may take place a little later this year. The rains of the past two weeks have had a very favorable effect upon the crop, being just what the beans needed to bring them along.

There are practically no late beans this year. Last year, on account of the late spring frosts, many acres were replanted and, ripening late, suffered from the early autumn frosts. The bean crop this year seems, however, to be pretty uniform, and the chances are that practically the whole crop will ripen before the fall frosts commence. The late spring frosts of 1908, such as they were, did little if any damage, except possibly in the immediate vicinity of Ridgetown.

The harvest commences the latter part of September, by October 1 new beans will be on the market. With dry weather through the time of the bean harvest, a pretty good quality of bean may be looked for, as they are growing pretty evenly in the fields.

A movement is said to be on foot in Ottawa to establish a co-operative grocery store among the members of the civil service in the city. Recently a civil service co-operative coal company was formed with a view to enabling civil servants to secure their coal at cost. It is now proposed to follow this up with a similar arrangement to supply provisions to members of the association at cost, or as near cost as possible.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Height of the Raspberry Season—Im ported Staples Still to the Fore—Canadian Potatoes Make Their App earance—Home-grown Cabbage Being Exported—Pike a nd Pickerel Plentiful.

The height of the berry season is reached this week, and before another week comes round raspberries will have begun to drop from the market. This has been a very good season for the quantity of berries offering, and the quality, too, especially of the late arrivals, has been good. There was some dissatisfaction with the early berries, due to too much sun and too little rain, but the seasonable weather of late greatly improved those now offering.

Imported watermelons, peaches, pears and bananas are the best of the other fruit lines placed on the market, Some Delaware grapes have been offered in eastern Canada, but the season is yet too early for them. Lemons are going off, but pineapples have taken a new lease of life.

Canadian potatoes and tomatoes are beginning to arrive rather freely, and judging from appearances are of good quality. Home-grown cabbage is being exported to the south. All other lines are fair in supply and demand.

Fish lines are better in supply than for some time past, and pike and pickerel from the fresh water are coming along freely. Eastern Canada cannot get enough dore and dealers are sending in frozen stock.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—With the advance of the summer season all fruits are becoming more plentiful and prices are dropping to a more reasonable level. Each week some new fruit is arriving. Some Delaware grapes were offered early this week at $4 a box, which is an extremely fancy figure. They were not up to a great deal in quality and trade was small. The first Lake St. John blueberries, which are widely known and appreciated, arrived Monday and quotations for 18 to 20-quart boxes are around $2 to $2.25. Raspberries continue to sell at reasonable figures. Lemons are in better demand. The New York market has been advancing and local prices have been stiff in sympathy. Pineapples are scarce and prices are firm. New apples are on the market, while Montreal melons are also new. Plums and pears are lower owing to increased receipts.

VEGETABLES—Grocers are displaying a great deal of interest in the vegetable market these days, and it is well worth watching. Increased receipts are resulting in lower prices and trade is quite brisk. Quite a lot of cabbage and other Canadian vegetables have been exported lately. Cabbage is a good seller at the moment. Horse radish is nearly done and the market is not well supplied. Dry weather experienced recently has resulted in a scarcity of spinach, which is firm in price. There are few onions held locally except the early spring growth. Montreal tomatoes at $1 a gin box are selling freely. On the whole, trade is most satisfactory.

FISH—Fresh lake fish is scarce and demand for these lines is good considering the season. Dore is particularly scarce, and dealers are shipping the frozen stock instead. Halibut might be arriving in better quantity also to suit dealers. Supplies of brook trout have not increased. The season for eastern fresh salmon will close to-morrow, so that trade in this line is just about finished. Market cod is reasonable in price this week and some nice orders have been booked. Cod is in good supply as is also haddock. Little business is being done in smoked fish. American lobsters are on the market, but the price is a little too high, owing to duty, to interest the grocery trade very much.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—If there is any one outstanding feature in the fruit line this week it is the quantity of raspberries offering. Every commission man has his full quota of this small fruit and every box looks fine and well worth the price asked. White currants are off. Though their season is not yet done, very few of them find their way to the local market. Thimbleberries look sound and well, but are scarce, as, too, are gooseberries and black currants. Cooking cherries are cheap, but late Montmorencies are firm at a high price.

Imported staple lines, California peaches, plums and pears, are good stock, and bananas and watermelons are good sellers. Cantaloupes remain stationary and could hardly be otherwise seeing that there is a duty of three cents on every one coming into the country. Old lemons are going off, and oranges are firming up, only good stock being offered. Pineapples are again in evidence and appear to retain their popularity.

VEGETABLES—Old potatoes are done. Love or money could not obtain any; but splendid red-skinned Ontarios are being offered in bushel boxes. Imported Delawares are down to $4 a barrel, but some fine stock is offered at $4.15 and $4.25. Imported tomatoes are still on the market, but the demand seems to be for the home-grown variety, which are put up in baskets. A HINT TO YOUR CUSTOMERS.

Here's a little item which grocers can make a good deal of advantage of in more than one way by pointing it out to their housewife customers. Its possibilities will reveal themselves at once:

"It is said that whole cloves sprinkled among furs and woolens, and under carpets and rugs, will be found as effective, if not superior, to the ill-smelling moth preparations. And if the housekeeper who superintends the canning of her fruit will put a quarter-teaspoonful of whole cloves on top of the thin cloth which many wisely place over the hot fruit before putting on the lid, she will not be annoyed with the molding of her fruit."—National Magazine.

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Things the Clerk and Merchant Ought to Know Regarding the Goods He Sells.

Stilton Cheese.

Stilton cheese derives its name from the village of Stilton, in Huntingdonshire, Eng., where it was first manufactured near the beginning of the eighteenth century. Though the process of making was considered a secret at that early date, it was not very long before the method became pretty widely known, not merely in the county of Huntington, but in the neighboring county of Leicester. It is the latter county which is to-day the seat of the largest production of this cheese.

The original secret of its successful production was the addition of a considerable percentage—from 30 to 45 per cent.—of cream to the milk. This addition of cream was long considered absolutely necessary in order to obtain the real Stilton flavor, yet nowadays excellent Stilton is produced without such addition, and the secret once rigidly held as indispensable to the successful manufacture is now proved to have been little more than a mere accident to the process. There is, in fact, no one recipe for the manufacture. Every Stilton cheese maker must follow certain general methods, but given these, many individual variations in detail are carried out without in any way causing deterioration in either quality or flavor. It is generally considered that the best district for its production is around Melton Mowbray, in Leicestershire, though excellent cheese is also produced in the neighboring districts of Staffordshire and Derbyshire.

Cheese-making, as a rule, begins toward the end of March, the 25th being held to be the earliest date on which it should be begun, and the production continues steadily to the end of September.

The milk used must be that of cows fed on good pastures, and it is on this point that the special advantages of particular localities are supposed to tell upon the character of the article produced.

The salts in the soil of Central England are supposed to have some more or less mysterious effect upon the herbage there produced, and this again has an effect on the mold which gives to the Stilton cheese the particular character and flavor.

Two different systems are followed. In one, two curds are obtained separately from the morning milk and evening milk, and the two are mixed as two different curds. In the other system only one lot of curd is produced. The latter method is more likely to produce a uniform cheese, and it is doubtless on this account that the two-curd system has fallen somewhat out of practice, for it was found that the cheese was often uneven in color owing to the earlier milk used developing too great an acidity because of the waiting necessary.

The mixing of the two curds was said to secure conditions more favorable for the development of the blue mold, but with the one-curd system these can equally well be insured by having the curd sufficiently moist.

The following are the points that should be present in a good Stilton:

1. A brown crinkled surface.
2. The cheese should give on being pressed.
3. On being cut the mold should show separate from the white, and the more numerous the veins the better the cheese.
4. The mold should have a rich taste, yet the flavor of the blue mold should not predominate.
5. It should be moist and rich and should possess good keeping qualities.—Retail Grocers' Advocate.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

The Merchant Is Held Responsible

It is a curious fact that, when a woman buys Canned Goods that prove unsatisfactory, the blame is at once placed on the dealer—not upon the packer. It is equally true that, when the Canned Goods prove to be of high quality the merchant is given the credit. "They have such good things at Blank's," is the story then. Are you receiving praise or blame for the goods you handle ? On the answer depends the future of your business.

Canadian Canners' Peas Are Proving Their Worth Every Day

Our celebrated brands will enable you to build upon a firm foundation. They will bring you the best trade in your community. Recommend our Grade No. 2 SWEET WRINKLE PEAS, and the repeat orders will give you genuine satisfaction. They cost the merchant very little more than Grade No. 4, but on account of high quality can be sold at a good margin of profit.

Our Canned Peas are packed in four grades as follows:—

Grade No. 1—Extra Fine Sifted Peas
Grade No. 2—Sweet Wrinkle Peas
Grade No. 3—Early June Peas
Grade No. 4—Standard Peas.

BRANDS:—"Canada First" (Aylmer), "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe" (Bowlby), "Auto" (Canadian Canners), "Kent," "Lynnvalley" (Simcoe), "Maple Leaf" (Delhi), "Lion" (Boulter), "Thistle" (Brighton), "Grand River" (Lalor), "White Rose" (Lakeport).

Canadian Canners, Limited

Hamilton, Canada.

When You are Ordering Canned Goods it'll pay you to specify

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND

Because it's the brand that puts quality before everything. Every piece of fruit and vegetable used is selected for its soundness—not for its price. Our methods of packing are right up-to-date. We know how to pack and preserve the natural appetizing flavor of our selected stock. Moreover, we can suit you in the matter of price. Just ask for quotations on Old Homestead Brand before placing your order elsewhere.

MESSRS. EBY-BLAIN, Limited, Ontario Agents

"MAKE A GOOD ARTICLE AND TELL THE PEOPLE OF ITS GOODNESS, AND THE PEOPLE WILL BUY IT AND CONTINUE TO BUY IT."

This is the most concise, comprehensive sentence that could be used to outline the principle upon which we have always transacted business. Real confidence in the goods purchased is created by one factor only—true worth. The fact that we advertise the goodness of is proof of the confidence we have in its worth. During the past seventeen years, without a single exception, we have had the most enormous increases in sales, thus proving conclusively the increasing confidence of the consumer in "SALADA." This is alone due to the fact that our aim has always been QUALITY FIRST.

PICKLING SPICE

We are offering exceptional values in high-grade Pickling Spice. Each of the varieties is specially selected with a view to the best results, so that it can be recommended to the most fastidious trade.

Sold either in bulk or packages.

Our "White Swan," glass front, ¼-lb. package is unequalled as a 10c. line. 4 doz. in a case.

The man who first tried to catch a fly, did it without and the fly got away. That's why we are bothered with millions of them to day. BROWN'S "FLY COIL" is the thing to catch these millions with, because the flies can't leave it alone and can't get away from it, and it will catch more of these dangerous pests to the square inch than any other device extant. It is neat, hygienic and effective. Anyone can see its good points at a glance, so it sells "like hot cakes." Hang one up and try it on your flies and your trade.

A Bumper Crop in the West

MR. MANUFACTURER, do you realize what this year's bumper crop in the West may mean to you?

It is the biggest crop in the history of the country and it will be worth a pile of money—much more than any previous crop.

The West will have plenty of money to spend and there will be a strong demand for high class goods.

Now is the time to push your goods in the West and develop a trade that will grow from year to year.

We can help you, as we have the selling organization to place your goods on the market.

We are established in Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton, the three principal wholesale centres of the West. We can take your goods on commission basis, store them at these three points and distribute them to the wholesale trade.

To do business in the West it is essential that you should have live intelligent representation on the ground.

Leaves a nice margin of profit, and is of a quality which stimulates business.

How important it is for the retail merchant to be as sure as possible that the tea that he recommends is the very best that he can procure.

Some of his customers will insist on getting certain brands, which the merchant doubtless knows are not as good as some other one; but some of these customers have very decided opinions and must be humored. The great majority, however, are influenced by his opinion, and these are the very ones whose trade he is most likely to hold providing they find that the goods he recommends are always to be relied on.

Tea is one of the most important of the many things sold in a grocery or general store. You know from experience probably that a customer who complains about tea soon complains about other things and is dissatisfied all round.

You have also found that some customers who did not like the tea you recommended did not complain but went to another store when they needed to buy again.

To come right down to the point. Do you think it pays to push or recommend any tea until you are satisfied yourself that it is the best tea on the market?

Nothing but the best is good enough for your customers.

Now I believe Red Rose Tea is the best tea on the Canadian market and I believe any independent expert judge of tea will back up this opinion.

If you are not selling Red Rose Tea and feel that the best is none too good, order a sample case. Then form your own opinion, don't be persuaded one way or the other by my travelers or anyone else. Judge for yourself.

If it is the best you will continue to buy it; if it isn't, you won't.

Drummers' "Snack" a Glorious Success

A Host of Ontario Travelers Had the Time of the Year at the Annual Jollification at Alton Last Friday and Saturday—The Community Takes a Holiday and Welcomes the Visitors With Open Hearts, Homes and Pantries—A Unique Concert, an Enjoyable Banquet and a day of Novel Sports Make up an Occasion Long to be Remembered.

Isn't it bully, my friend of the grip,
In the summer's mid, to let things rip,
To run out there with the rest of the boys,
Shake hands all round, raise a deuce of a noise,
Meet " Father Bill " and have all the joys
Of the Drummers' Snack at Alton ?

Dr. Algie did a mighty wise thing when he chose that word "snack," with all its euphonious suggestiveness for the title of the most unique function or celebration or holiday or whatever it is, in the circle of Canadian commercial activity. It suggests a picnic, and the travelers certainly have it in both the usually-accepted and the slangy-meaning form, two days and a night of it—at least most of the night. It suggests a feast of some kind, and feasts there certainly are of various kinds—physical, provided in the generous helpings of country ham and eggs, and apple pie and other things, ad infinitum which the good ladies of Alton deal out in brobdingnaggian batches to the hungry-for-country-stuff travelers ; mental, in the flow of art, humor and fun in the proceedings of the concert, the banquet and the sports, and general in the glorious, satisfying and never-to-be-forgotten outing.

The "Sunshine" Spreaders at Play.

"A bunch of sunshine-spreaders," some one has called the Canadian commercial travelers. Get a hundred or so of these together, with the good humor and fun they have been storing up for a year fairly oozing out of them like cold blackstrap out of the bung of a molasses barrel, with all their troubles and little differences laid aside for the nonce, and in surroundings which could not well be more applicable and you have some idea of the event—the seventh annual Drummer's Snack, which ran itself joyously off in the little town of Alton last Friday and Saturday.

Well, the snack of 1908, like all the other snacks of other years, is gone. It only remains for us to chronicle some of the special features, to bring back to the minds of those who were there some of the things that were laughed at and to give those who were not so blessed some idea of what their traveler friends in Ontario do when they set out to enjoy themselves.

The Grand Entree.

The official opening of the great event came on Friday evening with the arrival of the trains from the east and west. The afternoon train from Toronto bore, as usual, a large quota of care-free drummers, who on the way ran over the memorable incidents of last year's outing and made plans as to the things that were to be done during the present one. At Inglewood the always-large and always-jolly Hamilton contingent was picked up and from there on the train was a place of merriment.

As usual, too, practically all of Alton's population was on hand at the station to extend the usual hearty and vociferous welcome. The band was there in the same conspicuous red suits, the daintily-dressed little girls were there, with and without their mothers, though the mothers were there all the same. The young ladies were there, with their sweetest smile of welcome, and in their very newest gowns, trying to pick out among the arrivals the chap they liked best last year. Last, but not least, the Algies were there, William, with a genial smile of welcome for the boys, who liked to come back, and the rest of the family with their hearts just as big and open as that of the father of the snack.

Of course, the usual procession was formed, with the band in front, then the contingent of little girls in white bearing the Snack banner, with the mystic device, "The Sample is Mightier than the Sword," and then the string of travelers and visitors. It was no mean procession, as it wound up the hill and along the main streets, and many visitors from towns considerably larger than Alton looked on with envious eyes.

At Camp Kilcare.

Camp Kilcare, a new cognomen for the concert tent, by the way, was the rendezvous, and on arrival the boys, most of whom had been waiting a couple of hours longer than usual for their supper, made a bolt for the "Cyclone cellar," where things many and various were provided.

We said the Snack was officially opened on Friday evening. In the afternoon, however, as a preliminary, a baseball match was pulled off between the town team and an aggregation organized from the early arriving drummers. Jack Wildfong undertook to hold the indicator, but ended up by pitching. Anyway, though no one can explain how, the game ended a tie, and with something resembling groans for the umpire.

Another Splendid Concert.

One of the biggest features of each year's Snack is the concert on Friday evening, and, as has been said on probably each succeeding year, "this was ahead of all those before." Anyway, the concert is popular for the people keep on coming, not only from Alton, but from all the country around, and it isn't at all to be wondered at, for from the standpoint of novelty and interest these concerts put a five-ring circus, elephants and all, in the shade.

The people began coming early, too, and by the time the supplies in the cyclone cellar had gone down—we mean, of course, in quantity—about fifty per cent. Camp Kilcare was filled (as the Hillsburg Beaver would say) with "the youth, the beauty, the elite and the aristocracy of the community." Indeed, the big tent was so well filled that its capacious folds bellied out with the joy of it all and an overflow meeting had to be camped out under the apple trees at the rear end where the man in the moon looked down and probably rejoiced with the rest that the great day of the year had come for Alton.

President Mike Malone, in accepted Snack regalia, viz., white pants, white shirt, white collar and black bow tie, in due time appeared on the stage and in a characteristically brief speech set the ball a-merrily rolling by calling on Wm. Algie, "the father of the Snack," to make the official welcome.

It must be rather a proud moment for Mr. Algie to look round on these gatherings year after year. Anyway, he fills the bill to perfection and gives a speech that makes one think things and the next minute explode with merriment. "You are a lot of splendid boys," he said, among a host of other good things, "and I am glad to see you come back year after year."

Toronto's Share of the Programme.

The first part of the concert was, as usual, of a highly artistic nature and though Donald McGregor, the travelers' old friend, could not be present, the programme was very high-class, thanks to the presence of some of the best musical talent Toronto and Hamilton can furnish. Vocal numbers were given by Mrs. Mabel Manley Pickard, whose reputation is national; by Miss Frances Wright, a rising young Toronto soprano with a pleasing voice; by Wilfrid Morrison, the well-known boy soprano, whose warbles and high c's and choir boy garb, took the audience, especially the little girls in the front seats, by storm; and by Will J. Reilly, one of the News' globe-trotting travelers, who must have been a source of considerable pleasure from a musical standpoint on the long way round. A couple of excellent violin solos were given by Roland Roberts, with Mrs. Roberts at the piano. But we mustn't forget Will White, who is always at the snack, is always very welcome, and who had most to do with preparing the Toronto end of the programme. Mr. White got the audience going on that sentimental little ditty of recent extraction, "When There Isn't a Girl About," and had sections of the audience and then the whole of it singing in a way he surely learned at the Torrey-Alexander meetings. Mr White's last number was a quick-change act in which he impersonated several famous characters, on whom the limelight has been thrown by recent events. E. R. Bowles was an efficient accompanist, though he worked under difficulties with one of those multiplied instrument attachments which turned on a tiny mandolin accompaniment when he wasn't looking.

In the intermission the Alton band, under the leadership of "Billy" Algie, played a somewhat heavy number which showed a good deal of ability. They helped also to keep the audience in good humor before the programme was begun.

Fun by the Hamilton Boys.

In the meantime, however, there were doings, fearful and wonderful in the spacious (?) dressing rooms behind the scenes. Brilliantly pink-cheeked maidens, with suspiciously male voices, coons (evidently of both sexes) and fat and thin figures, padded and unpadded, got mixed up so that they could scarcely be unravelled. In due time, however, the second part of the programme, labelled "Fun by the Hamilton Boys," which on account of the novelties and excellencies of former years, was anxiously looked forward to, was brought before the foot lights, or rather, in this case, head lights.

For originality and general all-round talent, those same Hamilton boys certainly carry off the palm. They could start off on a concert tour to-morrow and rake in shekels by pailfuls if people only knew them as they do in Alton. This, too, was about the idea of their stunt, which was in the form of a vaudeville act, staged in a way that would make the property man at Shea's or Bennett's turn blue with envy. To make the story short, "Bay" Hill, as the organizer of a traveling company, advertises for performers and these appear and give exhibitions of their turns.

The first, Prof. Ben Arthur, was engaged to punch the piano, an occupation which he certainly discharged with avidity, the melody handed out ranging from cakewalks to grand opera.

Sam Male, as Rastus, the coon servant, was the funniest thing on the stage, and provoked screams by his clever acting. He got outside the half of a big juicy watermelon about as fast as a steamshovel gobbles up a gravel bank. Billy Dore made a cracking fine Highlander, even to the rubber balls pasted to his calves on the inside of his white socks. Harry Eckstein did a turn as Madamoiselle something or other, an opera singer, and got off a couple of love songs in a falsetto soprano that would pass muster in the Mendelssohn choir. His make-up—rouge, corsets, hair net and all were as feminine as heart could wish and someone tells a story that a couple of the Alton boys wanted to kiss him or her, on his or her way up from the house to the tent. Billy Pringle came on in the varicolored garb of a freebooting Dago, with an Italian accent that surely was imported. One of the funniest stunts, though, was a burlesque boxing contest, put on by George and Charley Smye, the latter in Sol Waters' sixty-five-inch vest with a few yards of padding inside and a bristly whisker tacked to his chin to make a Dago of the Hebrew type. How many times Charlie slipped and landed on his soft, little stummick no one can say, but in the end, with a left uppercut jab around the back of the neck he put George out of business. Jim Mundie poured coffee for all the players out of an old tin pot and then putting the spout in his mouth made a big flute out of it. Mel Tufford made a good figure as "Cupid Hazen." Bob Cowan and Ed. Nally with a black face make up, stepped off a cakewalk in a way that would make your Aunt Liza look around some. The act closed with an exceedingly well-rendered burlesque on the "Choral From Attila," by Messrs. Eckstein, Mundie and Pringle.

This, with a heartily-sung "God Save the King," closed the first part of the evening's doings.

Pyrotechnics in Reality.

Things are never done by halves at this celebration, however. After the concert from a point on the hill just above the cyclone cellar a fusilade of rockets was fired off which burst just above the mill pond and threw a sort of rejoicing light on the Algie homestead and in spots lighted the townspeople homeward.

Next Was the Banquet.

The next order of business, or rather pleasure, for the evening was the banquet. This was something they didn't have last year so a good deal of interest was manifest. After everybody had seen someone else home and had come back, after the chairs had been brought down from the tent and after the piano had been transported from Camp Kilcare on a dray drawn by hilarious human steeds, the fun began. The president and Billy Colville had a hard time keeping the boys away from those fresh country good things while waiting for the guests of honor to arrive but by herculean efforts, threats and cajolings the thing was done.

Science Hall was set with three long tables in the form of the legs of an E with a short table of honor across the top. The centre table was filled with ladies, old, young and younger. At the table of honor were the artists who took part in the evening's programme, the officers of the club and a few friends and around the others the travelers and visitors filled in in the friendly manner which characterized the whole affair.

No, the banquet wasn't at all formal. From Mike Malone's grace, which no one was ready for, down to the last spasm of gratitude to the ladies, everything was free and easy, though once or twice a feeling of pathos crept in which only served to lend variety.

As a matter of course the first person at the table of honor was Wm. Algie, and, naturally, he was called on to reply to the first toast, "The Drummers' Snack Club." After a brief expression of the pleasure it gave him to see the members of the Snack family enjoying themselves again he introduced his friend Mr. Barnet, a visitor from Ohio.

A Tribute to the Snack.

Mr. Barnet is a humorist, born and bred, and he threw out joke after joke that set the audience agoing. Speaking seriously, though, he paid a fitting tribute to the pleasant relations evidently existing between Canadian commercial men stating that such a gathering as the Snack would be impossible in Ohio, where the salesmen would only stay away to steal each others' good customers and to play poker. The spirit of friendliness shown, he said, was a good index to the healthy conditions of Canadian commercial life.

Next three of the travelers, who trotted round the world on the News treat, were called for. Valentine Wells, of Brantford, told of how he was enjoying the Snack and Will Reilly did his part in a Scotch song where he rolled the r's so loud the hall rattled. Billy Colville was the third member of the trio but his turn came later.

Some Humorous Asides.

With interpolations of song and story things were going famously, though interruptions of various kinds came from outside where some choice and impatient spirits were preparing, seemingly for the grand awakening, with horns and drums. Every once in a while, too, the fire bell would tinkle. The first time this happened Billy Algie, jr., who was standing near the door, forgot for the nonce what was going on in town and made a jump for outside. When he got to the door he remembered. Things went along pretty steadily, however, in spite of all.

"Bay" Hill was called on to propose a toast to the assisting artists. His reference to the artists wasn't long, but he got started on one of his original and inimitable after-dinner speeches, this time bemoaning the growth of the "hand-me-down" foods citing a list of grievances which would make a man's hair fall out (Bay's thatch is still pretty thick) and blaming the grocers for wrecking happy homes, all of which aroused bursts of enthusiasm. E. R. Bowles and Will J. White ,both honorary members of the club, responded in behalf of the artists.

"Now, gentlemen," said Mike Malone, when Bay Hill got down, "charge your glasses and drink to the health of the past presidents." Mike would insist on having those glasses "charged," though to tell the truth there was mighty little by this time to charge them with. Anyway, the toast was honored most heartily and Billy Colville, Jim Hooper and John Charles each gave a few words in reply. John Charles made a cracking fine speech, giving President Malone some well-deserved eulogy for his work and stimulating the boys to better effort generally. Bob Keyes, another past president, was also called on, but had disappeared somewhere and couldn't be found. Then Jack Wildfong made a characteristic little speech and got down to the table to pound it in illustration of a funny story which brought out evidences of his German extraction.

At this point President Malone handed over the toast list to Billy Colville, who proceeded to get it over with in his usual energetic way.

Honors for the Press.

He referred very kindly to the press, mentioning particularly The Canadian Grocer, and said that undoubtedly the papers had done a good deal to remedy the travelers' problems. The toast was responded to by E. J. Moore, editor of The Grocer, W. Hobbes, of the Toronto News; W. Hull, of the Erin Advocate and W. J. McGuire, of the Orangeville Banner.

The Last to the Ladies.

As usual, the last toast was to the ladies. This was drunk heartily enough but the toast master had a big time in getting anybody to give a really capable reply. Harry Coffin, Harry Eckstein and Billy Meen all tried their hand, but it remained for Mr. Barnet to put on the climax with the following: To their sweetness we give love, to their beauty admiration, and to their Merry Widows —the whole sidewalk.

Robt. Algie, the hard-working home secretary, spoke seriously and appreciatively of the pleasure it was for him to work for the Snack. "I believe there is good stuff in every man," he said. "It only remains to find it out and this is one of the ways of doing it.'

The Midnight Jamboree.

This, with a hearty "God Save the King," closed the official proceedings of the evening at about 2.48 a.m. Then the real fun commenced. The midnight serenade is one of the real features of the Snack. The visiting travelers, old and young, for once in the year, dropped their dignity in the street and did the very thing they would lick their boys for—if they had 'em—paraded the town from "Wm.'s" to "Robt.'s," and from one end to the other, calling at the principal houses, paying particular attention to the ministerial residences as well as to the cyclone cellar, singing, shouting, beating the band's big drum, ringing the fire alarm, etc., etc., etc., while the populace took it all calmly and even seemed to enjoy it. About 4 a.m. the biggest part of the band of revellers had tired themselves out and quietness reigned, to last for a few hours at least.

The people of Alton are certainly strong examples of hospitality. They give their rooms up to the visiting drummers and leave their doors open for any chance visitor who perchance has not found a bunk elsewhere.

Getting Back to Business.

Active operations opened again about 10.30 a.m. next morning, when the members of the club, full of good country breakfasts and showing no evidences of the evening's jamboree except a more friendly feeling toward their brethren and the world generally, met in Science Hall to pass the business of the year and to elect the new officers.

The routine business was run through with all facility the reports showing a good substantial balance on the club's books and affairs generally in a thoroughly satisfactory condition.

Several telegrams were read from enthusiastic members who were mighty sorry they were not able to be present and the meeting proceeded to the election of officers.

The New Officers.

This went forward very smoothly. For president, Bob Asher was named and was at once unanimously elected with very flattering comments. Bob has been one of the hardest workers and most faithful workers of the club, and the honors are well deserved. In his inaugural address Bob said he would rather be at the head of the club than be president of the United States. With the executive elected he was sure the Snack would show improvement again next year. "Bay" Hill, who has always worked like a Canadian beaver for the success of the Hamilton end of the club, was unanimously placed in the vice-president's chair. In the same way Jack Wildfong was elected Toronto secretary and Geo. Smye the Hamilton secretary. The office of home secretary and treasurer went as usual. "That's a life job for Bob Algie," say the boys. And they're right for no one could and would do the work half so well.

The executive committee for Hamilton is composed as follows: Geo. Peen, Mel. Tufford, Chas. Smye, P. Smith, Harry Eckstein, Avery Smith, W. Dore, H. S. Welch, W. Mills, J. Wilkinson, C. Kirkpatrick and B. Arthurs.

The Toronto executive is made up of G. F. Campbell, Walter Scott, C. C. Weese, P. McIntosh, W. Meen, Tom Goucester, Will Whyte, W. G. Riley, Donald McGregor, C. Silver, E. R. Bowles.

THE LADIES' COMFORT SOAP RACE.

Proceeding again to general business it was decided that a letter of condolence should be sent to Mrs. Ritchie, of Orangeville, whose late husband was one of the club's most esteemed members.

The following gentlemen were named as honorary members: W. G. Reilly, W. Pringle Roland Roberts, J. B. Mundie, E. J. Moore, W. Hobbes and W. J. McGuire.

Enthusiastic Supporters.

This closed the business of the day and adjournment was made to the baseball field where the Alton team was playing an interesting game with the nine from Belwood. The presence of an attractive crowd of very enthusiastic supporters seemed to rattle rather than assist the Alton team, for they went to pieces rather badly a couple of times and let the boys from Belwood get an unreachable lead. The score was something like 13—9, but to hear and see those Alton girls and some Toronto ones, too, "rooting" was really better fun than watching the game.

The last and to many the biggest feature of the Snack is the afternoon of sports, with always something new in evidence and with enough fun on tap to do an ordinary man for weeks.

Shortly after scheduled time the usual procession formed at Science Hall, and with the hard-worked and always-welcome band at the head marched down to the new town park, where the sports were held. One of the advertised features of the parade was a rickshaw brought from Japan. The vehicle was there all right—in Billy Colville's pocket. While the costumes were perhaps not so elaborate nor so ridiculous as last year still the parade presented a pretty satisfactory appearance. One of the accompanying engravings gives a pretty fair idea of its features.

Arrived at the park the fun began with an indoor baseball game played outside, with about fifteen on each side. The features of this were Sol Waters' actions on 1st, the difficulty of keeping the teams down to even numbers and the grist of white duck trousers that were made ready for the wash in sliding to second. The game kept on merrily till the other things began, and then interest fell off.

The baby show, as usual, was a barrel of fun, and Billy Colville managed the event, with the utmost sang froid imaginable. The babes were a pretty chubby-looking lot, too, as may be seen in the photograph shown here. The prizes were awarded as follows: 1st, Mrs. James Algie; 2nd, Mrs. J. Burke; 3rd, Mrs. W. Alexander; 4th, Mrs Robert Dolson.

The first prize winner is a grandson of the father of the Snack and will, it may safely be assumed, be a future Snack secretary.

The ladies' Comfort Soap race, which is also illustrated on these pages, was one of the best events of the day. The only trouble about it was in picking the winners in a particularly close finish. One or two of the boys made enemies for life by their selection. The winners were as follows: 1, Miss Alexander; 2, Mrs. Morrison; 3, Miss Smith; 4, Mrs. Burke; 5, Miss Reid; 6, Mrs. Roberts; 7, Miss Neilly,; 8, Miss Young; 9, Miss Webwood.

The Blue Ribbon Tea broom ball game was another event which took the crowd's fancy. Though the play was very active there was no score, The game was called and the prizes were divided. The teams were composed as follows:

No. 1—Mrs. Roberts, captain; Mrs. Dorrington, Hazel Mason, Ethel Dale, Lorena Standish, Miss Wellwood, Miss Norris.

No. 2—Lottie Mason, captain; Miss Alexander, Miss Neilly, Mrs. McLaughlin, Mrs. Lovell, Miss Hemsworth, Miss Campbell.

The tug of war was to have been between the married and single travelers, but not enough single men could be gathered in to make up a team, so they had to choose up in the good old-fashioned way. The following bunch of heavy-weights won easily: Glositer, Meen, Smye, Scott, Weese, Male, Smith.

The other events, with the various winners, were as follows:

Professional Artists' Race — 1, W. Dore; 2, Ed. Nally; 3, H. Eckstien; 4, W. Morrison.

Patterson's Chocolate Race, young ladies—1, Clara Chatters; 2, Lerena Standish; 3, Hazel Mason.

Charlie Petch, the gritty little Toronto long distance man, did an exhibition mile around the edge of the field. The going was pretty poor but the time was quite fair. Later an Alton boy with some local reputation for speed made a try at Petch's time, but dropped behind by about thirty seconds.

The prize for the most modest man was deservedly awarded by popular vote of the ladies to P. McIntosh, Toronto.

The most popular lady visitor was judged to be Miss Aggie Algie, of Toronto.

The hardest-worked official turned out to be Robt. Algie, Alton.

By the time this lengthy list of events was disposed of the sun was getting well around in the west, warning of the approach of train time. After the last event the crowd made a rush for home, the Snack uniforms disappeared and packing-up began.

Train time found just as big a crowd at the station as had been there the evening before, but oh how much had happened since. It wasn't a bit peculiar either, that everybody seemed to be on considerably better terms than at the arrival twenty-four hours before. With a host of good-byes and farewell songs the train pulled out, and the Drummers' Snack of 1908 was over.

Nibbles From the Snack.

What a jolly, carefree lot of boys they were. Never a thought of opposition or cutting prices or stealing sample rooms.

"Laugh and grow fat" seems to be effective with a good many of the club men. With John Charles, Sol Waters, Mel Tufford, Bob Keyes, C. A. Weese and a number of other 200 pounders the recipe seems to work famously.

Billy Colville is a wonder at getting things going. The way he ran those events off, without a hitch any place, was a marvel.

Jack Wildfong carried off the prize for selling the largest number of buttons with a record of fifty. Bob Asher was next.

Wonder how the ministers liked the serenading? They certainly got it good and heavy.

Some one says that when the prize for the baby show was awarded last year Jim Algie, jr., remarked, "Wait till next year and I'll show them something." Congratulations, Jim, you certainly made good.

The way the Alton people let you wander through their houses after midnight is a wonder and is a mighty strong tribute to the behavior of the visitors in former years.

Taken all round Alton can boast about as nice a looking lot of girls as most towns thrice its size. There's some more coming up in a few years, too.

The hearty thanks of the press representatives are due to Billy Colville and the officers generally for a warm reception and mighty kind attention. Usually its a case of look out for yourself, but things were vastly different in Alton. Take 'em, Billy.

Geo. Peen got into a hot mix-up over that Comfort Soap race. He says no more of it for him.

One of the funniest things at the concert, and a view only one or two were favored with, was to see Mike Malone squatted down on his haunches behind the scenes in the tent, trying to read the next item on the programme by the flickering light of a tallow dip.

Sol Walters was pleased as a kitten (but what a comparison) when his son carried off a first in the boys' race. We are glad to see that Walters, junior, is following so closely in his father's footsteps so far as physical development is concerned.

How many do they stow away up at Wm. Algie's, anyway? Of course they've had a big family for some time but it couldn't touch Friday night's houseful.

John Charles carried his ham home as if he were a full-fledged family man. Who knows? It may come in useful before next Snack.

Bob Keyes and a couple of others deserve a big vote of thanks for the way they stayed in the prize tent and banded out parcels to the winners all afternoon. It's work like this that tells in the end.

The souvenir programme was well worked up and was quite worth carrying away. President Asher did a lot of good work here also.

Which were the happiest, the travelers with their wives or those without 'em? There's a problem for you.

Everyone was congratulating Amos Mason on his recently-achieved happiness. It's mighty well deserved, too, for she's a dear.

Everybody who said it was his first Snack said it wouldn't be his last. That's the way it seems to affect them all.

Those Hamilton boys can certainly sing. To hear them on the street at 4 a.m. one would think a bunch of choir boys from Westminster Abbey had broken loose.

How many wanted to do like the small boys and take a dip in the mill pond? Put on some swimming contests next year, Mr. President.

Did you notice, though, how few small boys there seemed to be in Alton. Seems to run the other way.

The new president's photo went astray somewhere in being forwarded to us and consequently his smiling face could not be reproduced. We'll use it again, though.

The refreshment tent on the grounds was a Mecca for many a thirsty youngster during the afternoon. It helped, too, to keep the sun off the baby show.

Alton's new park, though it will stand some trimming, is highly creditable for a town of its size. In time it may be made a beauty spot.

One didn't see all the good-byes that took place. They wern't all said at the station, by any means.

Mr. Barnet, you're a daisy Why don't you put all the funny things in a book?

The way that firebell and the big drum suffered ought to be called to the attention of the S.P.C.A.

The lunches served in the hall were much appreciated. Perhaps you saw Jack Wildfong carrying two plates of porridge in one hand and a loaf of bread, a plate of butter and a jug of milk in the other. But he doesn't do it at home.

The "cyclone cellar" was at its best on Friday night. Next day the attendance dwindled off some.

And shouldn't the Algie's be a pretty happy family? Everything heart could wish in surroundings and pleasures and enough work to keep them from getting into mischief.

Good-bye till next year!

WHAT TO DO IN AUGUST

Hints Which the Energetic Grocer Might Take Advantage of During the Mid-Summer Season—Keep the Store Cool and Push Timely Lines.

Did you ever get into a properly kept hardware store during the month of July or August? If you did the probabilities are that you spent sufficient time therein to cool off and rest yourself. It is often remarked that the hardware merchant keeps his store cooler and more comfortable in every way during the summer than does the grocer.

Those who criticize do not always take into consideration that there is a great difference between the two stores there being much more difficulty in keeping a grocery in condition than a hardware store.

Nevertheless, it is possible for the average grocer to run his store on lines which will result in keeping it cool and attractive during the extreme hot months, of which August is the worst.

There are some women who will not go near certain stores during the summer because it is so uncomfortable to shop in them. On the other hand, they patronize and advertise the store of the merchant who looks after and ensures the greatest possible comfort of his patrons. Therefore, it pays to look after this matter.

A few electric fans in different parts of the store are much appreciated during warm weather, while there are other devices which suggest themselves to the wide-awake retailer which will enable him to have a pleasant and attractive store at the time of year when trade is dullest and most effort must be put forth to keep up sales.

Soft Drinks in Demand.

Probably by this time you have sold a good many dozen bottles of soft drinks. How did you find the suggestion? A good one? If you keep soft drinks, aerated waters of all kinds, mineral waters and the like, on ice, and let people know you have them, you most assuredly will sell them during the warm months. One grocer in a good sized town has sold more lime juice so far this summer than twenty grocers in other places would sell in a year—simply because he has pushed the line. It is not too late to order a lot if you have nothing of this sort in stock. There will be demand during September as well as August.

Grocers conducting a store in a town which is a popular summer resort can very often run a small ice cream and refreshment parlor to good advantage. Of course, it is difficult to make anything out of this in a large town where there are several parlors.

The Month for Fruits.

August will be a great fruit month as it always is. Domestic fruits of nearly all kinds are obtainable in August, and prices are reasonable. Many grocers do not bother about melons at all. They are a very profitable line to handle and require little care as compared with grapes, strawberries and some other fruits. Canada is famed for its melons, which are used in the fashionable hotels and clubs in the chief cities of the United States. There is going to be a very satisfactory crop this year, and prices will be reasonable, so there is no reason why the average grocer should not do something handsome for himself. Raspberries will be plentiful during the month as will blueberries. The first apples will make their appearance, too, while plums, pear and other tree and bush fruits will arrive in quantity.

How Fruits Help.

A grocer with ideas can sell more than fruit when only fruit is requested. Naturally, much fruit is preserved, and sugar is required for this purpose. So are sealers. Why not advertise these two lines a little more strenuously than usual? There is not much profit in sugar, of course, but if it is possible to sell a lot of it there is a bigger margin. Sealers, pint and quart bottles allow the grocer a fairly good profit.

Have you noticed what a number of cereal manufacturers are advertising the deliciousness of their particular line when used with berries or other fruits? There is a suggestion in this. Do a little advertising along these lines in your own town—just suggesting the daintiness of such dishes for breakfast or luncheon, and see what results you will get. Many a business man eats little else at breakfast than some cereal and a cup of coffee. This is not much of a meal, but the appetite is not always good, or time is limited. Consequently, a suggestion for the improvement of the dish would be appreciated and when fruits are plentiful and reasonable in price is the time to make the suggestion.

Still Some Holiday Trade.

People are still going off on their holidays, and there is a good field for the grocer in preparing orders for camping, hunting and fishing parties. As the end of August draws near there will be more camping and fishing parties than ever, while as fall comes on hunters will depart in greater numbers. These people use any amount of canned goods, smoked meats, and such lines, and if the grocer makes a specialty of catering to this trade he soon gets a name for it, with the result that he secures much profitable cash trade. There is one firm in Montreal which has a reputation all over this continent for equipping holiday parties of this kind, and they make a barrel of money every year out of this trade.

City grocers will find that customers going but a short distance from home will be delighted if it can be arranged that they should continue to purchase their eatables from the family purveyor.

A Harvest Suggestion.

In the country, particularly in the West, preparations are now under way for the harvesting of a magnificent crop. This means that the farmers will be pretty busy. They will appreciate any assistance the grocer can give them. Let them know you are prepared to give them every satisfaction in expeditiously looking after their wants in foodstuffs. Many extra hands will be employed during harvest time, and this means many more mouths to feed. The grocer who gives the best service will secure the most trade.

Fly paper and fly pads are good sellers during these fly months, and it is worth while letting people know about them in case they should forget.

Keep On Advertising.

A great many grocers have the idea that there is no sense in advertising during July and August because they are "dead" months.

One very successful grocer says he advertises very strenuously during August. People then think that if others are buying—especially at bargain prices—they also should be in the field for purchases. This retailer says he notices no falling off in his trade during the warm summer months.

Pretty window displays are timely also. Every effort should be made to stimulate trade and these things help

Sporting Bulletins Interest.

There is a grocer in an Ontario town who bulletins during the summer all Saturday sporting events of local interest. He is the only retailer in town energetic enough to do it. It is surprising the number of people who drop around Saturday evening to see those bulletins, and many make purchases who would not otherwise have gone near the store. The local telegraph companies are very obliging in the matter of giving the results of big matches, and this is all that is necessary. Try out the idea.

EXCELLENT CANADIAN POSTERS.

During the annual meeting of the Associated Bill Posters' and Distributors of the United States and Canada at Detroit in July, a committee was appointed to judge as to the best poster exhibited by Canadian advertisers. After remarking that they had never seen posters which excelled those exhibited, the committee awarded first prize to the 16-sheet poster of St. George's Baking Powder, "for simplicity, strength and clever handling of the subject for efficient outdoor advertising."

PRUNE GROWING IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

A Very Profitable Industry in All Parts of the Province—Demand for Fresh Fruit Greater Than Supply—Compares Favorably With the Apple.

It may be news to a good many residents of Eastern Canada to know that prunes are grown largely in British Columbia, and that they are in fact one of the province's most profitable fruit crops. In view of this the following article from The Grocer's staff correspondent will be of particular interest:

Vancouver, July 24.—With the development of the fruit industry in British Columbia, perhaps no other tree is more widely grown in the province than the prune. Those who do not know the capabilities of the province may think that the prune is difficult of cultivation here, yet it is to be found in almost every orchard from the eastern boundary to the west coast of Vancouver Island. As a profitable tree, the Italian prune has few compeers, taking into comparison the different varieties of apple and the remunerative peach. At present in British Columbia, the demand for prunes is so great that curing and evaporating plants are practically unknown. When the supply becomes greater than the demand, then these plants will come into existence, but with the rapid growth of the prairie provinces it is not expected that this will be for a number of years yet. East of the mountains is the market for the products of British Columbia, and every effort is being made to retain the trade by growing good fruit, packing it with care, and shipping it with despatch.

Italian Variety More Profitable.

The Italian prune is the only variety profitably grown on a commercial basis in the province. The German and French prunes are grown to a limited extent, but these are of inferior quality, and more or less subject to a disease that attacks the plum family; namely, the brown rot, particularly in districts where the natural rainfall prevails, whereas the Italian prune is almost immune. This last variety may be found in the Kettle River Valley in the Boundary district, some of the finest trees being in the neighborhood of Grand Forks; in the Similkameen Valley, in the Okanagan, in the Kootenay, on the Lower Mainland and on Vancouver Island. It is very extensively grown, more than the peach, but hardly as much as the apple. It is superior for preserving purposes, because of its excellent flavor.

The prune crop is not quite as reliable from year to year as the apple, and the market is subject to more fluctuation. Generally speaking, the prune thus far in British Columbia has been bought up in the fresh state. Compared with the peach, the prune tree is more hardy and less subject to disease, resists the winter frosts better, and is much longer lived. Moreover, the peach is grown only in the irrigated districts, while the prune is successfully cultivated in all parts of the provinve where fruit is at all grown. The peach tree is out of date at 15 years, and is bearing its best when seven and eight years old, but the prune is as good as the average apple tree and bears well for twenty years and more if well taken care of.

Prunes and Apples.

Apples and prune trees may be said to come into commercial bearing when five years old. Since prunes are smaller the trees may be planted closer together, and for this reason when there is a full crop better returns may be secured from an acre than from apples. The life of apple trees vary according to variety. The usefulness of the yellow transparent expires at from ten to twelve years; the wealthy attains its highest perfection at from 12 to 18 years; the winter varieties, such as the Northern Spy, Grimes Golden, Yellow Newtown Pippin, Jonathan, Esopus Spitzbergen, etc., may be successfully cultivated from 20 to 40 years. Yet the prune is good as the best.

Of all the fruit this season, the prune has the only light crop. This was due to the continual cool weather. The warm weather was very late in coming, the season being almost a month behind, and the chilliness in the air just after the blossom was off caused the delicate fruit to fall off. There was no frost, but the cold was sufficient to kill the young prunes. It is on points like this that the apple has the better of the prune, but under favorable circumstances nothing grows better or yields greater profit.

CUSTOMERS LIKE ATTENTION.

Half the pleasure of the home-cooked dinner is due to the fact that the dear cook serves it herself. Restaurants lose on this point because we don't know and can't see the man behind who prepares the cuisine.

Isn't this the truth ?

Well, similar to this is the advantage enjoyed by the keeper of a small store who is able to get down on the floor and personally attend to the wants of his customers.

That's his trump card and he should play it to a finish.

Nearly everybody has elaborate ideas of his own importance and human nature appreciates being appreciated.

Customers appreciate the attention shown when they are taken care of by the storekeeper himself. It shows he takes an interest in them.

We all dislike a thoughtless man, particularly when he is thoughtless about us. But a storekeeper completely wins over prospective customers when he takes a personal interest in their purchasing.

Try it out !

Discretion is the better part of this interest the storekeeper should manifest. To become too much enthused and make a fuss over customers would be to send them away disgusted.

You know it.

Although the rose might smell as sweet if 'twere called an onion, the human animal called man takes particular delight in hearing the sound of his name.

He thinks it sounds well.

We're all alike in that.

It is but another species of the universal ego with which we are afflicted. Greet the customer by name, but be sure to pronounce that name correctly. It feels better to the customer than a pat on the back.

But pronouncing a man's name wrong is worse than making a poor guess at a baby's age.

All these are little things.

But it's the little things that count, so one should count the little things.

After a storekeeper has once commenced to wait on a customer he should stay on the job until the sale is effected. He makes a great mistake if he goes half way through with the sale, because the clerks are busy, and then turns the customer over to the first clerk who has time to handle it.

This is often considered a slight.

Customers are sure to resent it.

It makes them think that the storekeeper is very indifferent about their purchases, and they will be just as indifferent about purchasing in his store.

Can you blame them ?

No, you can't, because the storekeeper is at fault. He should not let his interest lag as soon as a clerk is ready to wait on a customer. He shocks the sense of importance the customer felt while the proprietor was doing the selling.

Every time a storekeeper turns over a customer he takes a chance, because he may be throwing cold water on the "psychological moment" when the customer is about ready to decide to buy.

He should finish the sale he started.

This personal interest influence can be made a potent factor in increasing sales. Small as the store may be, its very smallness can be turned to advantage. It will enable the storekeeper to attend to a greater number of customers.—The Sparkler.

BETTER HANDLING NEEDED.

Now that the berry season is practically over a few words of advice to those interested may not be out of place. A few hints may be productive of good results. It is intended especially for the berry grower for it has to do with the packing and preservation of the small fruit.

In looking over the berry situation during the past several years one is especially struck with the high and improving qualities of the imported strawberry placed on the Canadian market. While our Canadian strawberry has not improved a particle, but has rather an insipid taste, compared with the southern berry. As a matter of fact, the standing of each has changed, for it is not long since the home-grown variety had the call. When we walked barefooted through the fields and across the berry patch snatching here and there a couple of these luscious edibles nothing was sweeter to the taste. It is not so much that old age is creeping on us and that we are growing crabbed, as that the packing conditions prevailing in the days of our youth, and which were good enough then, still prevail with many Canadian growers.

A comparison of packing conditions in Canada with those in the United States might prove valuable. In the Carolina fields care, of course, is the first consideration in looking after plant and flower in the early stages to prevent the weather cutting the life short. When the berry is ripe and ready for the market the pickers go into the fields and having chosen rows of plants on which to work, a healthy rivalry ensues. A series of overhead trolley wires cross the fields from one end of the patch to the storehouse, where the berries are got ready for shipment. When a picker has gathered about a peck of berries he places them in a wire basket-car run on the trolley and sends it off to the storehouse. There the berries are treated to a cooling process, which extracts all the vegetable heat and so gets them into condition for shipping. Refrigerator cars only are used for taking the berries to market. Care is taken with the packing and placing of the boxes and cases in the cars, the shipper being very careful to see that the cases do not rest on the floor, but on timbers laid lengthwise with the car. There is also sufficient space between each case to allow of fresh, cool air circulating constantly in all directions through and around each and every box in the car.

The berries themselves are not touched by hand from the time they leave the picker until they reach the consumer. As a consequence of this care and attention the southern berries, after traveling two days on the cars, are placed on the Canadian markets in fresh and sound condition, and will remain fresh and sound for three days thereafter, or five days in all from the time of picking. What home-grown variety of strawberry is able to do that? After one full day very few of our berries are able to stand up well.

True, the journey from the Canadian fields to the markets is very short, and berries picked in the morning are on the market the afternoon of that day. The berries may not, however, reach the retailer until the following day and by that time they are likely to show, and in the past have shown, signs of weakness.

The southern grower goes to a little trouble, and perhaps expense, to place his goods safely on the market, but the increased price he receives repays him for it all. Results count every time, and that this is so is amply evidenced by the testimony of G. Ford, general manager of the Dominion Express Co., Winnipeg, who says: "Berries shipped in refrigerator cars have reached here (Winnipeg) in splendid condition; in ventilator cars in very good condition; in regular working cars in soft condition. Berries netted to growers from $1.65 to $2.40 a crate. Average $1.90 a crate. Strongly recommend shipment of all berries by refrigerator cars."

The berries referred to are Kootenay berries, and they are the best placed on the Winnipeg market to-day. Some few years ago the total value of all Kootenay small fruits was $5,000; this season the strawberry crop alone was worth $25,000. These figures show conclusively what can be done by careful preparation and handling of strawberries, and speak more loudly than volumes of words written on the subject. What is done in the Southern States and in Western Canada can be and should be done in Ontario and other berry sections in eastern Canada. The extra care taken with strawberries in preparing them for and placing them on the market will, beyond doubt, pay well for any trouble and expense the grower may be put to. And what is here said about strawberries may in a lesser degree be taken as referring to other berries and small fruits generally.

PROMOTING HOME PATRONAGE.

The merchants of Shenandoah, Iowa, recently offered a handsome prize to the person writing the best short essay on the subject. "How to Promote Home Patronage." The following extract from the prize winning essay contains some very sound advice to merchants:

Be honest, earnest and accommodating. The most powerful factor in business is the personal element, and right there is where the home merchant has the advantage of the mail order man. The farmer knows his home merchant, knows him to be honest, obliging and straightforward. If he can get anywhere near as good prices at home he will not send away. Let the farmer know that you have his interest at heart and would not knowingly sell him anything of poor quality. Educate him to the use of the best qualities and show him the differences in the grades. Make it an open deal all the way through, straight and above board. The farmer does not object to a fair profit, but the mail order men have constantly impressed on his mind that the home merchant is a robber, till sometimes the farmer almost believes it.

POSTAL PROMOTIONS.

Some time ago in an article referring to the growing importance of the postal service we urged the promotion of efficient post office officials to fill the higher offices, instead of giving these, as now, as a reward for party services. Under such a system a young man who is to-day conducting a small post office in connection with a grocery, hardware or general store and doing it well, may hope to attain the position of deputy postmaster-general by a series of upward steps from the small village to the town, then the city, and thence to the inspectional and headquarters staff at Ottawa.

The last issue of the Postal Current in an editorial adopts our views and elaborates on them. This system is the best that can be followed to give us an efficient postal organization, and it is to be hoped that the Postmasters' Association will make the development of it one of their principles.

CAUSE FOR PRIDE.

Grocers throughout Canada were shocked upon hearing of the terrible conflagration which practically wiped out the city of Three Rivers, Que., recently, and duly expressed their sympathy for their fellow grocers, most all of whom suffered.

It was encouraging to hear from a Montreal wholesaler this week that most of the grocers in Three Rivers were able to pay their debts despite the fire, justifying the ample credit allowed them by manufacturers and wholesalers. This merchant stated that at the time of the fire various grocers in the stricken city owed him $10,000. Of this he has been paid all but $45, which he lost through one retailer compromising.

That these retail grocers should pay up as promptly as usual despite the tremendous handicap under which they are working, speaks volumes for their business methods, and it will do a great deal to largely increase the confidence wholesalers already repose in the merchants of that city. Three Rivers grocers may well be proud of their achievements under such trying circumstances.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

One of the best investments a business man can make is in good, commonsense advertising. It is impossible, however, to establish rules which will be applicable to every merchant under all conditions and the individual advertiser should be the judge as to how and what he should advertise to get the best possible returns. It is very important that the reputation of the store be established. This is good advertising at all times and under all conditions. If the hardware or other dealer bears the reputation of being honest in his dealings and not misrepresenting his goods this fact alone, if advertised, will undoubtedly bring him trade.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, Aug. 1.—From a report covering 160 points, received during the past week, the outlook as to the western harvest is good and cutting will be general from the 15th to 20th of August. Now that the wheat areas of the west are increased to 6,000,000 acres and these acres are scattered over a territory 850 miles long and 500 miles wide, it is not reasonable to suppose that absolutely ideal conditions will prevail throughout an entire season. If the weather conditions were flawless there are variations of soil, climate and cultivation to be reckoned with, so that as the wheat acreage is extended year by year the probabilities of what is known as a bumper crop over the entire area in any one season are materially lessened.

The present crop, as has been repeatedly stated, went in on a good seed bed and had a good start. Taking the country as a whole, June rains were abundant and there was sufficient warmth for steady growth, the plants stooled well and there was not too much straw. Even in June, however, there were districts that reported barely enough rain for current requirement and no moisture being stored against the heat of July. July came in very hot and has continued so throughout the month. When June has been wet in the west the ideal July has a hot sun, light cool winds and heavy dew at nights. The present July has given hot rather than cool winds and there has been a marked absence of the usual heavy dew, while the atmosphere during the day time has been both hot and moist. On rich lands, and this is the land that predominates in the west, the crops have done well with the one or two light showers during the month; and have passed successfully through the blossom stage, have filled evenly and well and by the time the binders begin their work will give an excellent account of themselves in long heavy heads, without an excessive amount of straw. In fact the very crop the farmer delights to handle. There are, however, very considerable areas, especially south of the main line of the C.P.R. where the crops have suffered very materially from excessive heat and drought, where the straw is short and the heads short and uneven, thus reducing the yield very materially. Some of these sections will not go over 10 bushels to the acre. Further west in Saskatchewan there have been considerable areas hailed out either in whole or in part. The month of July has certainly divided the sheep from the goats among the farmers and the badly broken, badly cultivated and weedy land has felt the strain of the hot days.

In spite of these drawbacks the country as a whole will reap a good average crop and every hour of the present weather places it further from danger in the matter of frost. The damage from smut will be much less than last year and there is no rust damage. It may be asked that if the general outcome is to be good what is the object of stating the damage? Simply that undue boosting of the crop has a tendency to depress prices at the very time when the rush of wheat is leaving the farmers' hands, and in this way the man who does the heavy work does not get the just reward of his labors. The indications are that the world will be short of wheat and there should be a steady consumptive demand for our crop at good prices, but if the British buyers run away with the idea that we are having a 125,000,000-bushel crop he will be slow to buy and offer lower prices.

The thing for the business world to grasp is that the Canadian west is within easy distance of reaping a crop that will be one of the most profitable in her history—good wheat—good demand—good prices, but not any 125,000,000 bushels.

A round-up of the wholesale trade shows the western men in good spirits but not one of them looking for a bumper crop. They state that they expect business to be good, but that country merchants have learned their lesson and are buying carefully. Wholesale houses have big stocks on hand ready to meet any later rush that may come and because last year the country merchant was obliged to square up with his local bank and is now being carried by the wholesale houses it is reasonable to expect that these houses will receive a goodly share of the money for the crop at a much earlier period than usual. The retailer has done largely a cash business for the past ten months.

It is not anticipated by either the railways or by men in trade that there is going to be any congestion of freight of a serious character from a heavy western rush near the close of navigation. Wholesale houses report that manufacturers have been sending goods forward steadily and that this year the manufacturers have been seeking orders where a year ago they refused to accept them except at seven and eight months time to fill them. On the whole, western freight has been light for the season and the boats have got what freight was coming through quickly and it has arrived at destination and already a very large amount of the goods that usually do not arrive until September have passed into stock.

To sum up the views of the wholesale men, we are doing a fair business now, we expect an excellent business as soon as the crop moves and we expect an even greater volume of business, especially in dry goods lines next spring. It is a good average crop and will bring a lot of money, but it is not a bumper and we are not looking for it.—H.

CROP PROSPECTS FAVORABLE.

Fruit Division Reports on Conditions in July—Apples Not Too Plentiful, Others Generally Encouraging.

The Fruit Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has issued its monthly summary of the fruit crop report for the month of July. Conditions are summarized as follows:—The weather conditions throughout the country have been favorable during the past month for the fruit industry. Apples are estimated somewhat lower for July than for June, while early and fall varieties are estimated as slightly above medium; winter apples at less than a medium crop. The quality, however, is good. Pears are reported a light crop, except in British Columbia and Southern Ontario, where a medium crop is expected. Early peaches are reported a full crop, but late peaches are estimated light to medium.

Cherries have proved a medium crop and have sold at fair prices. Plums are reported light generally. In British Columbia certain sections report a medium crop. In the Georgian Bay District three or four varieties promise well. Grapes are reported a full crop.

Strawberries and raspberries have been reduced by dry weather, but the average has been very good. Small fruits, other than the foregoing, are yielding or promise a full crop.

Tomatoes are a medium crop, ripening early. Insects and fungus diseases are not so prevalent as usual.

The United States report prospects for a medium crop of apples, evenly distributed in season and territory. Peaches are a full crop and other fruits are good. Great Britain has prospects for a medium crop of apples, other fruits being good.

"TEN-CENT" GOODS.

Secretary John A. Green, of the National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States came out with the following little observation in a recent issue of the Trade Press Bulletin, which will be read with interest by grocers everywhere. The trade in Canada will feel the truth of it just as deeply as those in the United States:

"Retailers of groceries find it necessary this summer to get away from some of their old ideas about retail prices. For instance, many articles which retailed for 10 cents are not to be had at figures which allow a 10-cent price and at the same time pay a living profit. And there are many more in the 15-cent class and the 25-cent class which are just as scarce. The result is that to save his own hide the retailer is forced to get his trade accustomed to new prices.

"If the retailer cannot find a medium grade canned pea to sell at 10 cents, the same figure he sold it at three years ago, he must ask 12 cents for it. If his fancy brand of tomatoes costs him $1.50 per dozen at jobbing point, he must get away from his old 15-cent price. If his standard canned peach, which he sold at 20 cents or the extra standard which he sold at 25 cents are not to be had at the old figures, the new price must be named, and the sooner the better.

"Old prices on rice, rolled oats, dried fruits and dozens of things in the grocery list have had to be raised.

"The grocer who has his weather eye on the profit all of the time has revised.

"Have you revised?"

AUSTRALIA TO CANADA VIA MEXICO.

A shipment of raisins from Australia has arrived in Montreal, consigned to a large wholesale firm. The lot is interesting chiefly owing to the new route by which it came. Instead of coming by the all-water route, around the Horn, or via England, it has been shipped to Southern Mexico, and then sent by rail across this narrow strip of land, and on by boat again to Montreal. In this way the long railway journey across the continent by rail, which is expensive, was escaped, and the raisins were received in better condition.

B.C. APPLES FOR AUSTRALIA.

Large Shipments May Be Made This Fall—Good Quality Attractive.

Vancouver, Aug. 1.—James Drummond, secretary of the Victoria Fruit Growers' Association, states large shipments of apples will be made from British Columbia, possibly Victoria, this Fall, if an examination now being made by a gentleman representing fruit dealers in Australia, proves satisfactory. Last year some fruit was shipped from here to Australia, and it was stated at that time that large orders would be placed in British Columbia, and it was even announced that the interior association had received some business. Attention is being directed to British Columbia apples, which secure the highest awards in the first show of the world in London, and as this Province is nearer to Australia than other producing places, growers here are confident that they will get the trade.

U. S. PACKING HOUSE IN FRANCE.

Company With $2,500,000 Capital Will Build Factory in Havre.

Construction of the first American packing house in Europe is to be commenced in Havre, France early in September. A concession to build a private slaughter house in France, where the local Governments derive big revenues from the maintenance of public abattoirs, has just been granted to Alexander A. Eberson, of St. Louis, after a hard three years' fight.

From the time Mr. Eberson first set foot in France he met with the most bitter opposition on the part of dealers, wholesale and retail butchers, farmers and the press, who believed they were being threatened by the American Meat Trust. Paris turned the American down but Havre eventually became convinced that an up-to-date packing house on the Chicago plan will be the first step toward making the port the meat distributing centre of France .

$2,500,000 Capitalization.

Mr. Richard M. Frisby, late manager for the Swifts at Kansas City, will supervise the construction of the plant and afterward manage the business. The Havre concern will be run by the company under French laws and with a capital of $2,500,000, one-half of which will be subscribed for in France and the other in England.

An underwriting syndicate is now being formed and later a separate stock yard company will be organized. Mr. Eberson, who is now in London, told the story of his fight for the concession to a Herald correspondent at the Hotel Cecil.

"According to the French laws," he said, "only towns and communities have the right to make slaughter houses. Private individuals have not had the right since 1899 to build abattoirs, and when a public killing place is established in a town all the private concerns which may have been previously organized must be closed down.

"Huge revenues are derived by the local authorities from public slaughter houses and you can imagine I had a big task in getting the concession. I wished to commence operations in Paris, but after getting the communities outside to vote for the granting of the concession there was a hitch and negotiations fell through. The trade succeeded in convincing the authorities they were being menaced by the American Meat Trust.

Sees Big Industry.

"At Havre I met with the same opposition from the trade, but finally won. the packing house will create a big industry in Havre and give employment to thousands of workers.

"I will start in a comparatively small way, killing about five hundred head of cattle and one thousand five hundred sheep and pigs a day.

"This may, perhaps, be the first of a string of American packing houses throughout Europe. Geographically, France is the ideal centre for the packing house, for in Normandy the finest cattle in the world are reared.

"Our methods will result in saving $5 a head and all our surplus stock will be shipped to England. We are not going to kill the French farmer, as the high tariff will prevent us from importing American cattle. The building will be finished in eight months."—New York Herald.

W. C. Talbot, St. Thomas, has purchased the confectionery and bakery business of Frank Laur, also the business of L. O. Purdy, and will amalgamate the two. Mr. Purdy will have charge of the bakery for Mr. Talbot.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, Aug. 6, 1908.

POINTERS—
Butter—Easier.
Cheese—Firm.
Sugar—Declined.
Provisions—Bacon declined.
Fish—Advances.

The long looked for real brightening up of conditions in general seems to have at last set in, due, in a large degree, to the prospects of a heavy crop in the west. Business men are of the opinion that the pendulum has commenced to swing towards good times again, and they also assert that if the crop comes up to expectations in the west nothing will prevent a return of better conditions. The chief item of interest during this week is the decline in refined sugar, which took place July 29.

The Canadian market, which is at all times more or less an echo of the New York market, followed the American market closely in the decline. Buyers were not stocking very heavily, and it is thought this decline will lead to more activity, in fact it has already. The decline was a little late, but still it is opportune, as this is about the height of the canning and preserving season. Fruit and vegetables continue high. Fish has advanced in some lines. Altogether the week has been a good one in business circles, and may be taken as an augury of good things to come.

SUGAR—On July 29 a drop of 10c was recorded on prices all around, due to the fact that the rising tendency of the market has kept buyers off so that refiners have now made things a little more attractive. The demand during the week has been excellent owing, in a measure, to the drop, and the fact that the canning season is now in full progress. It was stated that stocks went quite low. An authority on the market states that the present heavy demand will influence the market up again because raws are rather scarce. Figures from the West Indies report that exports of sugar from there up to July 18, 1908, were 26,834, against 27,342 tons for the same period of last year.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES — Barbadoes molasses and corn syrups have been moving fairly well during the week, other lines, however, were neglected. Advices from West Indies report a falling off in exports as follows: Up to July 18, 1908, 44,663 puncheons were exported, against 56,429 puncheons for the corresponding period of last year. The last shipment of molasses from the West Indies for this season is due to arrive in Montreal August 10.

TEAS—The Japan market remains unchanged with a firm tone and a somewhat increased activity in the lower grades. Advices from Japan state that the quality of second pickings is not so good as usual. The leaves now offered are generally "tea for price." In consequence of the high price maintained by the first picking, the second picking was sold at the same high figures, and some qualities fetched even higher prices than the first picking. The exports of tea show a slight decrease this year from the figures for the corresponding period of last year. "The month just closed," says a London letter, dated July 1, "has been rather quiet, in spite of the strong statistical position, and the generally favorable outlook. Imports of teas are likely to be lighter than last year for the next few weeks, and stocks in London are four million pounds lower than at the same time last year, and yet in London the price of tea is ½d less per pound than it was a month ago. It is probable that part of the decline is due to the generally dull state of trade throughout the country, but on the whole, prospects in the tea market for the fall appear healthy.

"In Indians, Darjeelings have fully borne out the favorable opinions expressed last month on the samples received by post. They have more than the ordinary color and flavor of first arrivals, and give promise of fairly good teas during the season. There have not been many invoices of Assam received, therefore, it is too early to speak with confidence upon the character and quality of the crop. Advices from Calcutta state that weather conditions are favorable.

"The Ceylon market, which has been somewhat heavily supplied, is subsiding into a normal condition, and the later arrivals are showing a marked improvement in quality."

COFFEES—The coffee market continues to display steadiness, and a good demand is reported from all sources. A large house stated that the sale of coffee was steadily increasing owing to the growing popularity of the beverage. It was said that in many cases now where children formerly would learn to drink tea they were drinking coffee instead. The growth of the popularity of coffee has been very steady.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—The demand for canned sardines and canned salmon has been very good during the week, also for vegetables. Fruits have been somewhat duller owing to the lower prices on fresh fruits. Meats have been only fairly active.

TORONTO — Business generally has been pretty fair during the week with better demand for fruits and vegetables. Reports of short pea crop have been very current and are authenticated. Canners say the pack will be some short, though as yet the percentage cannot be estimated. Tomatoes are in large supply and the pack will be heavy.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Firm at declined price.
Prunes—Advancing.
Seeded Raisins—Advancing.

Toronto, August 6, 1908.

A canvass of the wholesale houses reveals better reports this week. The travelers are pretty generally back on their ground again and orders are coming in rather more freely. A manifest interest in sugar and one or two other lines has brightened things up considerably. The features of the week's markets have been the strong position assumed in California dried fruits. Crops in nearly all lines seem to be short to a greater or less degree, and growers and buyers on the coast, who have a well-known penchant for speculation, have been boosting prices, particularly on prunes, in a way that is creating considerable interest.

SUGAR—Last week's decline has stimulated buying generally, both by jobbers and retailers, but prices are firm at the basis then quoted. While there does not now seem to be any immediate likelihood of an advance, in view of the comparatively lower value of raws, it is probable that the former prices will again be reached sometime during the present month; inasmuch as August promises to show an abnormal demand for refined sugars. Retailers will make no mistake by laying in full stocks at the present basis. Regarding the situation in raws, Willett & Gray say in their last report: "Last week spot centrifugals were 4.25c. During the week under review the quotations declined to 4.17c on moderate sales and returned to 4.25 again at the close, with sellers asking basis of 4.27c. The decline was in response to a considerable weakness and decline in the European markets which carried beet quotations from 10s 10½d to 10s 6d, returning to 10s 8½d. The receipts for the week were very heavy, 54,100 tons, giving a quite full supply for refiners use. The offerings from Cuba at the close are at 2 29-32c for 96 degrees test, equal to 4.27c landed. The old crop of Cuba is approaching completion, with two centrals grinding and the visible thus far amounting to 935,000 tons. Cuba next crop prospects still continue to improve and it is easy to anticipate at least 200,000 tons increase over the present crop, with all conditions remaining favorable. It is too early yet, however, to make definite estimates. European beet crop prospects are, also, very favorable warranting an expectation of some increase, at least, in first anticipations. The next crop beet sugars, October-December, are now 10s, equal to 4.11c per lb., while present crop is quoted at 10s 8½d. The outlook for raw sugars is now steady to firm with further possible improvement should the demand for refined materially increase."

TEAS—Business locally continues very quiet.

Thompson Bros., of London, in their weekly circular, dated July 23, say regarding the general situation: "The week's sales have in all amounted to 45,000 packages, against 46,000 packages last year, and while quotations for ordinary and common kinds are again easier, we can report a better tone in the market and a freer business, notwithstanding that many of the regular buyers are holiday making. Daily deliveries for home consumption are only on a moderate scale, but the lower quotation of "tea for price" should sooner or later have its effect, and tend to stimulate the general trade, both at home and for export."

COFFEE—Dealers report business fairly good, with local demand improving and no new features in the local market.

DRIED FRUITS—A fair amount of business is passing locally with considerable interest focussed on the California markets. The curious situation is presented in the dried fruit field of shippers daily strengthening the tone of the prices and trading disposition, despite the fact that buyers are not disposed to do any business. Twice within the week the quotation for prunes has advanced and some of the leading California shippers are out of the market on Santa Claras. Despite this steadily advancing tone of the market, the buyers are showing little disposition to buy. Seeded raisins are coming forward fast as market factors, especially on orders for early October delivery. Apricots remain firm, especially in response to reports of small proportions of fine goods, as well as due to the control of the available supply by the growers.

DEVELOPING CANADIAN FISHERIES

Profitable Results to Dealers From Cultivating Canadian Fields—Educating the Retailers to Carry on Fish Business— Opportunities for Eastern Producers.

The catch of the Gloucester fishing fleet in 1907 was 149,000,000 lbs green fish, or 21,000,000 lbs. greater than in 1906, while the catch of mackerel increased 4,000,000 lbs. The value of the raw catch in 1907 is placed at about $5,000,000, and the manufactured product about $8,000,000.—Exchange.

What was the value of the Lunenburg, Liverpool and other Nova Scotian fleets? Proportionately as large and valuable. One of Canada's greatest natural resources is the fishing industry of the Maritime Provinces. Those who live down by the sea appreciate in a large measure this value, and the prosperity of the lower provinces is largely bound up in the industry.

Cultivating Canadian Fields.

During the past 10 or 15 years the fish dealers of the east have materially increased this value by better methods of curing, packing and shipping. They have also awakened to the fact that the great provinces to the west want fish, and more fish every year, and the wise curers, instead of looking to the Boston and New York markets, geographically nearer, but financially more uncertain, have cultivated the central and western Canadian fields with most profitable results to themselves.

It was but natural through the conditions that existed before the abrogation of the Fish Treaty between the Dominion of Canada and the United States for the eastern fishermen to look to the United States for their market and their contiguity to same made it a readily available outlet. It is in a degree so to-day, but with the wonderful development of Canada and its transportation facilities our own market is beckoning to the enterprising Nova Scotia and New Brunswick fisherman. With a closer view of our Canadian market the packers and curers see possibilities for business not dreamed of before. The encouragement given the fishermen by the Government of Canada in the establishment of salting and bait stations and the instruction by the best Scotch herring curers supplied by the Government has stimulated the trade in this country very materially until to-day the centre and west of Canada has a vital interest in the fisheries of the east.

Enhancing the Industry's Value.

The stimulation accorded the fishermen by the Government, the publicity given the fishing industries by the press, and notably The Canadian Grocer, has also materially assisted in enhancing the interest and value of this great industry. The Canadian Grocer since its inception some twenty-two years ago realized the importance of the Maritime fisheries, and saw possibilities of a great business with the central and western portions of Canada. It advocated strenuously and continually during all these years the encouragement of our fisheries and pointed out to the shippers of the east the necessity and advantages of cultivating the home market. That this market is a valuable one and becoming more so through its exploitation by the more enterprising Maritime fish packers and shippers is evident by the improved statistical position of the trade as related to western Canada business. Though greatly improved, the outer crust has barely been broken and it devolves upon the business men engaged in the industry to enter upon a systematic and organized plan of educating the western Canadian consumer to the use of the sea food.

Educating the Retailers.

For many years The Canadian Grocer has editorially and otherwise through its columns drawn the attention of the grocers and provision dealers to the importance and value of handling Canadian fish. Its efforts have been directed to the intelligent exposition of fish in grocery stores and to the best methods of handling same. The objectionable features have been demonstrated to the grocer as easily surmountable by the correct arrangement of the fish department, and it is gratifying to learn that many of our subscribers have acted upon our suggestions, with acknowledged benefit to themselves. One feature that has assisted to the increased consumption of fish is the improved condition of transportation facilities between the lower provinces and the west. It is now possible to secure practically fresh fish from the seaboard in a few days, and with the system of refrigerating supplied by the railway companies it should be the object of everyone interested directly in the fisheries to still further extend the trade in the western markets.

West Calling for Fish.

The west wants the fish and it remains only for the producers in the Maritime Provinces to intelligently exploit the market. Those who have made the western field a study have reaped the benefit of their courage and though a large trade is awaiting dealers it will require unceasing educational demonstrative work to reach the highest financial results.

The Canadian Grocer is one of the most direct and powerful mediums available for packers and shippers of fish to reach the distributing trade of Canada. Its constant attention to the industry and the fact that every jobber and retailer of importance is either a subscriber or an advertiser should commend itself to such curers and packers as are in the line of advancement to a profitable business.

TORONTO PICKLE MAKERS ASSIGN

Said to be Running on Insufficient Capital—May Start Again Shortly.

J. R. Yost & Son, who took over the pickle manufacturing business of C. Williams & Co., at 180 Front street, east, Toronto, about six months ago, have assigned to N. L. Martin & Co. The liabilities are placed at about $8,000, with assets approximately the same amount. It is claimed the concern had not sufficient capital to meet the requirements of the business. A meeting of creditors will be held some day next week when the disposition of the business will be decided. It is likely the firm will buy in the plant and begin manufacturing in new premises. In the meantime the plant and stock will be stored.

TRADE NEWS OF AUSTRALIA.

The Grocer's Correspondent Tells of Local Conditions and Relations With Canada.

Sydney, July 7.—For many months past the grocery trade in Australia has been considerably harassed and hampered owing to the uncertainty regarding the new federal tariff. Sent from the House of Representatives to the Senate, and back again from there to the former chamber, the items were no sooner fixed than they were altered again and again. Such a condition of affairs was not, as you may well imagine, conducive to an active market, and only now, consequent upon the duties being finally fixed and backed up with a promise that they will remain so for some considerable time to come, is a saner and sounder trade being done. While in progress the tariff of course aroused the interest of all importers, who objected strongly to the consistently high rates of duty emanating from an ultra-protectionist Government. Nevertheless the trade of the Commonwealth in the aggregate is declining, the details of imports compared with corresponding periods of previous years showing disquieting decreases. Some of the decline may of course be attributed to increased local manufacture under a high tariff, and Victoria, one of the six states, shows a somewhat remarkable expansion in this direction.

Owing to our somewhat unsatisfactory mail arrangements with Canada, interest is always evinced by Australian merchants in anything relating to shipping matters. Satisfaction has been expressed here at the news that early next year the White Star Line, which trades extensively to Australia, will enter the Canadian trade, and in conjunction with the Dominion line maintain a service between Liverpool, Quebec and Montreal, the new venture to be known as the "White Star Dominion Service." Another shipping matter in the minds of Australians at present is the proposal to renew for three years, at the expiration of the present contract, the service for the carriage of Australian mails to Canada via Vancouver. It is said that considerable time must elapse before the present negotiations in that direction are completed, as your Dominion Government being a party to the existing contract, has to be communicated with and its sanction obtained. In return for the proposed extension of the contract for three years, the Union Company promises material improvements in its service.

It will be interesting to your readers to know that attention is being directed here by Board of Health officers to the question of fixing a standard of purity for what are usually known as "egg powders." Some samples of these wares sold in the open market have just been analysed, with in two cases at least somewhat startling results. In one of them the powder consisted of wheaten starch and a little coloring matter, and in another the powder was composed of maize starch, a little tartaric acid and aniline dye. The fixing of a standard of purity, which will make compulsory the use of eggs in the production of egg powders, it is being urged, will not only protect the public against what is termed by the officers in question "an impudent fraud," but will also prove of inestimable advantage to the rapidly growing poultry industry.

A considerable increase in the export of Australian honey of late should be a matter of interest to Canadian merchants. Last season nearly all the Commonwealth states shipped largely augmented supplies to oversea ports. The industry is one which has apparently benefitted by our Federal Commerce Act, which ensured among other things improved methods to modify the strong flavor of eucalyptus which in the past always characterized Australian honey. The flavor is still perceptible, but it is thought by exporters that objection to a very slight flavor of eucalyptus is mostly a matter of prejudice, and may be overcome in time. Among places to which Australian honey has been exported of late are Colombo. Singapore, London, San Francisco, Germany, Fiji, South Africa, and Manila, but not to any extent to Canada.

Sir Thomas Lipton's Indian agent is now in Australia enquiring into the matter of establishing a large tea factory in Sydney, where teas received from India and Ceylon will be blended and packed, whereas if packed in Ceylon as at present they are subjected to a duty of one penny per pound under the new tariff, a duty regarded in this matter as prohibitive. According to the agent the factory will be the finest and best-equipped in the world. The machinery will be of the latest, and some idea of its completeness can be judged from the fact that the tea during blending and packing will not be touched by the hand.

A close study of the cargoes leaving Australia every month for Canada soon reveals the fact that butter is destined to prove an important item in the trade relations between the two countries. In this respect it will interest you to know that what we term the Australian butter year 1907-1908 ended on June 30th. Exports from the Commonwealth during that year totalled about 869,000 boxes, a shrinkage of no less than 458,000 boxes as against the figures of the previous season. Sydney butter merchants met yesterday and decided to increase the price of butter by 4 shillings per cwt. from date. This will make present quotation for flavored brands of Australian butter 134s per cwt. This price exceeds by 6s per cwt. the season's record of a couple of months ago, and represents a total advance of 22s within the space of about a month. The existing cold weather materially reducing supplies, and interstate demand being largely on the increase, were the principal reasons which induced the merchants to arrive at the above decision regarding the further advance.

The R.M.S. Aorangi of the Canadian-Australian line—the vessel which carries this mail—sailed on her return trip to Vancouver yesterday, with a full cargo and passenger list. She calls at Brisbane—where she picks up the mail which goes overland to-day—Suva, Honolulu, and Victoria, B.C., en route. Her cargo for Canada from Australia consists of preserved meats (principally) felts, sulphate of ammonia, timber, raisins, and lesser products.

Storms on Atlantic Coast Drove Crustaceans to Deep Water—Canada Supplying the Greater Part of the Trade.

J. W. Windsor, Montreal, who has lately returned from his lobster fisheries on the Gaspe Coast, talked interestingly to a Grocer representative this week of the prospects and results of the present season's catch. He stated that this year's catch would be under the previous year's quite considerably. This shortage is due to the fact that during the season which lasts practically only thirty days, the Coast was visited by a great storm and this resulted in the lobsters taking to deep waters. After the storm the catch diminished almost three-quarters and during the season remained in this condition. The storm affected all the fisheries along the Gaspe Coast and New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island as well.

Of all of these fisheries, it is conceded that the finest lobsters are taken from the waters along the Gaspe Coast. Some years ago lobsters were caught all along the Atlantic seaboard but of late the United States Coast has fallen off surprisingly in the output and consequently Canada is enjoying pretty much of a monopoly of this industry. Mr. Windsor, who has been associated with this business practically all his life and is a recognized authority on the subject talked of the many improvements which have taken place in the methods of lobster fishing. He also told of the conditions which have made them now an expensive luxury, whereas, years ago they were a comparatively cheap form of food. Other sources and means of obtaining a livelihood have been offered to the men who formerly were engaged solely in the industry with the result that it is difficult to obtain men to do the work. The failure of the American production and increasing demand for the product both in Europe and America, have contributed to the cause which has raised the price. It may be thought that this great increase in the price would benefit the packer but in the same proportion as other conditions have altered, so have the difficulties and obstacles which the packers have to contend with increased, and to such a degree that the margin of profit to them has not increased relatively to the increase in the price to the consumer. Mr. Windsor explained that the new railway which was building in that district, will be a great boon to the packers, as previously they had to depend entirely on the coasting schooners, and steamers which ply in those waters and their numbers and service have always been inadequate to the volume of business. In view of the acknowledged superiority of the Canadian lobster which now finds its way to the great cities of Europe and America, it is fair to say it has contributed its share towards the fame of the new and great country from which it comes.

Grocery News From Coast to Coast

Quebec and Eastern Province Notes.

The Fish Commission at Digby, N.S., is Investigating Conditions in the Industry—Some Hot Weather Ideas From Montreal.

MONTREAL.

Aug. 4.—A somewhat unique demonstration of clam bouillon and other clam products may be seen at Scroggies this week. The novelty lies in the booth where the demonstration takes place, which is built like a rustic summer house, and certainly looks very cool and enticing on hot weather days. The walls of the house are constructed of diminutive logs, and the roof is made of wide sheets of bark. Altogether, the effect is rather good, as it may be observed everyone who goes into the grocery department is immediately attracted to the display. The rustic idea is a highly appropriate one for this time of the year, and conveys a sense of rural simplicity and rest.

Another large grocery on St. Catherine St. has a window display which follows out the same idea. The window is made to represent a small bit of the country with its verdure, trees, and moss-covered stones, and all the other things which one conjures up upon thinking of some secluded nook in the country.

In wandering around town hundreds of examples of window dressing come within one's observation, and let it be said that every day, almost, examples of good work in this line are discovered in the most out of the way places where they are least expected. By no means have the big uptown stores got a monopoly of this art. A certain provision and vegetable store in this city has something which is proving an attraction to the many who may be seen watching the antics of four ducklings under a fountain playing in a tile-lined basin which surrounds the fountain. On these hot days it is refreshing to stand and watch the antics of these birds beneath the spray. This contains a timely hint to the window dresser, to make displays seasonable. This grocer aims simply to draw the attention of passers-by through this fountain.

A. Lalande, 704 Notre Dame St., W., contemplates making some changes to accommodate the increasing volume of his trade.

A Point St. Charles grocer stated that since the financial depression had set in he was behind about one hundred dollars per month in his sales, as compared with last year. He said, however, that there was a brightening up of business now, as many men who were out of employment in that section of the city, who were on short time, were beginning to work steadily.

A. Laniel, president of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association, spent the week end in Quebec at the Tercentenary Celebration.

A. Laurendeau, J. D. Boileau and J. A. Dore were among the Montreal grocers who spent some time in Quebec during the Tercentenary.

A contest to determine which is the most popular grocery clerk in Montreal has been inaugurated by La Presse, the leading French daily of Montreal. Coupons appear in the paper from time to time, and the clerk winning the largest number of votes will be judged the most popular and sent on a trip to New York, all his expenses being paid by the paper. The second clerk will have a trip to Niagara Falls, while the third most popular grocer's assistant will journey to Quebec.

which Shredded Wheat is made, was moved in its entirety to the windows of Dupuis Freres' departmental store, Montreal, on Wednesday of this week.

ST. JOHN.

August 4.—Business has been rather quiet lately as is usual at this time of year when the farmers are busy haying. There have been few changes in market quotations. A decline of fifteen cents in Manitoba flours was announced last week and further declines in Manitoba and Ontarios are looked for very soon. Beans are a little easier and molasses has advanced another cent per gallon.

New canned peas, corn and strawberries have arrived and are being distributed to the dealers.

Large quantities of produce are coming down in the river boats every day and prices are becoming more reasonable with the exception of butter and eggs which are higher than for some time at this season. The reason assigned for high prices of butter and eggs is that large quantities are being placed in cold storage and it is predicted that one result of this will be lower prices for these commodities during the winter months.

A comparison of some of the prices to-day with seven years ago shows that the increase is about double. Then pork sold for 4 to 4½c, now it is 8½c; beef was 3 to 5c, now it is selling at 8 to 10c; fowl and chickens were 35 to 50c, and now are bringing 70c to $1.25; butter was 17 to 18c, and now is 23 to 28c; eggs were 12 to 15c, and now are 17 to 25c; lamb was 8 to 10c, while now 13 to 18c is asked.

A new steamship service is now being operated between St. John, Boston and Havana and it is expected quite a trade will be developed. The first steamer of the new line, the Talisman, sailed from here on Saturday last with a good cargo of lumber, hay, oats and other produce. It is expected after a few trips that the steamer will sail direct from Havana to St. John and that a full cargo will be carried both ways.

Lieut.-Governor Tweedie, who was in the city last week reports that business on the north shore is very quiet and many of the manufacturers on the Miramichi have closed their plants for a time on account of the poor markets. The Governor reports that the crops with the exception of hay and oats, are in excellent condition. Great preparations are being made to make the Chatham exhibition the best yet held.

The commission appointed by the Federal Government to inquire into the reasons for the failure in the shad fishing is now holding sessions along the bay coast of Nova Scotia. The salmon and gaspereaux fishing are also to be included in the commission's investigation.

On the first day of August a new schedule of fire insurance rates went into effect in Fredericton. The new rate takes off the 15 cents extra which was placed on commercial property some time ago, as well as other reductions.

The St. John exhibition, Sept. 12 to 20, promises to be one of the best ever held. A large number of exhibitors have applied for space. The contract for selling soft drinks has been awarded to the Havelock Mineral Springs Company.

G. A. Stanley Hopkins, of John Hopkins meat dealers and manufacturers, was up the St. John River last week on a buying trip.

James Moulson, the Sydney St. coffee merchant, has installed an electric motor for roasting and grinding coffee. Mr. Moulson, who occupies the position of a colonel in the uniform rank Knights of Pythias, is now in Boston attending the big biennial encampment there.

The store vacated some time ago by W. L. McElwaine, at the corner of Sydney and Leinster Sts., is now being operated as a grocery by C. W. Greenslade.

W. S. Clawson, agent for New Brunswick of a number of leading grocery concerns, is in Boston attending the Pythian convention.

E. A. Titus, of J. and J. S. Titus, St. Martins, general merchants, is in St. John on a buying trip.

NEWCASTLE, N.B.

Aug. 1.—The price of Manitoba flour dropped 15c this week. The best Manitoba now retails at $6.85.

Frank Walsh has purchased from L. T. Joudry the Campbellton meat market.

J. F. Tweedale, Arthurette; J. C. Manzer, Andover; R. W. Demmings, Perth; D. B. Hopkins and H. H. Hopkins, Andover; J. E. Armstrong, F. D. Sadler and M. L. Stewart, Perth, have organized the N. B. Produce Co., Ltd., for general grocery and provision business. They will operate at Perth.

Strawberries were scarce this season. Sackville exported 35,000 boxes, and could have sold twice as much. The grocers received on an average 11c a box.

HALIFAX.

Halifax, August 1.—General business conditions are satisfactory and a large quantity of goods are being turned over. Just at the present time the farmers are not marketing very much owing to their being engaged at hay making. The commission men are busy handling a lot of perishable fruit from the American markets, such as bananas, pears, peaches, plums and apples. A considerable quantity of this stock is reshipped from Halifax to points throughout the Province, and business in this line is very brisk.

Prof. M. Cumming, Secretary for Agriculture, in his annual report to the Government on live stock and the crop prospects, says that the yield this year will be about as follows:—Hay, 90 per cent.; oats and other grains, 97; potatoes and roots, 105; apples, 100; plums, 90; small fruits, 90 per cent.

Dairying cows have, owing to the good pastures, been giving an unusually good flow of milk, and butter has been produced in larger quantities than for a number of years.

The apple crop will be below that of last year, though the size and the quality of the fruit will be superior. A Wolfville grower writes that the apple crop in sight for export is half a million barrels. Baldwins, Kings, Ribstons, Greenings, Golden Russets and Bishop Pippins will be good; other varieties light. A Kingston correspondent says that gravensteins, nonpareils, golden russets and baldwins will be a full crop; other varieties light. The black spot, up to the present, is less in evidence than formerly. Plums and pears are considerably below the average. Small fruits are for the most part very promising.

Eggs are unusually scarce for the season of the year, and the result is that prices are going higher. A further advance was made this week, Nova Scotia stock being quoted at 21 cents, and Island eggs at 19½ cents. Unless the receipts increase the price will go still higher.

Butter is in good supply and the prices are unchanged. For the next few weeks the receipts will probably show a falling off, as the farmers will be busy hay making. Many jobbers still complain that the present prices for butter are too high. The pasturage this season is unusually good, and butter should be plentiful.

The series of public sessions of the Canadian Government's Fisheries Commission opened at Digby this week. Prof. Prince, in his opening remarks announced that in addition to the shad, the Minister of Marine, Hon. Mr. Brodeur, desired that the gaspereau and salmon fisheries of the Bay of Fundy be included in the commission's investigations. Valuable evidence was laid before the commission by fishermen from Barton, Plympton and Digby. After the meetings at Digby the commission will proceed to Annapolis.

The West India liner Amanda which arrived here this week from Jamaica landed three thousand bunches of bananas, and seven hundred bags of sugar. A large quantity of the bananas were forwarded to the Montreal market. The steamer Dageid from Montreal for Sydney and St. John's, Nfld., arrived at Summerside, P.E.I., this week with a fairly large freight, and took on board one thousand bags of potatoes and fifty boxes of cheese. The steamer Oruro from the West Indies also landed a large cargo of sugar at this port during the present week.

A novel exhibit may be made in the Fisheries Department of the Provincial Exhibition in September if the idea of the Fisheries Committee of the Board of Trade is carried out. A meeting of the committee was held at the Board of Trade this week, and it was thought that the exhibit of live fish could be greatly improved and made more interesting by the display of some of the strange fish brought to the surface by the steam trawlers now operating on the coast. Numbers of fish quite unfamiliar to fishermen have been captured in the big nets and it will be the aim of the committee to get as many of these as possible and have them exhibited in tanks. A. H. Whitman has been appointed superintendent of the fisheries exhibit.

News From Western Canada

The Chinese Sugar Brought in is Not Proving Too Satisfactory in Vancouver —Co-operative Society Organized in New Westminster.

VANCOUVER.

August 1.—By keeping an eye on the daily trade one can see that articles of Oriental manufacture are coming into strong competition with those of Canada. One thing, though, the Canadian product is the better. This can be noticed in the sugar which has arrived from Hong Kong. Mention was made a couple of weeks ago that a consignment was expected, and it is now placed with dealers. It is not as fine or as bright as the sugar produced by the B.C. Sugar Refining Company, though if cheapness is considered the dealer may take the article from the Orient while it lasts, as it is ¼c less per pound.

It may be accepted as an axiom that cheap things cannot be the best. In days of active competition profits are cut as close as possible, and if any goods are cheaper it is because of some particular reason. In the case of the Japan rice now offered for sale at a little less than the Canadian refined product, the reason is at once seen, namely, because husks may be found in that refined by the Japanese in this city, and the kernels are not so luminant. But it is cheaper and there is a demand for it.

Kelly, Douglas & Company have created a record in bringing into the city at one time two cars of tobacco, the product of the American Tobacco Co., Montreal. The value is placed at $50,000, and it is stated that this is the largest single order of tobacco to be received in Canada. This firm has just issued a memo book for retailers. At the top and bottom of the pages, on which are ruled lines for writing, are the sole agencies of the house. Every time the retailer jots down something to be remembered the name of at least one of these articles cannot but be seen.

Prices of necessities in the way of provisions are stiffening up. Eggs are now jobbed, or will be in a day or so, at 32 and 34, and the retail price will be advanced from 35c to 40c. Butter, while not increased, may do so, as the creameries are having all they can do to keep the demand supplied. Notwithstanding the expansion of the dairy industry, there is no butter going into storage. This, too, has been a very favorable year. The spring was wet and rains have been more frequent than for several summers. As for the imported butters being shipped in, they have not the freshness of the local, which caused the demand, and that being the case fluctuations of a cent or two are nearly always taking place.

Outside wholesale business is continuing good. This is the season for outfitting for the Winter, and the trade is at a time when it can be handled easily.

A co-operative society has been started in New Westminster, and at a meeting held this week, when plans of the association were discussed and officers elected, matters progressed so far that a site for the store was considered. Shares are $5 each, the ownership of two shares constituting membership. The officers are: J. H. Campbell, president; Thomas Turnbull, vice-president; W. Brown, treasurer; W. Dodd, secretary; J. Archibald, R. Hampton, R. G. Patterson, John Roscoe, W. Beggs and A. E. Hale, trustees; A. F. Duncan and S. M. Strople, auditors. Last winter an attempt was made to form a similar society in Vancouver and though considerable canvassing was done it was found that a success could not be made of it. The principal reason was that retailers who had accounts out stated that if any debtors were to join an instant settlement would be demanded of the bill. As times were not of the best the customers felt they were "up against it" and refrained.

The United Commercial Travellers enjoyed themselves at a picnic on Saturday last. They left on the Britannia at 2 o'clock in the afternoon for Bowen Island, where the afternoon was spent and tea partaken of, and in the evening the boat steamed up Howe Sound and back. On Friday, the rain threatened, but Saturday was fine and clear.

Mrs. Bryant, travelling representative of the Tetley Tea Company, was at Vernon for several days recently giving a demonstration in the Hudson's Bay Company's stores there.

William Whyte, second vice-president of the C.P.R., was in the city and left for the north on Monday night. He spoke about the great wheat crop in particular, and while it may be a long way from the grain fields, Vancouver has a great interest in them, apart from the general results that come to the Province as a whole when good crops are garnered. This city has a successful flour mill already, and with the increase in the grain acreage in the Northwest elevators will be erected here in the trade of shipping wheat through this city to the world's markets. Mr. White says he is not too sanguine in placing the estimate of the yield at 120,000,000 bushels.

Guelph and London Are Full of Old Boys and Girls in Their Holiday Weeks —Arranging Big Picnic in Chatham.

LONDON.

Grocery travelers are on the road again after two weeks' holidays, it is to be hoped well refreshed after a period of relaxation.

This is a pretty busy week with local retail grocers and other food providers. The old boys' reunion has brought thousands of people to the city, and there are, of course, as many additional mouths to fill. The result is that everybody is busy and there will be no half-holiday this week.

The mayor had a chat with J. Graves, representative of the Heinz Pickle Co., a day or two ago, and his worship was informed that London's chances for getting the Canadian branch of this company's big concern are very bright. Mr. Graves has been spending some days in the country hereabouts and is much impressed with it. He has also been instructing some of the prominent farmers how to raise the stuff needed by the firm, and is confident they can make it a paying proposition catering to the company's wants. The mayor thinks that to secure this industry is well worth the city's while making an effort.

Millson and Robinson, for some time employed as clerks in local grocery stores, have purchased the business of C. J. Farr, South London.

CHATHAM.

Aug. 3.—Preparations for the big Merchants' Picnic on Aug. 20 still go merrily on. The committee have enlisted a capable aide in the person of Eddie Dore of Hamilton, who was present at a meeting last week and at their request presented a draft program, and gave them the benefit of his experience in the way of suggestions. Mr. Dore has taken a warm interest in the outing, and has done quite a bit to stir up a few of the merchants who showed any inclination of holding back. He was unanimously elected master of ceremonies, and will preside over the sports on the big day. The program, which has not as yet been finally revised, includes a good list of sports, among them a broom ball game between teams from the grocers on the one side, and the remaining merchants on the other. Fearman & Co., Gorman, Eckert & Co. and McCormick's are providing special events. Merchants in all lines should join hands in booming the picnic among clerks and customers, and in making their day the big day of the year.

Tobacco growers in Colchester South and vicinity are stated to be taking earnest hold on the problem of ensuring the stability of the industry. Large growers, among them A. R. Ferriss and Jas. Howie, have expressed their willingness to build tobacco dry kilns for the purpose of demonstrating what an improvement artificial curing is over the old method. The price is governed largely by the way the product is cured, and buyers have held out hopes of fancy prices if the growers would kiln cure their crop. It is hoped that this movement will result in putting the crop on a par with wheat and other grains so far as a reasonable stability of price is concerned, and a movement is on foot to establish a warehouse in Harrow as a purchasing depot as soon as some growers finally decide to experiment with the southern process of curing.

W. N. Warburton, formerly manager of the Chatham, Wallaceburg & Lake Erie electric line, has purchased the grocery business of Huth & Laffrey, at the corner of Hess St. and Charlton Ave., Hamilton. The deal was concluded and the new proprietor took possession on Thursday. Mr. Warburton is now engaged in moving his family and household goods to the Ambitious City. Mr. Warburton's son, Albert, formerly of H. A. Andrews, will be associated with him, the firm being known as Warburton & Son.

Representatives of the county independent telephone lines waited on the council last week, asking the city to reserve the privilege of allowing them to locate a toll station in Chatham. This would place the city in touch with a large number of buyers in the county who would not be reached by the Bell, and should prove of advantage to local merchants. If a competitive local system is to be established, however, local capital will have to make the first move.

Ernest Sloan of the grocery department of J. S. Richardson's department store, Tilbury, left last week for the Northwest, for the benefit of his health. His place has been taken by Jas. Campbell of Sandwich.

J. Caron, formerly of Highgate, has purchased the confectionery business conducted in the McKinlay block, Ridgetown for some time past by H. C. Hunter. He intends making considerable improvements to the premises.

James Bomorito has opened a fruit store in the building recently occupied by Henderson & Morriss, on Erie St., Leamington.

Sandy McVean, the popular Dresden miller, is being boomed locally as a candidate for the Dominion house in opposition to D. A. Gordon, the present Liberal M.P. for East Kent. Sandy is coy, however.

W. J. Cameron, who formerly conducted a grocery in Ridgetown, has purchased a store in Southampton.

Jas. H. Kadwell has repainted the front of the store on Grand Ave. recently purchased by him from Fred. Wood, the new proprietor's name appearing in striking letters above the door.

A summer line which could probably be profitably pushed by many grocers is ginger ale and similar soft drinks. To the grocer usually falls the pleasant duty of equipping the picnic party, and, when he supplies practically everything else, there is no reason why he should not supply the drinks as well. At this season of the year soft drinks could be handled side by side with cooked ham, canned meats and fancy biscuits. Wm. Anderson, of this city, featured soft drinks in a recent advertisement.

Geo. and Richard Zakoor, the local fruit dealers, are opening a branch store in Sarnia.

Now that the fruit and vegetable season is on, the grocer's trade in "perishables" may be advantageously boomed by judicious window display. Recently Bradley & Son devoted one window to a showing of vegetables, embracing practically everything on the market. A great difficulty in such displays is to keep the vegetables looking fresh, though a slight sprinkling of water and the use of the shady side of the window will work wonders.

Coarse cheesecloth is a great thing for adding to the tastiness of a window display where goods, such as fancy biscuits or cooked meats, are exposed. The cheesecloth is not fine enough to obscure the view, and yet gives a remarvable impression of cleanliness. A show case frame draped with cheesecloth seems just as effective in excluding flies as a regular show case—and it looks cleaner, too.

Bob. Wilson, formerly of Jas. N. Massey's grocery, has joined H. A. Andrew's staff.

The Chilliwack Canning and Preserving Company has decided to instal an evaporating plant for the treatment of apples and prunes. It was pointed out that the quantity of apples and prunes in sight this year, a handsome profit on operations would be made.

George Thirnton, of Promotory, Chilliwack district, has Salome and Romani apples and Pound pears as fresh almost as the day they were picked last Fall. They are firm and solid, with fine flavor. What he wants for Summer use he packs in dry sand.

GUELPH.

Guelph, Aug. 3.—We are off to a good start. Our Old Home Week is a success assured by one day's receipts at the gate. The glad hand, lots of good business and a happy bunch of grocers is the best report this week.

Among the many visitors were numerous grocers from all over Canada. Tonight we have all kinds of cake walks and a general mixup—more of the latter. But there is nothing of an unpleasant nature so far. The grocers deserve credit for using creamery butter from outside to hold the farmers in check so the 40c butter was no go. Lots to eat and no unusual hold-up in prices. Just a good fair price in all kinds of groceries. Don't forget to register if you come up.

ST. THOMAS.

The familiar faces of the boys on the road who through the "united permission" of the wholesale grocers are at present enjoying their well-earned vacations, are missed by the retail grocer. Next week they will resume their usual trips and be welcomed back. While the holiday is a pleasure to them, it is of real benefit to the average grocer, as it gives him a much-needed opportunity to reduce his surplus stock and clean up on various lines. The travelers calling in St. Thomas are a gentlemanly lot without exception. The boys will be made happy by the fat orders awaiting them, especially on account of the big Oddfellows' convention taking place in this city on the 10th to 13th August, inclusive. The merchants have assisted the committee by taking advertising space in the souvenir gotten up for the occasion, and no doubt will be repaid for their generosity.

The N. Y. State Legislature have recently passed a law compelling railway corporations to pay their employes every two weeks, in consequence thereof the N.Y.C. Co. are busy arranging to comply with the law and as this city is situated on the N.Y.C. lines what a great benefit it would be to the grocers of this city if the Whitney Government would enact a similar law and do away with monthly payments and thus remove the greatest obstacle to a cash business here. The Retail Merchants' Association could endorse this legislation, and the already popular government would gain the good will of the labor organizations thereby.

An Italian banana peddler, Angelo Caruso, was before the magistrate for breach of the transient traders' and peddlers' act, and although engaged in the business for the past two years and found guilty, was fined $2 and dismissed with his promise that he would take out a license. Between the Italians and the Greeks the grocers do very little fruit business in this city.

OTTAWA.

August 4.—A very good market with everything present in quantity and selling briskly was in evidence in Ottawa Saturday. Buyers and sellers were out in full force and seemed ready for business. The farmers want to make hay while the sun shines; or rather the rain falls, and were willing to dispose of their produce where they could find a purchaser. There was a good offering of vegetables of the usual kinds. There was no lack of potatoes, as was the case Thursday, but the prices, like those of Thursday, were fancy ones. Of course, you could get old potatoes for $1.50 to $1.60 a bag, but the infirmities of advancing age had in the majority of cases made the offering very decrepit. Butter is practically unchanged in price. Eggs are a little stiffer, sales being made at as high a figure as 25c. They seem to be scarce, for some reason.

The Ontario and Manitoba Flour Mills Co. are incorporated with a capital stock of $750,000, the chief place of business to be in Ottawa. The following Ottawa men are interested: A. W. Fraser, J. G. Gibson, John Mulhall, H. H. Williams, James Gibson, A. G. Marshall and Newton J. Ker. The business of the company is to carry on a general grain business, and to manufacture and sell flour.

Millions of moths appeared in the city the other evening, and where they suddenly sprung from seemed a mystery. Thousands of the insets fluttered around the arc lights on the corners, clung to the windows of stores, where they were attracted by the light, and stuck to the walls of the buildings. Fruit stores that had their doors open were soon full of the moths, which took unwarranted liberties with the customers by such playful tricks as dropping into their glasses of ice cream soda. Next morning the main streets of the city were littered with the bodies of the insects, which had fallen during the night. The windows and doors of many shops on Bank and Sparks Streets were covered with the moths, which clung there in an apparently drowsy condition. Brooms had to be utilized to sweep down the insects. People wondered if another plague of locusts had come.

Dawson Brothers, who have kept a large general store at Bell's Corners for many years, and are widely known throughout Carleton county, will retire from business early next year. They have sold out for a handsome sum to George Wilson, a farmer living between Britannia and Bell's Corners. The bargain was closed recently. The store is a general one and does a large business. Mr. Wilson will take possession next March.

Ernest A. Lintel, butcher, Somerset Street, and Mrs. Lintel have the sympathy of their many friends in the death of their infant daughter, Una Bell Lintel, which took place last week at the family residence.

The business situation shows an improvement during the past few weeks. In Ottawa collections have been improving. Small orders for immediate shipment largely make up the volume of business doing by jobbers. Retail trade is fair as a whole, being stimulated by price reduction sales, though complaint of stocks not moving rapidly from some localities as in previous years.

2,000,000 CASES OF SALMON.

Estimate of Pack Below Average of Last Seven Years.

According to advices from New Westminster the estimated salmon pack for 1908 is 2,000,000 cases. This is slightly over that of last year, but not equal to the general average of the past seven years, which was 2,957,438 cases. On the other hand, it is stated that stocks never reached, within the period mentioned, so low a mark as they did this spring.

In the estimate given for the present season only slightly over half the number of traps in the various parts of Puget Sound and British Columbia are taken into account.

From Mr. Deaville, who has just returned from Puget Sound, it has been learned that of the ninety traps located in these waters there are at present in operation: six at West Beach; one at Strawberry Bay; six at Salmon Point; four at Lopez Island; seven between Sand Point and Blaine, and six at sundry other places, while around Point Roberts some twenty are catching fish. In northern waters there are no traps used so far, that is in Canadian territorial waters.

One feature that enters into the matter upon which calculations are formed this year is, what is regarded as an "off" year for humpbacks (pinks, as they are called when canned). These fish run every other year only, the pack of them for last year having been 448,730 cases. Consequently no allowance is made for a pack of humpbacks this season. Indeed, not until the year 1911 can it be expected that a full pack of humpbacks will be obtained, for in 1909 many, if not the major number of trap men say there will be no time for the packing of humpbacks, that being the year when the big quadrennial pack of sockeyes is expected, so-called, as those know who are in any way acquainted with the industry from the general plentifulness of the fish every fourth year.

THE SMALLEST GROCERY.

The march of progress in Boston and the razing of one of its business blocks has disclosed the fact that that city has for some time enjoyed the distinction of possessing what was probably the smallest grocery store in the United States. It was a little establishment on Washington Street.

Its measurements are 3 by 3½ feet, although a few inches had recently been added. This store holds the proprietor, a large man, a telephone, three cases of eggs, a quantity of tea, coffee, condensed milk and other canned goods, and it has a tiny refrigerator, although this is not entirely within the store's confines.

A customer does not enter the store when making a purchase, but stands on the sidewalk. A window is opened, business is transacted, goods passed out, money exchanged, and both makers of the bargain satisfied.

The proprietor says the small rent, $10, is the secret of his success. When there is a small margin of profit on groceries there is little to be made by the grocer who has a big rental and the expenses of teams and delivery service.

One of the riddles of keeping so small a shop has been solved by this grocer's experience. How to keep a large enough stock on hand in small quarters has been a conundrum too hard for many, and when one examines the little ice chest filled with butter and cheese the question naturally arises, "What would he do if I purchased two extra ounces of cheese to-night?"

Yet, in this remarkable little store a business of not less than $8,000 a year was transacted and—naturally—at a good profit.—New York Journal of Commerce.

SPLENDID STORE BURNED AT FERNIE.

The photographs reproduced herewith show the window and the store interior of the grocery department of the Trites-Wood Co., of Fernie, B.C., one of the firms which suffered very severely in the disastrous fire which visited the western towns this week. As can be seen from the photos the store is thoroughly up-to-date, modern fittings and methods being used throughout. The Trites-Wood Co. are said to have lost altogether about $150,000. It is to be hoped that with the rebuilding of the town, which seems probable, the company will be able to restore their fine premises.

"Men Who Sell Things"

Self-Restraint a Large Factor in Success—How the Live Salesman Improves Dull Months—A Salesman's Creed—Personal Magnetism and Its Part in the Game of Trade.

By Walter D. Moody—Serial rights for Canada purchased by the MacLean Publishing Co. from the publishers, A. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

The salesman who succeeds believes that his position implies that the firm puts its trust in him, that it calls for the best work in him, and that he should perform it to the best of his ability. That is the only view that brings any satisfaction to the doer.

The salesman who skimps his work not only runs an excellent chance of being detected, but he is constantly injuring himself.

The position of the salesman at the top of the sales sheet may seem to be up-hill, but to the salesman on the down-grade it only increases the opportunities of the up-grade man to try to cheat.

No salesman ever built his house upon the sands but some hurricane came along and blew it over. In this age of lightning-like business changes, who can predict when the next hurricane will arrive? When it comes to the salesman it is better for him to be living in a secure place.

No salesman can tell to what test his salesmanship will be put. It is better, then, to fortify himself against the day of trial with true knowledge, so that no matter what strain is put upon it, his professional skill will pass through triumphantly and bring to him promotion and honor.

The most selfish salesmen agree that it is poor policy, if nothing worse, to cheat oneself. The best is none too good to attempt.

It is sometimes necessary to have nerve enough to lose some business, in order to gain the best business that is to be secured on your territory. A great many salesmen form the practice in sales-building of holding a dime so close to the eye that they fail utterly to perceive the dollars beyond.

Self-restraint Brought Success.

One of the most successful salesmen of my acquaintance employed the quality of self-restraint in his work on the road to a marked degree.

At the time of my first meeting with him he was very much cast down because his house had intimated a desire to let him go, for the reason that his sales did not seem large enough for the territory he was covering—mostly in large cities.

He related his experience to me, and his plan was one of the most logical I have ever known; but during the two years he had been representing that house he had not been able to secure their confidence to the extent the he could frankly confide in them his plans for ultimate success.

We talked things over, and I encouraged him to persist in his methods, maintaining that they were bound to win, because, whether he knew it or not, he was working along highly scientific lines. I urged him to take his managers more fully into his confidence, which he was shortly afterwards able to do through a fortunate combination of circumstances. And then I watched him advance, which he did by leaps and bounds. To-day he enjoys an enviable reputation for high-grade salesmanship in that very house that wanted to let him out a few years since.

On first entering his territory, his plan was to look the ground over carefully. He then commenced to build, always with an eye to the future. The prospect of immediate sales failed to dazzle him, unless they were of the sort that would make good timber for erecting his superstructure as a whole.

When calling on the trade in a large city, it was entirely foreign to his policy to jump right in and sell to every dealer that had a Bradstreet or Dun rating that would pass muster in the credit department. Instead, he cautiously laid his acquaintance among a limited number of the very best merchants, and began by trying to secure their confidence, and thus draw their sympathy largely to himself and his house. He believed that the best way to do that was not by selling them the largest possible bill every time he had a chance, but by often selling them the smallest bill possible.

Frequently on his return visits, if conditions were not just right, he would not attempt a sale at all, preferring to cement his relations by helpful suggestions, and otherwise strengthen his position in their confidence.

In starting a new customer, he highly favored the plan of selling merely a sample or "sorting up" order. From the small vantage-point gained, step by step he followed up his work, never permitting himself to betray a confidence once reposed in him by overloading a customer.

He was clear-headed, patient, honest, logical, courteous, always on his guard, and extremely tactful. Finally, when his preliminary work was complete, he moved in and took possession of his own. He sells the very best accounts in his territory, and no competitor can either undermine or wrench away from him the confidence his customers repose in him.

To sum up his work from start to finish, he succeeded because he was not over-anxious, and knew the value of making his work fit a set plan.

Playing a Waiting Game.

It is a great thing to be able to play, not a dull game, but a waiting game in salesmanship. The salesman gets what he goes after, provided only he is not afraid to work and sweat. But he must not forget that it is a good thing to sweat mentally once in a while, as well as physically.

There are no dull months for the intelligent salesman. Dull months are for dull salesmen, not for live ones. If you were a carpenter and your saw was dull, would you say, "I can't work this month; my saw is dull"? No. You would get up early in the morning and file that saw before breakfast. You would make it eat its way through an oak board like a ten-year-old boy through a piece of pumpkin pie.

The live salesman does exactly the same thing. At the first sign of approaching dulness he sharpens up his business tools and goes after business. And he gets it, too.

The salesman who expects trade to be dull, and is willing it should be dull, will have it dull.

Likewise the salesman who expects his customers to have no more confidence in him than in the ordinary salesman will find just what he expects.

The salesman who lags back on the straight and narrow path of rectitude, and says, "I've got my customers just where I want them now, and I'll take pretty good care that they get enough of my goods to keep them from buying elsewhere," just because he has succeeded in winning their confidence for the time being will get just what he is looking for—lost prestige, by the shortest possible route. You can have lost prestige, like dull months, if you want it. But you'll be out of date if you get either, because confidence is the basis of all right trade.

The right kind of salesman believes in doing his duty every day, and in doing each duty faithfully.

Overlooking an Opportunity.

President Roosevelt tells a good story to urge duty and emphasize his oft-repeated declarations that opportunities are often overlooked.

"I remember down in the village where I lived there was a decent but dreamy young fellow, and a little apt to spend his time thinking how well he could have led his life under other conditions. His mother was a hard-working woman. One day he was reading in the paper an account of a fire in New York and the heroic deeds of a fireman in rescuing people from the burning building. His mother was busy around the room. Soon he put down the paper and said, with a sigh, 'Oh, how I would like to rescue somebody from a burning building!'

"His mother answered, 'Well, I'll tell you. This building is not on fire, but if you will get in the kindling wood, I'll be obliged to you'."

There is a good moral lesson in that for all salesmen.

The way to be a good salesman is to be a good neighbor to your customers, then a good neighbor to your fellow-salesmen in your own establishment, and to act toward your firm so that you become the kind of man they are glad to have work for them, or for whom they are glad to work. The business life of the employer and that of the employe should go hand in hand, supporting one another. Make your firm feel glad to have you in their business family; feel that you are a good man to do business for them, and a good man for them to do business with.

A Salesman's Creed.

That's what the right kind of salesman does. His creed for all day, and every day in the year except Sunday, is:

"I believe in the goods I am selling, in the firm I am working for, and in my ability to get results.

"I believe that honest goods can be sold to honest men by honest methods.

"I believe in working, not waiting; in laughing, not weeping; in boosting, not knocking; and in the pleasure of selling goods.

"I believe that a man gets what he goes after; that one order to-day is worth two orders to-morrow; and that no man is down and out until he has lost faith in himself.

"I believe in to-day and in the work I am doing; in to-morrow when it comes, and in the work I hope to do; and in the sure reward which the future holds.

"I believe in courtesy, in generosity, in good cheer, in kindness, in friendship, and in honest competition.

"I believe there is an order somewhere for every man ready to take one. I believe I am ready right now."

CHAPTER XIII.

The Mind as a Magnet.

He who adopts no high standards is the only one who never fails.

Half the pleasure in making a big success consists in knowing just how it has been accomplished—in being able to say, "I used this or that chance to good advantage"; "I should have failed if I had not known just how and when to apply this faculty or that talent, as the case required. How glad I am that I understand myself and my work, and can use what accomplishments I have intelligently!"

But a good many men lose half the pleasure of their success. All they know is that they have worked hard and done their best, and, "as luck would have it," everything has prospered. They are satisfied with the material results, so that it does not occur to them to find out specifically to what powers within themselves these results can be attributed.

What Qualities Bring Success?

If you were to ask them by what steps they had developed into "geniuses," they would have to answer, like Topsy, that they "jest growed." Or they perhaps would privately agree with you, if you called them "born salesman." It would be more satisfying to know just what qualities, alleged to have been born in a man, operate in assuring the success of everything he undertakes.

Any salesman who seriously hopes to improve his work must sometimes weigh very carefully the mental qualifications that tend to make him either a success or a failure. If he is at all thoughtful, he attaches more importance to his progress than he does to the weighing of external conditions, such as labor troubles, a shortage in crops, rumors of war, etc. He knows that the laws that govern the mind's action have a more direct bearing on the results of his work as a salesman than foreign complications and the stringency in trade conditions described as "hard times."

Practical psychology is a mighty motive power in business-getting, and is receiving marked attention on the part of thinking men in various walks of business life.

Some people speak of the "soul power" which gives its possessor some measure of control over others. We hear of ministers and missionary workers who are practically masters of whole communities. Sometimes they are opposed and even persecuted when they begin their work, but end by commanding the docile obendience of the persons who at the start made trouble. Other people describe the same quality as "psychic force." The important thing is not so much the name given to such an agency as the fact that it enables a man to make others see and accept his point of view as their own. The vital question is, whether or not it can be used by salesmen as a means for increasing the volume of their orders.

Exercising "Soul Power."

Some salesmen have demonstrated that this can be done. They seldom hear a refusal. Customers who are prejudiced and obdurate forget their natural combativeness when a salesman of the type we are describing appears. He gets their order, sometimes without any argument at all, and almost always without any difficulty or waste of time. It seems natural that all people should agree with him, accept the ideas he advances, and do very nearly what he wants them to do.

Either consciously or unconsciously, he is exercising what has been variously described as "soul power," "psychic force" and "personal magnetism."

There is no question that the power of attraction which gives one man ascendency over others can be cultivated by any one who is sufficiently persistent and painstaking in the effort. Psychologists have not given us any formula for developing this quality. Any one who is interested, however, can suggest ways and means for himself, which will help toward the desired end.

Earnestness and Magnetism.

The first step toward accomplishment in this direction is a careful study of the successful men who are described as "born salesmen," and who get their results by exercising this mental force. It will be found that all men possessed of personal magnetism are very much in earnest. Their intense earnestness is magnetic. Their minds are filled with one controlling idea—success in whatever undertaking they have in hand.

Their earnestness cannot fail to have its effect on every prospective customer with whom they come in contact. Besides its direct effect on the man addressed, the quality of earnestness in the salesman has also an immediate effect upon himself, in increasing his powers of reasoning and self-expression. By stimulating these powers, and through their agency, it also has an indirect effect upon the customer.

Among people who live much alone, and whose labor exercises their muscles and not their brains, a common and significant phenomenon is observed. We are all familiar with cases where an ignorant, stolid fellow, ordinarily incapable of expressing himself in speech very well, has suddenly found himself gifted with eloquence at some emotional crisis in his life—eloquence not the less splendid and powerful for grammatical inaccuracies.

When this happens, the mind of the speaker has swept aside by the very force of earnestness the limitations which hampered it in ordinary intercourse. The same principle accounts for a man's ability to improvise means of escape from great and sudden danger, which would have been entirely beyond his ingenuity at other times.

NEVER HEARD OF HIM

Trade paper advertising is essential to the manufacturer; not always for the direct returns it may bring, but because it helps the salesman on the road.

Every firm that advertises makes it just that much easier for the man on the road to sell goods.. Let a "drummer" start out to sell a line of goods not advertised in a technical or general paper, and he must work ten times as hard to sell a bill of goods as the man whose employers believe in printer's ink.

One of the largest rubber goods manufacturers had an experience, recently, which brought this fact very prominently to his notice.

"No use to advertise," he said; "our goods are so well known, that they don't need to be advertised."

One of his salesmen called on a dealer in a small town, and after quite a talk, he discovered that the dealer had not even heard of his goods.

The dealer was a subscriber to one of the journals devoted to the rubber trade; turning to the salesman, he said, "See that paper? Well, your firm doesn't advertise in it, so how could you expect me to hear of it?"

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Aug. 6, 1908.

The receipts of cheese for last week were 90,062 boxes, as against 91,057 boxes for the same period of last year. Total receipts for the season since May 1, 858,603 boxes, against 1,000,995 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. A comparison of these figures shows that so far this season we are behind last year's record by 142,392 boxes. Taking into consideration the grave disadvantage which the trade has labored under this year the record is not so bad after all. An authority on the cheese trade said that he thought that each individual cow in the Dominion was straining to make up for the deficit in their numbers. It will be remembered that last fall a large number of cows were killed owing to the shortage in feed and as a result of this the yield of milk has been short. Whilst there has been this shortage it has not been nearly as great relatively speaking as the number of cows which were killed, therefore this fact led to the statement that each cow was contributing more per capita to the supply.

When this fact is taken into consideration it will be seen that if this misfortune regarding feed shortage had not overtaken the farmers last fall the yield of milk this year would have been a record one. It is interesting to know that the use of condensed milk is becoming much more general than formerly, and all this is good for the farmer, who has an opportunity of selling his milk to more competitors, therefore he can get a better price. This fact, of course, will exert a tendency to curtail the cheese and butter production.

Shipments of cheese from Montreal last week amounted to 77,428 boxes, as compared with 76,253 boxes for the previous week, and 72,626 boxes for the corresponding week of last year. Total shipments from Montreal since May 1, 761,003 boxes, as compared with 891,112 boxes for the same period of last year. Total shipments via Quebec since May 1, 20,159 boxes, as compared with 34,743 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Total exports since May 1 781,162 boxes, as compared with 925,855 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Export price of cheese rules at 12 to 12¼ cents for easterns and 12¼ to 12½ cents for westerns. Exports of butter last week amounted to 5,822 packages, as compared with 2,621 packages for the previous week, and 9,439 packages for the corresponding week of last year. Total exports since May 1, 55,223 packages, as compared with 36,062 packages for the corresponding period of last year. Receipts of butter for the last week were 20,687 packages, as against 16,901 packages for the previous week, and 18,805 packages for the corresponding week of last year. Total receipts since May 1, 209,800 packages, as compared with 218,538 packages for the corresponding period of last year. Prices of butter are a shade easier, ruling at 23½c to 24c.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, August 6, 1908.

Canadian markets are rather irregular this week from a variety of causes. The British market under average shipments from Denmark and the United States has kept fairly steady and considerable Canadian bacon has been sent over at prices ranging from 58 to 60 shillings. Demand in this market is good and the outlook for a continuance of receptive conditions for some time at least is very fair.

The home markets, too, continue active, with the usual heavy summer demand in evidence. Taken together these conditions would seem to be likely to work out to the advantage of the Canadian packer.

There are other things to consider, however. Several factors this week have played with the hog market and as a result deliveries have been very light. The Monday holiday, for one thing, which was pretty generally observed in Ontario, kept the farmers away from the factories. The prevalence of harvesting operations, too, is having considerable effect, and the hot weather is another matter which is working out to limit the supply.

In the face of these light deliveries it would seem in the natural course of events that prices would advance. This time, however, buyers seem to be holding off, trusting to get along on light supplies. $6.05 f.o.b. is the price offered to-day, ten cents less than the price a week ago. With these conditions in evidence what the next week may bring forth is rather a matter of speculation.

Conditions in the United States markets are summarized in the Journal of Commerce as follows:—"The speculative trading in hog products for the week just past has been quite brisk and prices, while irregular, tending toward a higher level, with the general feeling strong, due to the bullish condition of the live hog situation. There has been considerable buying of pork for investment, while the packing interest took lard and the shippers ribs, and the offerings were generally small; while the selling has been scattered and by the smaller holders, who were taking profits. The cash situation has shown some improvement, particularly in meat, and a large business was reported early in the week. The demand for lard was slow, as is the rule at this time of the year, but the indications point to a better demand for foreign account as well as for tierced beef before long.

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS — There is a fair demand for most lines, and the market is steady. Cables received here show a decline in bacon prices. Canadian short cut clear is a little stronger this week, now being quoted at $23 to $23.50. Otherwise prices remain the same.

BUTTER—The market for creamery is easier, due to prevailing conditions in British markets, as well as easier feeling in the United States. PROVISIONS—Rather quiet has been all provisions and kindred lines this week. No doubt the holiday has had much to do with this, at least dealers attribute the lightness of business to this fact. Summer lines—smoked and cooked bacon and hams—have been going well, but other lines are slow. Dressed hogs are up another half cent, though trade has been rather light.

EGGS—Supplies keep on increasing, and are now freer than demand. Extra choice new laids still call for 24c and good eggs are around 22 and 23 cents. It would not be surprising, however, to note a slight decline in the price during the week to induce buying.

CHEESE—Very little demand exists for the various grades of cheese, and while supplies are light they are sufficient for present needs. There are fewer cheese factories operating this year, farmers preferring to send their milk to the creameries. This might lead one to suppose that there would be little cheese later on, but the fact that the export lines have greatly declined warrants the assumption that there will be plenty of cheese for the Canadian markets the coming winter. Prices are at last week's quotations.

BUTTER—Creamery lines continue to hold the fort, and while supplies are plentiful and increasing, demand, too, keeps fully abreast. Prices remain unchanged from a week ago. Business in the city is slower than during the past few weeks, but country trade is active.

POULTRY—Slowly improving is the market feature of this line. Of course mainly live birds are offered, though some dead ones may be had. Supplies are free and much in advance of demand, though buyers are more numerous than a month ago. By September business in this line is expected to be active again.

FRUIT, PROVISION AND FISH NOTES.

James V. Gentile, fruiter, Toronto, has assigned.

New Liskeard, Ont., opened its first farmers' market on July 25.

A curator has been appointed for the butter factory business of Emile D. Lazure, Compton, Que.

The lobster fishery in Newfoundland is said to be the worst for some years.

British Columbia fruit-growers report a phenomenal growth of all kinds of fruit.

The salmon season has scarcely started, though some good catches are reported from British Columbia.

E. Gibb, Johnshaven, Nfld, is experimenting with the export of living Labrador salmon to the English market. A steamer fitted for the purpose is now on its way with a cargo of fish.

That Alberta should control and operate the pork-packing industry in that Province, appears to be the trend of the evidence given before the commission now investigating the subject.

Mr. Duffy, one of the largest fruit exporters on the Coast, is arranging for a trial shipment of 8,000 boxes of B. C. fruit to Australia in October and another 6,000 in November, the fruit being mostly apples and pears.

California's fruit crop is expected to be double that of last year. In round numbers 7,500 cars were shipped in 1907 and 15,000 will come out this season. The grape crop is expected to be the greatest ever known in the State.

Canada's exhibit of butter at the Franco-British exhibition takes the form of statues. One group depicts King Edward and President Fallieres shaking hands and another group represents Jacques Cartier, the discoverer of Canada, standing in a butter boat.

Recent government census returns show that the value of Canadian creamery butter and cheese only, produced in 1907, exceeded in value by over five million dollars that of 1900, and show an increase of over two million dollars since 1905.

The total annual production of dairy produce in Canada is estimated to be nearly $100,000,000, divided as follows.

Creamery butter and cheese	$36,000,000
Dairy butter	22,000,000
Condensed milk	1,000 000
Milk for direct consumption	35,000,000
Total	$94,000,000

J. A. Ruddick, dairy commissioner for Canada, says that although the exports of dairy produce, mainly butter and cheese, have declined to the extent of over $7,000,000 since 1903, in which year our exports of dairy products reached the maximum, the increase in the consumption of milk, butter, cheese and condensed milk in Canada amounts to several million dollars more than the decline in exports.

P. D. Hodgetts, director of the Ontario Fruit Bureau, is circulating reports and literature among fruit-growers telling them to stick to the co-operative associations. Last year it is said apple buyers offered higher than prevailing prices for their apples to members of the associations if they would but separate themselves from the organizations and sell independently and Mr. Hodgetts says they are doing the same thing this year.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Eastern Markets Firm and Brighter—Conditions Dull in Ontario—Everything Depends on Western Wheat Crop.

Everything these days seems to depend to a greater or less extent on the report of the western crops. Unfavorable reports give a feeling of strength to the flour market, optimistic advices act oppositely and all this has its effect on the cereal markets as well.

In Montreal and eastern markets demand seems to be brightening up and conditions appear more encouraging than for several weeks past. In Ontario the flour market is dull and cereal business, while fairly good, presents no new features.

Very little export business is being done these days, prices being scarcely on a permissible basis.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Flour is firm and in much better demand than for some weeks. For some time trade which has been passing has consisted almost entirely of the hand-to-mouth variety, but now buyers are the cause of considerable activity in the market. The supply of last year's flour is very limited and hardly likely to last until the new crop of wheat is harvested, and the new flour milled. This will result in continued firmness in the local market.

ROLLED OATS—The demand for rolled oats has followed other lines of its class and has been in good demand during the week. The market is firm, and prices have not altered, although in some quarters it is thought it is displaying a strong undertone which will result in an advance.

FEED—The long quietness which has prevailed in this market is beginning to disappear and demand during the week has been much better than for some time. The market is firm, but prices remain unchanged.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—The market is dull, though a strong feeling continues in evidence. Part of this seems to be caused by "crop-killing" stories from the west, and it is just possible that prices may be advanced again under such influences. But little or nothing is doing locally, and prices are unchanged from last week's quotations.

W. A. Black, manager of the Ogilvie Milling Company, Winnipeg, makes an estimate of 120,000,000 bushels of wheat for the Canadian west this season. Harvesting will likely begin about August 10, three weeks earlier than last year.

The Maple Leaf Flour Mills Company, Kenora, Ont., is said to have purchased the Wheat City Mills, Brandon, Man., for a large figure. The latter industry has been in financial difficulties lately, and the sale is a result of negotiations with the Merchants Bank. The plant will be considerably enlarged.

Robert Stewart, president of the American Cereal Company, Chicago, w a branch factory in Peterboro, declared lately that as soon as the Trent Valley canal is completed he will build barges and guarantee to haul 6,000,000 bushels of oats and 4,000,000 bushels of wheat yearly into Peterboro to be made into "Quaker Oats" and flour, thence to be shipped in the company's boats to Montreal for export.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Canadian Peaches Are Here—Splendid Apples and Thimbleberries—Watermelons and Bananas the Best Sellers—Potatoes Declining—Rush for Tomatoes—Lobster Season Over.

Very little change has come over the fruit markets this week. The red raspberry is still being offered, though in fewer quantities, but the thimbleberry has taken its place. It is a large, sound, firm stock and prices are easier. Imported fruit, especially peaches and plums, have advanced, but no harm will be done by this for Ontario markets report the advent of the Niagara peach, which appears to be of very fine quality. Bananas and watermelons are the best sellers just now. Canadian apples are being offered in large lots now and judging by the arrivals coming in are a better stock than last year.

Potatoes are the leading feature among vegetables and with the appearance in larger quantities of home-grown stock prices on the imported and Canadian lines have dropped. Tomatoes are good sellers and the low prices should and do induce sales. Green lines are easier and the demand is good, while supplies are getting freer all the while.

The Canadian lobster season is over and very few of the crustaceans are to be had. In fact all sea lines are rather slow arrivals considering the brisk demand. Fresh fish, too, are none too plentiful, though a good deal freer than a couple of weeks ago. The usual summer lines continue to be offered.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Bananas are in good demand, and the price for good stock continues around the $2 mark. Watermelons are quoted a little higher, having gone forward 5c, which may be taken as an indication of the advancing season. Peaches are now quoted at $1.75 to $2.25, having advanced since our last quotation from $1.50. The best grade of pears are stronger in price, having gone forward 50c. A few raspberries have been offered at 11c but in no large quantity. The fruit business in most lines has been dull, for this season of the year, with the exception of bananas and domestic melons, which have been in good demand.

VEGETABLES — Dealers reported trade very good during the week. Egyptian onions are now being offered at 2c. Egg plant has declined, being quoted at $1.50, instead of $1.75 and $2.00. Cabbages are now being quoted at 30c to 40c a dozen. New potatoes are offering at $2.75 to $3.25 per barrel. Other lines remain the same as the last quotations.

FISH—Eastern fresh salmon is practically finished, very little being obtainable in the local market. Fresh B.C. salmon continues scarce. Haddock and cod are in good supply. Brook trout is in poor supply and none to speak of is expected before September. Choice mackerel and halibut are arriving freely. Lake fish are only in fair supply, and prices are firm. The continued hot weather has demoralized the demand for smoked and prepared fish. In boneless fish a limited trade is being done in standard lines, but demand will be small until September.

With the exception of brook trout and Gaspe salmon, which have advanced, prices remain the same.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—The berry is still with us, though the big black thimbleberry has displaced the red raspberry. Canadian peaches are being offered and judging from the early arrivals they should be good sellers, for they look in prime condition. Oranges are going up, and lemons, too, are scaling the ladder. California lemons are about off the market. Canadian apples are of better quality than the first samples seen on the market, and are cheaper also. Bananas are the sellers just now, and great quantities are arriving daily. Commission men are advising outside buyers to take green stock, thereby saving something on the crating and express charges, as well as having the bananas in better shape for disposal. California peaches and plums are firmer, but pears are easier. Watermelons keep well to the front, and some excellent gooseberries are coming in.

VEGETABLES—Potato prices have taken quite a drop during the week, due to the freer arrivals of home-grown spuds. The Oakville district is sending in the supplies just now. Imported potatoes have declined almost a dollar per barrel but Ontarios have come down even lower in price. Tomatoes had quite a run and last Friday and Saturday dealers were unable to supply the demand. Prices had been coming down from day to day but an immediate advance was made when the business rest was noticed and prices went up to 75c a basket. Freer supplies have brought tomatoes down again and prices range all the way from 35c to 60c a basket. All Canadian fresh vegetables are lowering, especially green corn, squash and peppers.

FISH—Continued brisk business prevails and both supply and demand are highly satisfactory. Lobsters are off, for a time at least, as the season is over, and Toronto dealers are unable to get supplies. Perch ranges in price all the way from 6 to 10c, and herring from 5 to 7c. Some few mackerel are offered at about 13c each. All other lines are at last week's quotations.

EXPERIMENTS IN EGG PRESERVATION.

The Italian Department of Agriculture has recently issued a report upon the experiment of Dr. Campanini with reference to the preservation of eggs.

Dr. Campanini's theory is that to preserve eggs some system must be adopted that will absolutely prevent the exchange between the air outside and that inside the egg—for it is this continual exchange that causes putrification. Dr. Campanini selected perfectly fresh eggs and covered them with lard, so as effectually to stop up all the pores. The shells were thus rendered impermeable, the exchange of air was prevented, and, the obstruction of the pores not permitting the evaporation of the water, there was no loss of weight. The whites and yellows of the eggs retained their color perfectly, and the taste was not modified in the slightest degree. When properly coated with lard—not too thickly—the eggs are put in baskets or boxes upon a bed of tow and fine odorless shavings, and so arranged that there will be no point of contact between them—otherwise a mold would develop and putrefaction result. The packing room should be perfectly dry, the question of temperature not being important. By his process Dr. Campanini kept a quantity of eggs for a whole year—through a very hot summer and a very cold winter—and they were perfectly preserved. He says that four cents' worth of lard sufficed to coat 100 eggs, and that anyone could easily prepare that number of eggs in one hour's time.

HAMILTON TRAVELERS' OUTING.

Seven members of the travelling staff of Lucas, Steele & Bristol, Hamilton, took a ten-days' jaunt to Empire Camp, Normandie, during their vacation weeks. The party included T. W. Edwards, J. T. Price, W. T. Harris, S. E. Lindabury, W. E. Orton, W. Harvey and S. W. Somerville. The spot was great for an outing, with good bathing, a nearby trout creek, where they really bit, and some good bass holes. The camp had many visitors from Port Dover, Jarvis and other towns in the vicinity. W. O. McPherson spent a jolly holiday at Sans Souchi and Nat. Irvine put in the time resting at home.

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Useful Information for Grocers and Clerks Concerning the Goods They Hand Over the Counter.

The Value of Bananas.

Bananas are always abundant and cheap, but we have not learned their full value as the inhabitants of the West Indies and of Central America have. To these people the banana is very necessary and important; they generally eat it baked or cooked and in connection with some light bread or cake. The banana substance is so dense that it is apt to be indigestive if eaten raw. Where they are allowed to ripen on the trees they are not used as food until the skin has turned brown and the fruit is soft and creamy. There are 176 known varieties, and the yield per acre is from 200 to 400 bunches. One of the big fruit companies of the United States has a fleet of about eighty steamers constantly bringing bananas from various points in the tropics to the States. This company handled a total of thirty million bunches, or about three billion bananas, in the course of a year. The same company handled about one-half of a million bunches per year in the seventies, and at that time bananas retailed at ten cents each.

Sultana or Smyrna Raisins.

These small light-colored raisins derive the name of Sultanas from the specie of grape used. They chiefly come from Turkey, and are nearly all shipped at Smyrna; the inland districts of Nymphio and Magnesia producing half the whole crop, but of late years some very fine Sultanas have been produced in Greece. Considerable quantities are also grown around Tchesme. Sultanas comprise many varieties, distinguished by the names of the places of their respective growths, such as Carabournou, Vourla, Tchesme, Phoce, Yerli, etc. The first named are considered to be the best.

Sultanas are usually of a pale golden yellow color, with thin and delicate skins, and are very sweet, but without much flavor. They are usually cured in boiling oil. Their chief characteristic is the absence of stones, seeds or kernels, thus saving time in cooking, but they are also popular as a table fruit and for confectionery.

Tablet Tea.

Tablet tea has become a very popular form of tea in Russia and Siberia. It is of much superior quality to brick tea and tile tea.

Tablet tea is nearly all packed at Kiukiang, in Canton, by Russian firms. It is made from the finest tea dust procurable, the selection of which is the work of skilled experts. The price paid at the factories for the dust varies from 10d per pound upwards, while that used for brick tea costs only about 2½d, and for tile tea about 1½d per pound.

It is manufactured by steam machinery, but the tea is not moistened or softened by steam, as with the other compressed teas. Dry tea dust is poured into a steam mold on a steel cylinder, and the pressure brought to bear is about two tons per tablet, which renders it perfectly hard and solid, and something like a block of chocolate in appearance, particularly as the tablets are also marked or divided into similar small portions. Each tablet of tea weighs about 110 grams, of about 15½ grains to the gram.

WILL MAKE NO MORE PICKLES.

Ozo Company, Montreal, Will Manufacture Vinegar Only.

No more pickles and jams will be manufactured by the Ozo Company, Montreal, the management having decided to close down that portion of their plant turning out these lines. They will continue their vinegar business. The firm employed four to five hundred hands during the busy season.

The plant of the Ozo Company is one of the finest, and their decision to cease manufacturing the lines mentioned will be received with regret by the trade throughout Canada, among whom their lines are favorably known. During the few years in which it has been carrying on business the Ozo Company has won a reputation for making fine Canadian jams and pickles.

John G. Carsley, president of the Ozo Company, discussing his firm's action, stated that there was altogether too little protection afforded Canadian manufacturers of these goods under the present tariff, and until there were radical reforms it was of no use to attempt competition with imported pickles and jams.

E. L. Jackson, general manager Sugars and Canners, Limited, Montreal, was in Toronto on Saturday en route to his father's summer cottage at Roache's Point, Lake Simcoe.

"WALKER BINS"

There is a personal satisfaction in having a store equipped with Walker Bin Fixtures.

The beauty of their design and their elegant appearance are unsurpassed, and for this, as well as for the peculiar attractiveness of their display, they impress the customer and offer a continued and irresistible temptation to buy. Their compactness and convenience are appreciated by the clerk, who finds everything he wants, when and where he wants it. They are a joy forever to the proprietor, for he sees his sales increasing, his losses, from waste, dirt, insects and samplers, diminishing and his store service prompt and effective.

Toledo Cylinder Computing Scale

The only springless, automatic, cylinder Computing Scale in the world.

It Protects both Merchant and Customer

—BECAUSE—

It has no springs; therefore is always reliable, as it is not affected by changes in temperature. It is automatic; therefore it positively stops downweight and avoids errors due to hand operations. It saves you time, labor and money, no weights to lift, poises to move, no cylinder to turn, nothing to do but place the goods on the scale and then read the answer given automatically for cash value, and accurate weight value. The Toledo Scale pays for itself.

—WORLD'S GOLD MEDAL—

The Toledo Computing Scale Co. received the Gold Medal, the Highest Award, for computing scales. The points of superiority which gained for Toledo scales this grand distinction were as follows: springless, automatic, computing, simplicity, accuracy and rapidity in weighing and computing, superior construction, durability and extreme sensitiveness.

Don't fail to see our exhibit at The Canadian National Exhibition, August 29th to Sept 14th, or at any time when considering the purchase of a Computing Scale.

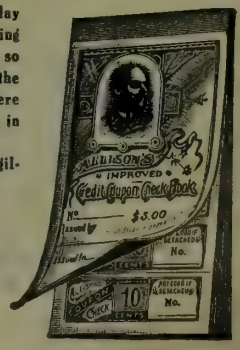
Install the Allison Coupon System and Take a Vacation

You can take a day off and go fishing whenever you are so inclined, secure in the knowledge that there will be no leaks in your absence.

No matter how vigilant you may be, the Allison Coupon System is a better safeguard against errors and petty losses than your own presence and watchfulness.



Here is how it works:

If a man wants credit for $10.00 and you think he is good for it, give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign the receipt or note form in front of book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass-books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best. For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

UNIFORMITY!

It is not "something similar" that you want.
You don't get Uniformity in "something nearly the same."
That word means a good deal in this connection.
It stands as one of the corner stones on which the magnificent success of

Wood's Package Teas

is founded, and which with their unvarying high quality has made them phenomenal Trade Builders.

The trade-mark "WOOD'S" means something tangible, not "something just as good" or "something nearly the same."

GILLETT'S PERFUMED LYE

CAUTION.

Put a strong glass on the label and examine it closely every time. Always look for the name "Gillett's."

Like all good articles, which are extensively advertised, Gillett's Lye is frequently and very closely imitated. In some instances the imitators have actually copied directions and other printed matter from our label word for word. Be wise, and refuse to purchase imitation articles for they are never satisfactory.

Insist On Getting Gillett's Lye

and decline to accept anything that looks to be an imitation or that is represented to be "just as good" or "better," or "the same thing." In our experience of over fifty years in business we have never known of an imitation article that has been a success, for imitators are not reliable people. At the best the "just as good" kinds are only trashy imitations, so decline them with thanks every time.

Imperial Dessert Jelly

The grocer who sells Imperial Dessert Jelly has the assurance that he is offering his customer an article which is supported by a reputation that has won public confidence.

To place Imperial Dessert Jelly in a class by itself the jelly had to be made—not copied—and it is no idle boast to say that it approximates "jelly perfection" in a manner not heretofore conceived.

The margin on Imperial Dessert Jelly affords a liberal profit to the grocer who will take an interest and push it, and his efforts will be augmented by aggressive advertising and consistent treatment.

Be convinced yourself by trying a package.

The Merchant Is Held Responsible

It is a curious fact that, when a woman buys Canned Goods that prove unsatisfactory, the blame is at once placed on the dealer—not upon the packer. It is equally true that, when the Canned Goods prove to be of high quality the merchant is given the credit. "They have such good things at Blank's," is the story then. Are you receiving praise or blame for the goods you handle? On the answer depends the future of your business.

Canadian Canners' Peas Are Proving Their Worth Every Day

Our celebrated brands will enable you to build upon a firm foundation. They will bring you the best trade in your community. Recommend our Grade No. 2 SWEET WRINKLE PEAS, and the repeat orders will give you genuine satisfaction. They cost the merchant very little more than Grade No. 4, but on account of high quality can be sold at a good margin of profit.

Our Canned Peas are packed in four grades as follows:—

Grade No. 1 - Extra Fine Sifted Peas
Grade No. 2—Sweet Wrinkle Peas
Grade No. 3—Early June Peas
Grade No. 4—Standard Peas.

BRANDS:—"Canada First" (Aylmer), "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe" (Bowlby), "Auto" (Canadian Canners), "Kent," "Lynnvalley" (Simcoe), "Maple Leaf" (Delhi), "Lion" (Boulter), "Thistle" (Brighton), "Grand River" (Lalor), "White Rose" (Lakeport).

EVERY POUND COUNTS

Every Pound of Tea You Sell Either Helps Your Business or Does It Harm

When you sell a cheap tea you may please the bargain hunters at the time of buying but at the time of drinking they are condemning you most strongly, ignoring altogether the fact that they purchased at a low price. While that tea lasts everyone drinking it is dissatisfied. On the other hand, if you sell good tea at a fair price you are constantly making and keeping customers, and the remark is constantly made—"Yes, everything you buy at _____ is good."

Grocery News From Coast to Coast

News From Western Canada

Pacific Coast Canneries May Unite Under Single Organization—New Wholesale House in Saskatoon—Trouble Regarding Early Closing in Fort William.

VANCOUVER.

August 8.—The Empress Manufacturing Company reports that it has handled a larger quantity of fruit this year than in any previous season. A large export trade is enjoyed with the Northwest, and this is steadily increasing, while all the trade on their special lines is practically in British Columbia. Since the fire several months ago, the old site has been rebuilt upon, and the plant is nearly in working order. A property across the street has been purchased, which has C.P.R. trackage, and a large permanent building will be erected. The floor space of the old building was 200x120 feet, but the new one is already 300x120 feet in area. The products of this company are coffees spices, flavoring extracts, jams, jellies, pickles, sauces and catsups.

There has been a local cut in the price of bread to five cents per loaf. This has been brought about by the continued offering by small bakers, mostly without delivery, of bread at that price, but the larger firms have had to bring down their price to enable them to meet the trade.

Many manufacturers are these days putting up their good goods in more attractive ways. One of these may be noticed on grocers' counters in Libby's food products. In a neat package, with flap openings, they have two dozen quarter-pound tins of their sandwich meats, the halves being in dozens. The representative of Huyler's cocoa, New York, who is in town this week, has an attraction in the way of a nice polished wood cabinet, which will stand in a conspicuous place, and which goes with the goods if the cabinet full is purchased. Included are five pounds of halves, three pounds of ones, with three or four pounds of sweetened and unsweetened cocoa, the whole approximating $5 or $6 in cost. Huyler's is also introducing a special article in the way of a shredded wheat stick, with chocolate coating a neat and tasty thing.

Prices of foodstuffs are generally firm, with an advance in eggs, which now retail at 40 cents. They have started on the upward climb, which reaches 70 or 75 cents in the middle of winter.

The run of salmon this year does not appear to be much more than last year, if as large. Some of the cannerymen think it will be a little better, since last year on the Fraser was the worst on record. Mention was made previously of a movement to amalgamate all canneries under one association, and now the report comes from Bellingham, one of the canning centres just south of the border, that every establishment both in the United States and Canada will be under one management next year, if the project now proposed is carried through. Next year, according to the schedule, should be a profitable one and the idea of the combine is to have a regular price for the benefit of the business generally.

Vancouver Island cherries are creating a strong demand in the Northwest, and the Victoria Fruit Growers' Association has had more orders than could be filled. The cherries are being packed carefully and in an attractive way and are reaching their destination in first-class shape.

On the Empress of Japan, which left this week for the Orient, were twelve cars of flour, six Canadian and six American.

William Reid, who was driver for T. S. Annandale, New Westminster, was injured in a runaway accident and died the day after. He was 22 years of age.

J. G. Taylor has resigned the position as manager of the co-operative store at Chilliwack and will move to Victoria. A. J. Carleton, secretary and bookkeeper, will take charge of the store, with Mr. Mitchell, of Vancouver, in charge of the order and delivery department.

Menzie's store, Duncan, had a narrow escape from being destroyed by fire last week. A customer after lighting a cigarette threw the match into a barrel of packing material which immediately broke into flames. The blaze was put out before serious damage was done.

W. L. Lake & Co. who bought out the grocery store of G. A. Layton, of Penticton, has adopted a new idea to encourage business. He is a photographer and with a studio established in the same building, he gives coupons with purchases, a certain number entitling the holder to have so much photographic work done.

The Cabello Cigar Company, of Vancouver, has written to the city council of Ladysmith, Vancouver Island, stating that it was thinking of changing its location and asikng what could be secured in the way of a bonus. It suggested $15,000, or a suitable building for the accommodation of 100 work people and $10,000 for ten years without interest. The request was filed, as the Ladysmith council does not grant cash bonuses.

Mr. Campbell has disposed of his grocery business on the corner of Fourth Ave. and Granville St. to Gruchy & Carlow. Mr. Gruchy is an experienced grocer, having been until recently in a grocery partnership on Granville St.

A. MacLachlan, of the city wharf grocery, Nelson, is counted among the oldest merchants in that city. He was born in Ontario on July 29, 1838.

J. Murray, a pioneer resident of the West Coast of Vancouver Island, was in the city this week, and spoke of the progress of whaling on the West Coast. He states that this industry is one of the most profitable in the province. The two stations on the West Coast and the one at Nanaimo are taking more whales than were expected this summer, one steamer having secured about 200 already. At first it was somewhat difficult to dispose of the different parts, but now, even in their crude state, the company has no trouble in finding a market for its products. The Japanese are becoming the best customers, and besides, great quantities are shipped to England. The Pacific Whaling Company, which embarked in this business only two or three years ago, is making much money on the capital invested.

Among the sufferers at the big fire at Fernie were P. Burns & Co., $15,000; A. Macdonald & Co., wholesale grocers, $45 000; Trites-Wood Company, wholesale and retail, and numerous small losers.

SASKATOON.

August 8.—A start was made this week on the new wholesale warehouse of the A. Macdonald Co. Last year a temporary warehouse was put up but with the expansion of the business the company decided on putting up a thoroughly equipped establishment. The new warehouse will be situated at the corner of Twenty-third St. and First Ave., in close proximity to the C.N.R. tracks. Only a portion of the building will be erected this year but this will give ample room in which to store and handle the goods until next season. The portion now under construction will be finished in about two months' time, when the goods will be transferred from the old building to the new one. A. Macdonald, president of the company, was here a few months ago making arrangements for the purchase of the site. The work is conducted under the management of W. A. Irish, of Winnipeg. The new warehouse will enable the company to handle a much larger stock of groceries than previously.

This is fair week and most of the grocers in town have taken special pains to make their stores and windows attractive. The dust nuisance annoyed every merchant in town for a few days but with the calmer weather everything has been made neat and clean again. The stores were open until ten o'clock some evenings this week in order to accommodate the visitors to the fair. Unusually large stocks of fruits and candies were also kept on hand to tempt the holiday makers.

Special preparations were made at the Cairn's store on Second Ave. for the fair, which lasted four days. Bargains were advertised in all departments and a neatly trimmed display of Huntley and Palmer's biscuits occupied one window. An orchestra was employed to play in the evenings and on the main floor a cloak room was opened for the convenience of customers where wraps and parcels could be left.

FORT WILLIAM.

August 8.—T. Kehoe has just opened a new grocery store on the corner of May and Leith Sts.

John King, the manager of the John King Co., Limited, who suffered such a severe loss from fire last month, has had the ruins of his block removed and expects either this fall or next spring to build a solid brick four-storey block covering the whole of the site, 75x105 feet. The new block will be leased and Mr. King himself intends to enter the wholesale grocery trade. He has a large concrete block warehouse with track facilities on Hardisty St. which he will use for the wholesale business.

Prices for produce are keeping away above the normal for this season. Grocers are paying 26 cents for butter and 23 cents for eggs at Owen Sound, and local dairies and farms are getting 35 cents for butter and from 25 to 30 cents for eggs. The home-raised eggs, however, are cutting very little figure in the market, almost all being absorbed at once by private consumers.

The trade in canned vegetables presents a complete change since last summer. At that time the local grocers had to use considerable effort to secure quotations and then the price was extremely high. This season travelers have been in active competition to dispose of their goods, with the result that there is a drop of price in orders for fall delivery of from 30 to 50 per cent. and it is expected that tomatoes which have been retailing for 15 cents will sell in the fall for 10 cents and other canned vegetables will be sold at 3 for 25 cents.

California fruits are much cheaper than last year, and will probably continue so for the balance of the season. Peaches, which form a big percentage of the shipments, which were retailed for $2.50 per crate last year, will be sold for not more than $1.75 this season.

The larger grocers of Fort William are complaining of the working of the early-closing by-law of the city. They are compelled to close at 6 p.m. and are quite willing to comply with the regulation, but say that there have recently sprung up a number of small grocery stores on the side streets in the residential parts of the city, which are not being forced to live up to the conditions of the city ordinance. These are, to some extent, places which have been converted from private dwellings into corner groceries, and are often carried on by the family residing in the same building, to whom it is no hardship to wait on customers in the evening, especially when they are getting a share of the trade, which the big stores are barred out from by the city regulations. The latter feel that this is a class of competition which presses unfairly upon them, but to enforce the by-law thoroughly would require some special patrolling of the residential quarters. The city police are always on duty near the business centre and can easily watch for infraction of the by-law by the men who have the large stores on the main business streets, but others can escape unnoticed.

MONTREAL.

August 11.—The regular monthly meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association was held in their hall, St. Catherine St. on Thursday evening, July 6. The chief business of the meeting was to distribute the prizes which were won at the grocers' picnic recently held at Highgate Springs, Vt. A large number of the victorious contestants were present, including many ladies, to receive their prizes. The meeting was presided over by President A. Laniel, assisted by the other officers of the association.

The problem of disposing of odds and ends of goods which become slightly shopworn, or which have fallen into disuse, is always a perlexing one. This difficulty, however, is well circumvented by a small local grocer, who, by the way, has always had a habit of doing things well, although his store is not in the most fashionable part of the city. This grocer never allows such things to collect in out-of-the-way corners, but keeps all odds and ends in large baskets near the front door in full view of everyone who enters his store. In addition to a reduction in price he offers coupons, which are good for so much in trade with each dollar's worth of the odds and ends purchased. He finds that this plan works out admirably.

The Shredded Wheat display, which was mentioned in last week's issue as having been in Quebec and is now being shown in the windows of Dupins Freres, St. Catherine St. east continues to attract attention. A machine which demonstrates the process of shredding the wheat is in operation in full view of the passing crowd. The cutting process may be seen. Baking and preparing the wheat is done in the basement of the building on account of a lack of necessary space in the window.

Aug. Racine, corner De Lorimer and St. Catherine St., reports business so good that he has no time for holidays. One feature which is characteristic of this store is the inverted V shaped bulletin board which one always sees on the sidewalk in front of the store, telling of the bargains which may be obtained inside. As a business getter this form of advertising for retail grocers is certainly all right.

In conversation with a grocer who is fortunate enough to have his store in a locality inhabited by a picnic-loving people, he spoke of its advantages. Let it be said, however, to this man's credit, he was quick to observe the advantages of the variety of business, and he was quick to get after it, so that now he can tell to a nicety just what is required for a picnic.

"Lessive Phenix," a new washing compound, is the subject of a very unique window display on St. Catherine St. west. This display is rather of the mechanical order, as it consists of figures, or marionettes, in the act of washing clothes and doing various other things which can be done with "Lessive Phenix." As is usually the case with displays of this nature, that is, where there is some animation given considerable interest is created in the minds of passersby.

Perhaps now more than at any other time the difficulty of obtaining good clerks in a store is greater than it has been formerly. While this may be so, a prominent grocer who has met with great success and who has always been surrounded by efficient clerks, believes in making their pay commensurate with their efforts. This he does by instilling in them their own importance as a part of the firm, and the moment they manifest any very particular interest in the business he rewards them in a material way. As a result of this they are struggling to outstrip one another, all of which means greater sales, which in turn means larger bonuses for the employes.

This is the very height of the fly season, and every grocer should have an appreciation of the horror with which the average woman regards flies and take good care that his stock is sufficiently protected from the depredations of flies, otherwise many a good customer may transfer her patronage to another store. In this connection it may be said that many stores hang fly netting over the shelves, and in this way the goods are protected. One cannot say too much about the value of cleanly appearances in the grocery. Probably nothing in the world will militate against success so surely as shabby and uncleanly appearances.

Laurie Mathewson, of Mathewson's Sons, who has been confined to the house for the past two months, is now able to be about.

HALIFAX.

August 8.—The only special feature in the local grocery market this week is a decline of ten cents per hundred pounds in the price of sugar. The announcement caused no surprise as the jobbers had been anticipating a decline for some time. The prices quoted in Halifax are: extra standard granulated, $4.90; Austrian granulated, $4.80; bright yellow, $4.70; No. 1, yellow, $4.40; cut loaf in barrels, $5.45.

Provisions on the whole are very high for the season of the year, and the market as a whole is somewhat of a puzzle to both the jobber and the consumer. On account of the rather unsettled condition of the market and the prevailing high prices no very large orders have been placed of late and stocks in many lines are now becoming quite low. Both beef and pork are very firm. American pork, fat backs, is quoted at $23, and Canadian at $22. American plate beef is $21, and the best Canadian $19. Lard in pails is 13½c, and in cases, 14½c. Hams and bacon are in good demand, the former being quoted at 15c. Side bacon is 16c, and rolls, 12c. All breadstuffs are very firm, and cheese is high, being quoted at 12½c and twins at 12¾c.

As regards eggs and butter there is little to say, outside of the fact that there is general complaint regarding the prices, which are considered too high for the season of the year. Nova Scotia eggs continue scarce at 22c, while P.E. Island stock is worth 19½c to 20c. The price of butter is unchanged from last quotation.

The fish business is a little quiet just at present. There is a good variety of fresh fish on the local market, and some of the fishermen along the shore are making good hauls of mackerel. As usual most of these fish are iced and shipped fresh to the American market.

A heavy wind and rain storm during the early part of the week played havoc with the growing crops throughout the Province, causing a loss estimated at thousands of dollars. The storm was particularly severe and small fruits and the apple trees suffered severely. Hundreds of tons of hay stacked on the marshes in many districts were swept to sea. The standing hay and the crops were beaten down and in many cases were completely ruined. The rainfall was a record-breaker, over five inches falling in twelve hours.

The market is well supplied with all seasonable fruit. The demand, however, is not so heavy this week, probably due to the fact that berries are coming in very freely. Large shipments of blueberries are being made from Nova Scotia to Boston, the steamer from Yarmouth taking as many as eleven hundred crates in one shipment.

GUELPH.

Aug. 10.—Guelph Old Home Week was a decided success as a reunion of old boys and girls. The committee made money and provided lots of fun besides. There were lots of old boys and girls, including Admiral Kingsmill. The fun was fast and furious at nights especially. People loosened up and spent money who never were known to spend before. But, and it ought to be a capital B, as far as the grocers and bakers were concerned, they all lost money. Preparations were made to avoid being eaten out of house and home, but to eat out the stocks of groceries carried in Guelph would need several old home weeks. The crowds did not apparently come to eat. In one bakeshop alone 500 loaves of stale bread were in stock on Thursday morning, showing about how things were going. Even the small fruit and soft drinks stands were from $20 to $200 out.

Among the old boys present were noticed Fred T. Smye, of Balfour, Smye & Co., and Chas. Smye, Hamilton; Fred. Tobias, of Brantford, traveller for Todhunter & Mitchell; J. H. Scott and H. G. Macdonald, grocers, Toronto; Dick Darcy, Peterboro, and numerous others.

J. A. McCrae, of J. A. McCrae & Son, left on Friday for a month's holidays at Milford Bay, Muskoka.

The market Saturday was considerable of a failure on account of most people having spent their spare cash, and so prices took quite a slump. Eggs dropped from 22c to 18c a doz., with the stores carrying large stocks. Butter also dropped too from 20c to 21c, and potatoes to 75c a bushel. Tomatoes were good sellers at 30c a basket. Berries were scarce at from 12c to 15c a box. We expect a quiet week after the great rush of people.

Prof. Zavitz, of the Experimental Department of the O.A.C., states there should be no reason for complaints this year from the farmers. Everything seems to be in the very best of condition and good to very good yields should be secured on the average. Speaking particularly of the wheat crop the professor said there should be better than an average crop of good quality.

There were some funny stunts done on Windham St. by some of our local grocers and travellers on Thursday night that would have done credit to the traveller's snack at Alton.

Some of the boys made money out of flour this week, one young man selling 25 lbs. and making $10.00 out of it, putting it up in packages of 5c each. Another made a lot by selling corn starch by the ounce. Talcum powder and confetti were also in great demand.

J. A. McCrae & Son got a nice letter from Carman, Manitoba, last week which shows that grocery ads are read a long way from home.

STRATFORD.

August 10.—Edmund Baker, traveller for the Stratford Wholesale Grocery Co. for the past three years, is receiving congratulations from his numerous friends on lately joining the ranks of the benedicts. He has also severed his connection with the above firm to accept a position with W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, where he will in future reside. Jas. Scott is taking Mr. Baker's trip.

Mr. Deniche, of McCully & Haugh's, died suddenly in the hospital here from appendicitis, last week.

Fruit trade is rather dull at the present time, between the preserving seasons, and as a consequence a number of the boys are taking holidays. Tomatoes are arriving plentifully. Berries are over and peaches are coming in slowly. The pickling season has started and local growers are pushing and displaying pure spices.

At this season of the year most grocers allow their windows to become dirty and fly-specked, much to the disgust of customers. A little more time and attention spent on the show window would greatly improve this state of affairs.

LONDON.

August 10.—Wholesale trade is picking up and the prospects are considered excellent. A feature of the trade is the slow movement of sugar, a great falling off in consumption being noticeable everywhere. This is taken to mean that housekeepers have not so much money to spend as usual, and are economizing by doing less preserving. The market appears to be rather demoralized. Japan teas are higher and very scarce, with an advancing tendency. Ceylons and Indians are steady. Coffees are steady. Other staples are unchanged, but a drop is looked for in the price of foods. Retail trade is satisfactory.

The retail grocers intend having a big time the last Wednesday night of this month, when the weekly half-holidays come to an end. It is intended to hold games and sports at Springbank, and at to-morrow night's meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association a committee will be appointed to make final arrangements for the blow-out.

It is understood that John Diprose the Dundas Street grocer, intends establishing a north end branch in the store until recently occupied by Frank E. Smythe, who recently made an assignment. This will make three stores owned and controlled by Mr. Diprose.

It is estimated that this season's crop of honey will be double that of either 1906 or 1907. One man near Strathroy estimates his supply at 5,000 pounds. Each hive is yielding from 30 to 100 pounds. The reason of the big crop is the splendid clover fields, which blossomed earlier than usual. Bee keepers say that all the honey that is made up to the last of June is taken by the bees from clover blossoms. In both of the past two years the weather was coln until late in the spring, and consequently the clover did not blossom until late in the summer. It is expected, however, that honey prices will be maintained.

The consumption of fruit during the hot days of last week was unusually large, people evidently realizing that during the heated term there is no better diet than fresh. luscious fruit, such as is grown hereabouts.

CHATHAM.

August 10.—Everything looks bright for the big merchants' picnic to Erie Beach on August 20. Merchants in all lines of trade are heartily co-operating in making the affair a success. Though some difficulty was at one time anticipated in inducing all the merchants to close for the afternoon, they have been practically unanimous in falling in line, and the petition recently circulated to close at 12 o'clock on excursion day has met with a hearty response. A noteworthy feature is the unanimity with which grocers, whether on King Street or on the side streets, put down their names. Experience in other cities has shown that merchants who refused to close have lost more in public sympathy than they have gained in trade by keeping their stores open.

Burnie & Co., successors to James N. Massey, made their formal bow to the Chatham public last week. A handsome new black and green sign adorns their place of business, and the firm are using newspaper space in plenty to introduce themselves. The new firm have behind them 18 years of experience in the grocery business, and are retaining all the original Massey staff. A cordial invitation is extended to all, whether purchasing or not, to come in and get acquainted.

C. G. Elliott, of Comber, is enlarging his general store by removing the partitions between it and taking in the premises next door formerly occupied by the Crown Bank.

Rus Wigle & Co., of Leamington, have installed a new computing scale. This is stated to be the first of its kind in the town.

A. M. McCormick & Son, Pelee Island, are having plans and specifications drawn for a new $7,000 store to replace the premises destroyed by fire last fall.

E. R. Wigle, of Ruthven, has purchased Smith & Son's grocery, in Leamington, and is now in possession. Mr. Rodell Smith will probably take a trip to the Northwest in a couple of weeks.

The retail clerks are taking a warm interest in the forthcoming merchants' picnic. Last week at a well-attended meeting it was decided to form a uniformed corps of 200 or more. They will parade King Street at 12.30, leaving on the 1 o'clock car for Erie Beach.

There is some talk among local milkmen of supplying a quality of milk especially designed for infants. Milkmen express themselves as willing to take up the project, but doubt if the people would care to pay the price, which, on account of the waste involved and the time taken to perfect the milk, would be about double the present price of 6c a quart.

Is the common, everyday kite a good advertising medium? That it affords possibilities in this direction is evidently the belief of a local sign painter, who last week had a kite, adorned with his name, flying high over the city. It certainly attracted lots of attention. In these days of airships, the kite as an advertising medium is a timely novelty.

HAMILTON.

August 11.—The markets here have been abundantly supplied for the last few weeks and prices of fruit and vegetables have slumped to pretty low figures. On Tuesday last tomatoes sold at 15c a basket; apples at 10c, peaches at 40c, plums at 30c, green corn, 7c a dozen, and all other garden truck at low prices. It is the first time in years that this market has been so glutted that the people could not rise to the occasion and clear it up, but, unfortunately, they have not as yet recovered from the panic. On Wednesday, the 12th, the Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association of this district held their annual picnic at the Brant House, Hamilton Beach. It was a grand success, as it occurred on the grocers' half-holiday. Most of the city grocers were there and they certainly helped their country friends to pass a pleasant hour, and incidentally also to share from their commodious lunch baskets those good things that only the country girls know how to put up.

Our streets in every direction are lined up with Italians and Greeks with their peddling carts. They seem now to be spreading out in the things they sell. Peanuts and pop-corn are now augmented by bananas, peaches, plums, cherries, etc. It is said that our local pedlars have been reinforced by 20 or 30 carts from Toronto. Some time ago the city council passed a by-law prohibiting the peddling of foreign fruit on the streets, but as usual it has not been enforced. The grocers everywhere are complaining about the falling off in sales of bananas, etc., but it does not seem to have dawned on them that they have the law on their side if they would only stir up the police and have a few of those fellows fined. It is the old story, nobody wants to take the matter up. Grocers all over the country should take up the fight against these aggressive foreigners, before they get so thoroughly entrenched that it will be hard to disturb them.

ST. THOMAS.

August 10.—As expected, the grocers are kept quite busy to-day putting up extra orders on account of the already numerous arrivals of visiting Oddfellows. The stores are quite handsomely decorated, and windows well cleaned and dressed. Banners are hung across Talbot and other streets, bunting, Union Jacks, and Stars and Stripes everywhere displayed in their honor, giving the city a very inviting and creditable appearance. The mayor has proclaimed Wednesday our Civic holiday, and the Oddfellows' demonstration is to be held that day at Pinafore park. The grocers and butchers will likely keep open until noon on the Civic holiday, as is usual.

Many of the grocers are complaining of being obliged to work till midnight and sometimes after on Saturdays thereby rendering them unable to attend worship on Sunday. The ministers could remedy this condition of affairs, as it is their duty to request the thoughtless late shoppers to mend their ways by buying earlier, and the grocers might likewise assist by agreeing not to accept orders for delivery after nine p.m. Saturday nights, and this relic of slavery would soon be a thing of the past.

The city council is about to pass a by-law making the markets, of which we have two, one in the west and the other in the east end, feed instead of free, as they have been for the past twenty years, and also making it a punishable offence if any grocer makes any purchases thereon before 9 a.m. It is now up to the grocers, as they are the most interested, to call a meeting for the purpose of considering the council's action, and this should be done immediately, otherwise it will be taken for granted that the grocers are in favor of going back to conditions which the older men will remember existed and which they opposed at the time. If the weather is a trifle hot, it might pay to hold the meeting at once.

Tomatoes took a slump in earnest last week, dropping from a dollar to twenty-five cents for 11-quart baskets, over supplies and over-ripe fruit being the cause. Potatoes are keeping unusually high, owing to the small yield which the growers all seem to agree on, the grocers paying a dollar per bushel for them and retailing at thirty cents per peck. Dairy butter is very scarce, retailing at 25c and creamery prints at 29c.

All berries, excepting the Lawton or thimbleberries, are done for the year, and they have been very high all season, partly owing to the fact that the growers have telephone connection and make use of it to arrange prices, and the grocers get all the blame for the high prices by the consumers. Blackberries sell at 10c per box, and are quite plentiful, but the market is rarely oversupplied.

INGERSOLL.

August 11.—One of the oldest and best known grocery stands in the town is about to be vacated by A. Beattie & Co., to make way for the Royal Bank. This stand, which is admirably suited to the grocery business, is situated at the corner of Thames and King streets, the two leading thoroughfares, and when the business was taken over by Beattie & Co. a few years ago it had the advantage of a long established trade built up by Robinson Bros., who were successfully engaged in the grocery business for years. It will be difficult for the people of the town and the surrounding districts to associate any other business with this stand. Beattie & Co. will remove to new premises nearby about the first of September. The new stand will undergo alterations and improvements and with their characteristic enterprise as a propelling factor as heretofore the business is bound to flourish in the new quarters.

Grocer C. A. O'Neill and Mrs. O'Neill have returned from a delightful trip to Detroit and other American points of interest. While away Mr. O'Neill had the pleasure of witnessing several of the American League baseball games, and in this connection it might be remarked that in his early days he was one of the star players of the U.S., hence his great interest in the game at the present time.

Trade has livened up with grocers considerably during the past few weeks and with the preparations for the autumn season there are anticipations of a good volume of business. The "financial depression" has been relegated to the background and with abundant crops and plenty of work for the energetic ones a high spirit of optimism reigns. The apple yield is said to be decidedly promising, while in regard to all the other crops the farmers have absolutely no cause to again take up the time-worn cry of "hard times."

Few people outside of those actually in business have any conception of the losses with which merchants meet, simply through the stealing proclivities of those who enter their places of business or who manage to get in their work from the outside. Considerable petty thieving has taken place here of late, but it is now thought to have been given a check. On Saturday night Chief Wright detected two of a party of four Woodstock young men in the act of stealing a watermelon from in front of Fotheringham's store. The gang had aroused suspicion on the part of the officer and he had carefully planned to watch their movements. After they had made off with the watermelon he followed and eventually placed three of them under arrest, while the fourth was summoned to appear in the police court with the others. The four pleaded guilty to the charge against them, and three of them received sentences ranging from one to two months in the county jail. The fourth offender, owing to his previous good character and the fact that he had only fallen in with the others shortly before the theft, was committed and allowed out on suspended sentence. The magistrate pointed out that stealing from merchants had to be stopped. Merchants everywhere suffer in a like manner and the wonder is that there is not a more organized effort to have the offenders hunted down.

OTTAWA.

August 11.—Honey is likely to be a little lower in price this year. R. P. Yetts, Ann street, Glebe, one of the most enthusiastic apiarists in Ottawa, has submitted some rather interesting statistics. Since June 23 Mr. Yetts has had a hive of bees on scales, and an increase in weight from 16 lbs. on June 23 to 88 lbs. to-day has been noticed. The first six days the hive increased 36 lbs. in weight, and during the 13 days in July has increased 20 lbs. This year, according to Mr. Yetts, has been one of unprecedented success for the cultivation of bees.

Contracting for blueberries before 8.30 o'clock on By Ward Market last Thursday, was the charge laid by Inspector Borthwick against Chas. P. Prevost, grocer, in the police court last week. The inspector said that the defendant had purchased 14 pails of berries before the gong on the market building rung 8.30. Mr. Prevost said it was 8.45 when he made arrangements for buying the berries. The deputy magistrate dismissed the case, remarking that the evidence was not sufficient to convict.

Ottawa's population this year will be near the 80,000 mark, according to reliable estimates. The taxable assessment is likely to be around forty million dollars. No official figures, of course, are as yet obtainable at the city assessment department but it is learned that the population indicated will be around that figure.

Despite the recent influences working against a big business turnover it is interesting to know that many wholesale firms have equalled the records of prosperous times. This applies even to those who handle luxuries. Naturally the purchaser of an article costing fifty cents has been inclined of late to turn his attention to those at twenty-five cents. To the captain of industry this has meant the birth of an effort to sell two articles in place of one. "By means of hard work," said a wholesaler this week, "our sales for this year are up to previous records; but it has been uphill labor." The squeezing out of business from a tight-money public is not an easy task. Scores of firms have accomplished it; which is a good thing for everybody.

F. W. Forde and A. G. Johnston, two enthusiastic officers of the Grocers' Association, who went West in the interests of the Pure Food Fair, have returned, and have brought with them the assurance of many more exhibits. Manufacturers throughout the country are giving the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association loyal support with their fair, and everything promises to be lovely. Further arrangements have been made during the last couple of weeks and as the time draws near for the opening of the Central Canada Exhibition, interest on the part of grocers centres upon the pure food fair. All the members of the association are working hard.

PETERBORO.

August 11.—The grocers of this city are very much averse to the prevailing habit among Sunday schools, churches and other organizations of soliciting prizes for picnics. Almost every excursion leaving the city has previously arranged a programme of sports and many of the prizes for these are "begged" from the merchants. One grocer in referring to this matter stated that it was a nuisance which instead of being lessened or curtailed altogether was on the increase. It is only endured because of the fear of offending a number of customers. Once he begins to give he is always giving and thus the nuisance continues. Baseball and other sporting clubs want to be supported and during the summer months in particular, the generosity of the grocers is imposed upon. The evil, it was thought by the grocer, was one that ought not to be countenanced. Though in a few cases it may work out so as to put the grocer in a better light in the community it has become so common a thing that this scarcely applies. It is not good business, remarked the grocer, and he thoroughly believed that the grocers who refused politely, though firmly, to countenance such requests will be a good deal better off in the end.

The window of White & Gillespie's store is at present attracting much attention. It is dressed to advertise Quaker Oats, manufactured by the Quaker Oats Company in Peterboro. The sides of the window are dressed with sheaves of oats from the field and through the centre of the window is running water in zinc pipes, which operates two miniature water-wheels illustrating the primitive method of the grinding of grain. Quaker Oats in a large pan and a few packages scattered about complete the advertising scheme.

The officers of the Ontario Co-Operative Fruit Growers, which association recently held its annual meeting in Toronto, are: Hon. President, A. E. Shertington, Walkerton; President, D. Johnson, Forest; 1st Vice-President, Robt. Thompson, St. Catharines; 2nd Vice-President, J. E. Johnston, Simcoe; 3rd Vice-President, Elnor Lick, Oshawa. Mr. Cutting resigned the secretaryship and P. W. Hodgetts, Parliament buildings, Toronto, was elected to succeed him. This is a temporary arrangement, however. Last year twenty-four local associations joined the body as compared with thirteen the year previous. An effort will be made to have a central organization.

TO FACILITATE FRUIT SHIPMENTS

Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner Makes Arrangement of Advantage to Canadian Fruit Growers.

The following notification of an arrangement for facilitating the shipment of early apples and other perishable fruits to Great Britain has been sent out by J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner. The arrangement is very convenient and should prove of considerable advantage to fruit shippers interested in early varieties:

"Growers of early apples and other tender fruits who have in the past been desirous of shipping to Great Britain have met with difficulty in securing suitable cold storage temperatures on board steamships, because of the fact that they did not have a sufficient quantity to fill a cold storage chamber. Owing to the special temperature required, there is no other produce with which fruit can be successfully shipped in cold storage. In order to meet this difficulty, and to provide suitable cold storage temperatures for the shipment of early apples and other fruits in small lots, the honorable the Minister of Agriculture has authorized me to contract for the entire space of one chamber on the steamship "Ontarian," sailing from Montreal for London on August 22, and also on the steamship "Sicilian," sailing for the same port on August 29. The space in these chambers is now available for shippers at regular rate of freight which is thirty shillings per ton measurement (forty cubic feet), payable to the steamship company in the regular way. The proper temperature will be maintained in these chambers regardless of the quantity of fruit which may be offered for shipment. The Government guarantees the earnings of the whole space.

"As the space in these chambers is limited, intending shippers must notify the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, Ottawa, without delay. First come will be first served until the space is all engaged, when no further shipments for that steamer can be accepted. Applications for space should state the number and size of the packages which are to be shipped, in order that a proper estimate of the space to be occupied may be made.

"The Department of Agriculture will assume no responsibility in connection with these shipments, but there will be the usual supervision by the cargo inspectors at Montreal and London and a complete temperature record will be secured of the chamber during the voyage.

"Shipments for the 'Ontarian' on August 22nd should reach Montreal not later than the morning of the 21st, and for the 'Sicilian' not later than the morning of the 28th.

"Chambers will be secured for later shipments if there is sufficient fruit to warrant making a contract."

CARRYING ON W. A. GIBB CO.

The business of W. A. Gibb Co., Hamilton, dealers and exporters of evaporated apples and other lines, which was built up by the late W. A. Gibb, has been taken over by a new company, of which James Somerville is the energetic manager. The new company will carry on the same lines as formerly and will operate under the same name.

CANADA'S APPLE CROP.

Apple Shippers' Association Furnish Comprehensive Report.

The convention of the International Apple Shippers' Association met at Niagara Falls, N.Y., on Friday and Saturday of last week. One of the important features was the submitting of a report by the executive on the estimated crop of the year.

Canada's crop will be substantially the same as last year's, but will be differently located. Nova Scotia's will be equal to last year's and Ontario's east of Toronto slightly lighter. The district north of the main line of the Grand Trunk will be the same; south of the main line will be in excess of last year's yield. British Columbia's will be below that of last year, and will require shipments from eastern Canada. The New England States promise little better than half of last year. The quality for the entire Canadian territory promises to be good.

The following officers were elected :— President, W. L. Wagner, Chicago; secretary, C. P. Bothwell, Martinsburg, West Va.; treasurer, William French, New York. R. J. Graham, Belleville, was elected a member of the executive committee. Vice-presidents were named from all the apple-growing states. The 1909 meeting will be held in August at Niagara Falls.

WHOLESALERS AND THE WEST.

The towns of the new provinces, Saskatchewan and Alberta, are at the present time most keenly alive to the importance of inducing wholesale firms to establish warehouses in their midst. At present, of course, Winnipeg is the great distributing centre, but several of the towns west of that city are ambitious to become wholesale centres for their respective localities.

The natural redistribution centres next to Winnipeg, are the cities of Regina, Moose Jaw and Saskatoon. Among these cities the competition for commercial supremacy is most keen. The cities have employed publicity commissioners at high salaries to advertise their good points in the east, and to expound to the wholesale houses the advantages they offer for location.

Regina, being the oldest centre and the seat of Government, has hitherto been most successful in securing wholesale houses. Regina, besides being on the main line of the C.P.R., also has branch lines running north and south. Saskatoon, however, which has just been connected by a new railroad with Winnipeg, and which will be on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, will probably be one of the greatest railroad centres in the west, and hence one of the most important commercial centres.

Moose Jaw, which is the main divisional point on the C.P.R. west of Winnipeg, is also a most important factor in commercial life in the west. Being the terminus of one of the most important lines from across the border and with a line under construction leading into the most fertile lands of the north, and also with projected connections with the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern, Moose Jaw holds many inducements to wholesale men seeking for locations to establish new warehouses.

Hitherto the Boards of Trade of these provinces have spent a good deal of money in advertising their towns, but now they realize that more must be done. They are communicating directly with wholesalers and showing them the money they would save in cheaper freight rates by establishing a branch in the west.

The keenness of the merchants and business men regarding the commercial well-being of their cities is shown in Moose Jaw by the formation of a Progressive Club, which includes nearly all the members of the leading firms in the city. This association has already been successful in securing several wholesalers and are contemplating an organized campaign to secure others.

The wholesalers who are the first to secure warehouses in the west are, of course, those whose products are of a bulky nature, and whose freight rates are high. Hence engine and threshing machine firms, carriage firms, etc., are the first to secure the advantages of the diminution of freight rates by erecting warehouses. The others will follow shortly if they figure out closely the comparative cost of shipping piecemeal and the cost of shipping in lots to warehouses.

It is affirmed that many of the larger American firms have their eye on the Canadian west and it behooves their Canadian competitors to get into the race in time.

ONE PRICE STOPS HAGGLING.

There are many buyers of the class which a contributor calls "hagglers," who work the dealer for cut prices. It makes no difference how low a price the dealer names, they respond with a lower offer. They are like the man who asked the price of a certain article and thinking the storekeeper had said 50 cents, exclaimed, "Too much; I'll give you 40." "I said 15 cents," replied the storekeeper. "Oh! in that case I'll give you 10," said the haggler. Some dealers make quick advances in prices when a known haggler puts in his appearance, thus preparing themselves for the inevitable cut, but making the latter harmless. This cannot always be done, however, and the better way is to have one price and stick. When a dealer achieves a reputation as a one-price tradesman the hagglers do not try their wiles on him.

CANADA'S PLACE IN THE WHEAT-PRODUCING WORLD.

An official statement has been issued by the statistical department at Ottawa giving the estimated wheat crop of the Dominion at 130,263,000 bushels. This is nearly 6,000,000 bushels less than the estimate published July 31 by Beerbohm's Corn Trade List, one of the world's greatest authorities. The Ottawa figures estimate the crop in Ontario at 18,164,000 bushels; in Manitoba at 56,164,000 bushels; Saskatchewan at 47,080,000 bushels; in Alberta at 7,280,000 bushels.

This will be a record yield of wheat for Canada and but for the dry weather of July it would have been still larger.

Canada to-day stands about eighth among the wheat-growing nations of the world, based on this year's figures, and in about the same position as Italy. The order of the first seven is: United States, Russia, France, India, Argentine, Hungary, Germany.

But if this country develops at the rate it has done during the past half-dozen years it will not be a great while before she will vie with the United States for the position of the leading wheat-producing country of the world. Seven or eight years ago Canada only produced 55,572,368 bushels of wheat. This year Manitoba alone is estimated to have rather more than that, while Saskatchewan and Alberta between them will produce something like forty-five to fifty million bushels more than they did in 1901.

Not only are the crop conditions good in Canada, but the world's wheat market is favorable. Beerbohm's Corn Trade List says that the world's visible supply of wheat on August 1st was the smallest on record, with the exception of the years 1897 and 1898. But what is probably the most interesting to Canadians is the following quotation from the same authority:—"The most extraordinary feature, however, is the combined absence of Russian and Indian wheat and the obvious fact that Europe is likely to be dependent upon America and Canada for the next six months for its supplies, and consequently for its lead as to future prices."

The situation of the world's wheat market should contribute to the strengthening of the general trade situation in Canada. We have the wheat and a good market is promised for it.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL AND CO-OPERATION.

It has been reported in business circles recently that Earl Grey has identified himself with and is to accept the presidency of one of the large co-operative companies now being organized. This is something we regret to hear. As Governor-General Earl Grey has shown himself to be a shrewd, keen business man, with an evident appreciation of the practical side of the affairs with which he has had to do. He has shown, too, his appreciation of the benefits of good advertising in his vigorous support of the recent Tercentenary Celebration at Quebec. From the standpoint of an advertisement, as well as in other ways, this was one of the greatest events in Canada's history. While the cost of the celebration was perhaps half a million, it undoubtedly will be worth ten millions in its general effect. The Governor-General deserves a good deal of credit for his connection with this.

In the matter mentioned above, however, if the report is true, His Excellency shows much less business foresight. The business situation in Canada is entirely different from conditions in Great Britain and Europe, and this is something the Governor-General should realize. Canada is a new country, and one in which the smaller merchants and retailers, the corner stores and the country traders, have played and are playing a great part in the country's development. These have done and will continue to do a work which the co-operative societies it is proposed to organize would not undertake. This is one of Canada's strong business features and is something which is not evident in Great Britain and the European countries.

The Governor-General of Canada should not permit himself to be drawn into any connection such as is suggested above. Even as Earl Grey he should have the foresight to see the injustice and unwise features of taking any such action.

LOOKING INTO TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

The Premier of Ontario will look into technical education matters when in Europe. It is a subject that will take a great deal of looking into.

Canada has been blessed by nature with a great many things that if utilized will make it a great nation; but we are not always so quick to take advantage of our opportunities as we are to boast of their existence.

It is not because a country is rich in natural resources that it becomes great. Greatness depends more upon the character of its people than upon any other factor in nation building.

Technical education builds up character by awakening the intelligence and stimulating the creative powers of the youth of the country who come under its influence. This is not a supposition. It is a fact attested by the experience of other nations and particularly Germany. The position that country has assumed during the last ten years among the industrial nations of the world is ascribed more to technical education than anything else.

In Canada we have made a beginning, but it is a very small beginning. Outside a Board of Trade or two and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association no body of men seem to be very enthusiastic over the subject. Even the educationalists, with few exceptions, are indifferent. Last year the inspector of technical education for Ontario, with a view to ascertaining what technical work was being done, sent a circular to the public school inspectors in that Province. In his official report he says that not nearly 50 per cent. replied. This is certainly discouraging. And yet Ontario is doing more for technical education than any other Province.

Two or three years ago a movement was started to secure the co-operation of the Dominion Government. While supervision and care of education devolves upon the Provinces it is only proper that in a matter of such national importance as technical education assistance should be given by the Federal authorities. So far the most the Dominion Government appears to have done is to consider the advisability of appointing a commission to investigate and report upon this important subject. The matter has not yet gone beyond the consideration stage.

Politicians are usually slow to move in the direction of reform but it is to be hoped that while abroad the Premier of Ontario will be so strongly inoculated with the technical education microbe that his enthusiasm will burn as a fever. In the meantime why should not another effort be made to inoculate the Dominion Government?

A FAVORABLE YEAR FOR HONEY.

The warm weather during the late spring and early summer is having a beneficial effect on other things than the fruit crop. Reports from the honey-producing centres of Ontario say that the yield this year is likely to be double that of either 1906 or 1907. The yield, bee keepers say, depends to a great extent on the condition of the clover crop up to and through June, when the bulk of honey is made. For the last two years the weather was too cold and the insect workers were not able to pursue their saccharine-seeking activities to any favorable extent. This year, however, the clover crop was splendid and the bees were able to work at the best advantage. As a result there will be a splendid yield of clover honey.

WILL SALMON CANNERIES COMBINE?

A significant item comes from the coast this week in the form of a report to the effect that arrangements are being made to form a combine of all the salmon canneries on the Pacific Coast.

According to the drift of seasons, next year, following four short years, will be a good one for salmon and the pack in 1909 is expected to be very large. The idea of the amalgamation, it is stated, is to keep up the regular prices for the benefit of the industry generally and to provide for the even distribution of the pack. The amalgamation, it is suggested, is to take in all the factories on the Pacific Coast, so that the industry can be practically controlled under one organization. While the report cannot be authenticated it bears considerable of the earmarks of verity.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, Aug. 11.—The week has been one of disaster in the Canadian West, though not anything that has touched the crop. The Fernie disaster, appaling in its details, both as to the loss of life and property, has not yet been felt to any appreciable extent in business circles, though later it undoubtedly will be, owing to the enormous destruction of coal and timber and the delay in the production of coke. It is the most terrible thing of its kind that has happened in Canada and nothing can exceed the promptness with which help has been rushed to the relief of the sufferers from all parts of Canada, and the sympathy and help of the Western United States towns has been of the most practical kind. The Spokane contingent who thought of the supply of sterilized and refrigerated milk for the babies and little children certainly deserve the thanks of all the mothers in Canada, and was so badly needed and arrived with such promptitude.

The disaster of the burning of the steamer Premier and the loss of eight lives cast a still further gloom over Winnipeg, the monetary loss was comparatively trifling considered in the light of the Fernie losses, but was a good round sum, nevertheless.

But even these things, terrible as they were for the sufferers and heavy as the loss will be are mere fleabites in comparison to the railway strike. Of course it has made no difference at present, trains are running regularly and no section of business is embarrassed, but every thoughtful citizen is asking himself what will happen if the strike continues? It is evidently a fight to a finish, there is no thought of yielding on either side and it is less than three weeks to the time when the crop should begin to move. The railway company is sitting tight and saying nothing, but they are, nevertheless, quietly and apparently effectively preparing to replace the striking men. The question is, can they do it in time to handle the crop successfully, and the great fear is that they cannot.

No railway official will say a word, but there are certain avenues of information open and from these it is learned that the C.P.R. at Winnipeg is prepared to feed and lodge 1,000 men in their yards and there are about 350 now at work again. These men are being accumulated and brought in small gangs and run right into the yards. The pickets of the union men are not allowed to come within a certain distance of the big fence and all the holes in the fence have been stopped so that they have no very definite information as to what the company are doing. The company have a very large force of special police guarding their works and the only claim they make is that the system will be kept operating in spite of the strike. They have taken not the slightest notice of the strikers and it looks as if preparations for the struggle had been made a long time ahead.

Even if they are able to fill the places of the men it is not probable that the system can be kept working as quickly and as smoothly as with the old hands and all this will mean delay in the movement of the crop. For this reason the strike is very unpopular and the sympathy of the public is all with the railway company rather than with the men. The men claim they do not care for sympathy, that it buys no bread and butter, but they have never really had a big strike before when the sympathy of the public was so entirely with the road and it may be that before it is over it will come home to them that public approval is a help in most matters. The strike has not affected retail trade so far, but if it continues it certainly will do so. The railway men have always been free spenders and as there is a large body of them their trade has been much sought after. Strike pay is only $5 for single and $7 per week for married men, and many of the men were making all the way from $75 to $125 a month so that their spending power will be reduced by that much.

In every other way things in the West are as good as can be, there has been little rain, which is still much needed, but there have been cool days and cold winds and this will help to fill the wheat. Cutting will be quite general next week and the wheat is of excellent quality. Just how much of the yield has been cut down by the drought it is impossible to say but there is no other damage and the quality is excellent and on 6,000,000 acres even a depreciation in yield of three or four bushels will still leave us with fully 100,000,000 and there is no present indication that the yield will go below that figure.

The financial situation seems all right and there will certainly be less discontent than there was last fall. In the twelve months it is claimed that banks have reduced their credits 50 per cent., so that while the extension of speculative credits will not be as great as in the years prior to 1907 the legitimate demands of farmers and grain men in general will be met all right. The amendment to the Banking Act, which increases the power of the bank in the matter of note circulation will make it possible to have in circulation at least $12,000,000 more than was available last year.

Everything looks good but the strike and even that is not as bad as it might be, though every good citizen will work and hope for its speedy adjustment.—H.

Montreal, Aug. 13.

The past week has been thoroughly characteristic of this period in August. At the time of our last writing business generally had taken on considerable activity, but this evidently was a flowing over into August of a few dying struggles of July, because now business is typical of August. This dullness possesses the feature of being expected, so no great pessimism has been stirred up by it. Everyone is looking forward to the good crop which promises in the West to remedy all evils, and at this point this seems pretty well assured if no extraordinary circumstance makes it otherwise.

Prices all round remain high, and there does not seem to be much chance of any very great declines. Even in the face of small demand many lines are exceptionally firm under such conditions. Butter and cheese are maintaining a high altitude which, in the case of cheese especially, has a tendency to check trade somewhat. The sugar market, which has been very active for the past few weeks, "has been hit on the head," as one dealer expressed it, and a quietness reigns supreme in this line.

SUGAR—The sugar market has certainly changed since our last report. It was reported last week that there was big demand, and it was thought that the drop in prices would increase this demand, but it seems to have acted like a wet blanket, as the bottom dropped out of the market so far as demand is concerned. The decline failed to prove very attractive.

COFFEES—The demand is steady and prices remain firm. The even tone which this market preserves is due in a large measure to the action of the Brazilian Government in regulating the sale of coffee. DRIED FRUITS—There is considerable friction between the buyers and packers relative to prices, and owing to this there has been a strong undertone to this market. Some of the packers sold for future shipment, and are now likely to lose money, so they are trying to get even by boosting the present market. The Grecian Government has now taken a hand in the currant trade, which will tend to limit the supply from now until the new crop comes in October. Locally, the market has been dull, with the exception of Valencia raisins, also currants and prunes, which have been fairly active. Valencia raisins (fine off stalk) have gone forward, ½c in price, now being quoted at 6c, instead of 5½c per pound. Fine Filiatras currants (cleaned) are also stronger, having advanced ½c per pound.

EVAPORATED APPLES—There is nothing new in this line. The demand is very slow and price is unaltered.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Canned vegetables have fallen off largely in demand during August, owing to the fresh products coming into the market. The demand this year for these goods was sustained for a longer time than usual, owing to the lateness of the season. Canned fruits are much duller also. Canned salmon is in good demand just now. The demand for Canadian meats is good but American varieties are neglected.

TORONTO—Jobbers report rather better business in these goods and an awakening interest in futures. Considerable of the 1908 pack goods is on the market and is being kindly received.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Steady.
Dried Fruits—Firmer.
Canned Goods—Moving well.
Collections—Better.

Toronto, August 13, 1908.

Business continues on a pretty fair basis with steady staple buying, though there are no particularly new features in evidence in the local markets. Wholesalers speak encouragingly of the outlook for the autumn business. Collections seem to be a little more free recently and renewals are not asked for quite so frequently.

SUGAR—The market remains steady, though without any tendency toward advance. The demand for sugar seems to have been rather disappointing during the last few weeks, not only in Canada but also in the United States, and the refiners' stocks are thought to be quite heavy, making it in some instances advisable to curtail meltings The continued small demand is rather puzzling. Some jobbers say August is never a big sugar month as compared with June and September, but the same conditions prevailed through May and June. At present the market is steady, with no sign of any immediate change.

The situation in raws is summarized by Willett & Gray as follows:—

"The market developed weakness toward the close of the week under review. The movement of refined in Europe, also, is disappointing, and, with prospects of the new beet crop improving, quotations for beet sugars have declined 6d. to 10s. 2½d. for old crop, the parity of 4.15c. landed for Centrifugals and a decline of 3d. to 9s. 9d. for new crop (October-December), parity of 4.04c for Centrifugals. Reports from Cuba continue favorable for the growing crop. Our special cable of yesterday from Java reported that it was yet too early to estimate the total outturn of the present crop and that rain continued to interfere with the harvesting. The exports, however, are much larger than for the same month last year, amounting to 159,000 tons to America and Europe, 69,000 tons to Eastern countries and 11,000 to British Columbia; these include 152,000 tons with United States options, thus insuring a good supply for the American refiners in September, the month of largest distribution of refined sugars. Indications point to a larger world's stock of sugar on September 1st than was anticipated earlier in the season, thus there is now no reason to look for extremely high quotations, but, should the demand for refined suddenly increase to large proportions, some recovery in prices would be in order.

TEA—Business locally continues quiet sales being still of the hand-to-mouth variety.

Concerning general market, Thompson Bros'., London, weekly circular, dated July 30, says: "The noticeable feature of the week's sales has been the well-sustained demand for all good liquoring grades, both of Indian and Ceylon at, generally speaking, firm prices. There seems to be more attention given to the sales, and when the supply is larger and more varied a better business all round may be looked for. We learn from several quarters that since the beginning of June good rain has fallen in most districts, and that large quantities of tea have been made in the Dooars, Terai and Sylhet districts. In Assam owing to the prevalence of blights, growth has not been so rapid; but this is compensated for by the finer quality expected. The Darjeeling output up to the present has proved satisfactory so far as outturn is concerned, but growth has been too rapid for much really fine quality. The market now is virtually closed for a fortnight and there will be little or no private business worth mentioning passing, as buyers generally are taking advantage of the bank holiday."

COFFEE—Local business continues fair with no new features.

Willett & Gray, in reviewing the markets generally say: "During the week speculative selling has continued, stimulated by liberal receipts at Santos and also by a flood of wild rumors of all kinds in the different coffee markets. While the credit of the San Paulo Government is fully equal to the best of any country in South America, as was proven by the price of its bonds during the financial panic last year, unscrupulous bears do not hesitate to circulate articles derogatory to the Government, for which attacks there is not the slightest foundation. All the consignments of the San Paulo Government held in Europe are equally as well secured there as here, which means that there is a margin of at least four dollars a bag at present prices. The weather in the coffee regions in San Paulo has turned very cold again. From one of the best known sources in Brazil, under date of June 16 at San Paulo, the following report was received: 'The way I feel we will again have a very irregular crop next year. Up to the present the winter has hardly made itself felt, and if we should experience the same weather as in Europe in April and May, cold weather may be expected here at the flowering period. Such events are not infallible. We have often ascertained that same are about to repeat themselves on the southern hemisphere four to six months later. It is not said that on that account severe night frosts are to be expected. The cold alone, at the time of flowering, would destroy part of same.' After the 1901-1902 crop it required five seasons before another large crop was possible. It is not at all probable that conditions now can be more favorable for a large crop, as in the meantime the trees have aged and in most cases have gone beyond their best production. But the flowering season is commencing and will undergo seasonal vicissitudes up to next November. Those parties who have sold short and are still selling short, represents there will be another large crop, notwithstanding the above."

DRIED FRUITS—Advices received within the last few days by local brokers from Denia regarding Valencia raisins report not too favorably on the crop. Very hot weather has affected many of the grapes, it is said, and the crop cannot be very good. At present it is anticipated that opening prices will be about the same as last year. Sultana raisins are a little easier in primary markets and prices are expected to be a little lower than last year.

PLEASANT TRIP TO GREAT BRITAIN.

T. Kinnear, jr., of the T. Kinnear Co., Toronto, returned this week after a very enjoyable three months' trip through Ireland, Scotland and England. Mr. Kinnear went first to Ireland, where he spent some time in Belfast and with friends in other places. From Ireland he ran over to Scotland, taking a hasty trip through the land o' the hills an' heather. The main part of his trip, however, was through England. While stopping most of the time in London he took a good many side trips to other points of interest and incidentally took in about all that was going in the way of sport during his stay. He saw both the English Derby and the Ascot gold cup run, as well as minor events; was an interested spectator and enthusiastic supporter of the Canadian athletes at the Olympic contests and saw both the Royal Henley and the Olympic regattas. Mr. Kinnear is looking hale and hearty and speaks most enthusiastically of the pleasures of the trip.

DECLINE OF THE SHAD FISHERY.

Interesting Evidence Before Commission in Nova Scotia.

The investigation into the shad, salmon and gaspereau fisheries in the Bay of Fundy now being carried on by a special government commission, is arousing a good deal of interest in the fishing communities on the Bay. The commissioners. Prof. Prince and Mr. S. F. Morrison, have held long and exhaustive sittings at several points during the past two weeks.

Large numbers of fishermen have been in attendance and evidence of a very important nature has been given. The great age of some of the most experienced shad and salmon fishermen was a notable feature, many of the witnesses, who offered testimony to the commissioners, were eighty years of age and over, and their knowledge of the Bay of Fundy fisheries covered the long period of sixty and seventy years.

The evidence shows that since 1885 the fishery had greatly declined owing to the destruction of shad in the rivers where they spawn in spring. In 1897 there was a spurt and forty or fifty thousand were taken in a Scott's Bay weir on a tide. No spawn shad ever appear now in Scott's Bay. Not one in a thousand. They come in to feed up, in July, after they have spawned elsewhere and a few may be taken as late as September 10. Various causes are said to have produced the decline, but the use of drift nets, the blocking of rivers by dams and the destruction of spawn shad in St. John River, N.B., were some of the chief reasons. The sittings of the commission are being continued and should be productive of much benefit.

MELON CULTURE IN CANADA

Fruit Reaches Finest Development on Island of Montreal, Where the Industry Assumes Considerable Importance—Large Demand at High Prices From United States—Some Incidinest of Melon Growing.

The old, but now happily disappearing illusion that Canada is a land of snow and ice obtains its finest refutation in the fact that she raises certain varieties of fruits which reach their greatest excellence within her boundaries. There are some fruits which we invariably associate with a tropical country, and among these melons may be numbered. To say that they reach their finest development in size and flavor in the Island of Montreal at first appears improbable, but such, however, is undoubtedly the case. While all varieties of melons can be raised on the island with varying degrees of success. the variety known as the nutmeg melon may be called Montreal's pride. On investigating the origin of the melon, its native habitat, habits of growth and other peculiarities, it is found that this fruit had its origin in a very warm country, having been first cultivated in India. From India its cultivation is next recorded in Persia and Egypt, and along the northern coast of the Mediterranean. It is a remarkable fact that it was introduced into America by Columbus, and in their various peregrinations over the North American continent have found most favorable root on the Island of Montreal, and have become localized to Outremont and Notre Dame de Grace, where they reach their greatest state of perfection, both in flavor and size.

Upon investigation it was found that they required the tenderest care in cultivation, and an infinite amount of work and attention.

In March the seeds are planted in hot beds, and fifteen days afterwards, if the plants have made suitable progress, they are transplanted into other hot-beds. As the season progresses and all fear of further frosts disappear the plants are again transplanted into what are called summer hot-beds. The vines are by this time well started, but it is a specially critical period in their life, as soon after this the frames from around each bed of plants are withdrawn and the plants are submitted to the prevailing climate.

A melon patch consists of several long beds divided from each other by an interval of about four or five feet. In this interval some growers plant two rows of potatoes, which serve as a wind shield. to prevent the wind getting in under the young vines and turning them over, which frequently happens when they are exposed. Some growers plant corn for this purpose, but it possesses the disadvantage of imprisoning the air, so to speak, and rendering a free circulation among the vines impossible. Toward the middle of July the most advanced plants will be producing melons of fair size, which, up to this time, are quite green and smooth. When this smooth, dark green appearance commences to give way to a process of change known as "netting." and which changes its whole appearance externally, the melon has reached the time when it is nearly ready to go to market.

This time is definitely determined, however, by a series of cracks which take place around the point of junction of the stem with the melon.

It is known that if any fruit or vegetable of the same family lies in one position on the ground when it is finally picked there is a disfiguring mark on it covering the spot which came in contact with the ground. This difficulty is obviated by carefully blocking each melon up with small stones, so the air reaches all sides of it equally.

The greatest care is exercised in gathering the melons, as bruising leads to immediate decay. This precaution is carried to such an extent that the path over which the wheelbarrow passes is swept clean of stones and pebbles in order that its passage may be as smooth as possible.

The melons are labeled, and packed with hay in large baskets, which contain from eight to twelve each. The fruit is classified as firsts and seconds, in both quality and size. The harvesting season lasts generally from five to seven weeks, and during this time the grower must exercise great care in disposing of his crop as they ripen, in view of the fact that this fruit is particularly susceptible to rot. After the crop commences to move the melons find their way over Canada and a large proportion of them are exported to the United States, where they are in good demand.

In some of the larger hotels of New York City Montreal melons are sold for one dollar a portion. Melons are shipped exclusively by express. As they are a rather short-lived fruit this means of transportation is rendered necessary in order to land them on the market as soon as possible. Owing to the supply being immensely inadequate to the demand, good prices are maintained for the product, and no difficulty in disposing of the yield is experienced. Every year brings an increasing number of inquiries from the United States for the fruit. Some of the largest producers act as their own agents and ship directly to New York, while others sell their output to agents, and commission men.

At the present time it is estimated that there are from twenty to twenty-five farms on the Island of Montreal which grow melons, and during the season there are from one hundred to a hundred and fifty men engaged in their cultivation. While the cultivation of this fruit may be regarded as a lucrative one, the initial expenses are very heavy, and it requires both experience and means to achieve a successful issue. One of the largest producers on the island stated to a representative of The Canadian Grocer that he had from $18,000 to $20,000 invested in paraphernalia alone. This condition, taken in conjunction with the fact that these farms lie, in most cases, contiguous to the City of Montreal, where the taxes are very high show something of the expensive side of the industry.

Although growers are, by artificial means, in a small measure independent of the nature of the season, it is generally recognized that a dry, hot summer is best adapted to the highest degree of perfection, both in size and flavor. As their popularity increases more farms may be noticed under cultivation, but there will never be much danger of a glut of the market, because the acreage on which they may be cultivated, even on the island, is sharply marked. With the advance of scientific methods of farming more concentrated means of raising them may be discovered, but at the present time this may be regarded as a rather remote possibility.

A Load of Prime Canadian Melons Grown on the Island of Montreal.

For much of this information. The Grocer is indebted to B. T. Decarie, of Notre Dame de Grace. Mr. Decarie is one of the largest producers on the island, and the art of cultivating melons comes to him from a long line of ancestors, who have resided on the same farm since the days of Maisonneuve. This fact, and the present high standard of his crop, makes him an authority on this subject. Mr. Decarie's particular brand is known as the King Edward VII., and the little round red lable setting forth this fact is a familiar mark which may be seen almost anywhere where this high class fruit is exposed for sale.

THE DELIVERY RIG AS AN ADVERTISEMENT

Valuable Opportunities Are Presented for Developing Business by Means of a Clean and Striking Wagon—What One or Two Grocers Have Done in This Way.

Written specially for the Canadian Grocer by Victor Lauriston, Ekildna,

The average housewife, between intervals of cooking the meals, putting the house to rights and minding the baby, has her eyes and ears wide open; and at supper time she is a paragon of deafness and blindness if she can't name every grocery rig which has driven past the house since sunrise. This is chiefly why the delivery rig, especially in a town or small city where the number of rigs is limited, is an advertising medium just as genuinely valuable as printers' ink or window display.

Yet it is an advertising medium which grocers, even grocers who use plenty of newspaper space and dress their windows to the limit, are apt to neglect, from sheer blindness to its value.

What McPush Did.

When McPush—we'll call him McPush for the sake of argument—started in business on a side street a good many years ago, he had no desire to limit himself to the usual corner grocery business, done chiefly after nightfall. Among his first moves was the purchase of a delivery rig which proved to be one of the handsomest and most up-to-date in town. In all probability his total deliveries at that precise time were embraced within a radius of a few blocks, and he could have covered the whole territory with a boy and a push cart.

But he built for the future, as all business men should. Every day that rig started out bright and early, and kept on the go with slight intermissions all day long. And everywhere housewives, sighting the attractive design in scarlet and gold and reading the name, "McPush" in big, bold letters, wondered how it came about that McPush, who had been in business only a month or two, was already delivering clear across the city.

Curiosity Brought Results.

Curiosity prompted investigation. Investigation brought people in streams to the McPush counters. When the time came to actually deliver, McPush had the goods. The quality was right, the prices were right, and finally, McPush was the kind of man who knew how to retain custom once it came his way. Those who had come originally from curiosity, kept coming because it was business, and the far-reaching trips of the handsome delivery rig ceased to be all bluff, or anything like bluff. No—it was not the deluge of business of which one reads in romances; but it was a good, substantial trade, drawn from all parts of the town.

Now, if McPush had been content to send out a rig just like every other rig or a little worse, painted an obsolete hue and with the firm name scarcely distinguishable for spattered mud—but never mind! If McPush had been content to send out a rig like that, he would never have sent out a rig at all, but would have used the small-boy-and-push-cart delivery system to the end of his days.

Good Advertising and Bad.

The rig may be a good advertisement for your business, or it may be a bad one. It may attract trade, or it may actually drive it away. The average rig, a purely indifferent quantity, does neither. Like your show window, your delivery rig is the outward and visible sign of the quality and methods within.

The impression the rig creates may be favorable; or it may be just the reverse. To make a favorable impression involves steady care and watchfulness work, and finally, the expenditure of money. Nevertheless, in the end, it will prove amply worth while.

The first essential in the rig, as in the store itself, is cleanliness.

Cleanliness An Essential.

The average housewife devoutly believes that cleanliness is part of godliness, and a very important part. It is a gospel which she not only believes, but lives. It is the housewife to whom the grocer must cater.

The rig should, therefore, be kept scrupulously clean. While, of course, at certain seasons of the year mud is prevalent and in a measure excusable, nevertheless it should not be permitted to accumulate until the original color of the rig is a thing forgotten, and the hubs and spokes, caked and crusted with the refuse of the streets, look like integral portions of terra firma. The outward dirt of the rig may not, probably does not injure the groceries, especially when, as is almost universally the case, the goods are carefully wrapped; but the impression is unfavorable. To the public mind, contamination is wonderfully easy, and the dirty rig indicates a carelessness which may be just as evident when the groceries are wrapped.

If external cleanliness in connection with the rig is policy, internal cleanliness is a duty.

Make It Distinctive.

The grocer is losing an opportunity when he fails to make his rig as distinctive in appearance as possible.

All rigs are, of course, of a general size and shap. But in the blending of colors and the styles of lettering the grocer is afforded opportunities to make his rig so different from all others that one who sees it cannot help but remember.

For instance, away back in 1893—the year of the Columbian Exposition—a grocer in a small town adorned his rig with a handsome painting of Columbus discovering America. Expensive, of course. Nevertheless that rig attracted attention; and, as a result, advertised that particular grocer and his business. Of course it is not necessary for the average grocer to go that far in his search after effect.

New Paint and Bright.

A first essential to an attractive rig is that it should look new. Faded paint presents an aspect scarcely more cleanly than does dirt itself; and the impression it creates is suggestive of age, mildew and decay. While a new coat of paint cannot be put on with every season, nevertheless, it should not be withheld when the rig needs it. Care as to the quality of the paint used will produce good results.

Other essentials are: the grocer's name in striking letters, his street address, and his telephone number. If you have a striking store emblem or a catchy advertising phrase, add that too. If you have a specialty, use your rig to boom it. The big, blank side of that rig is a certain amount of valuable advertising space where passers-by will read because they cannot escape from it.

Avoid the Traditional.

Don't tie yourself down to any traditional color of background, or to any traditional style of lettering. Don't imitate. Because the majority of grocerys rigs in your town are all the same faded yellow, is the very reason why you should choose a more pronounced and less hackneyed color. Study combinations of color, and strive for new effects.

For instance, all the ice wagons in a certain town have from time immemorial been innocent of any adornment. Here comes a new dealer who, along with his name and business, portrays in suitable colors a polar bear on a cake of ice. There is a cool suggestiveness in such a design that appears to a man in the street, especially in mid summer. A baker features a special variety of "registered" bread. He adorns his rig with the picture of a farm house and the legend, "Farm House Bread." Doesn't that help to fix the name of the baker and his brand in the memory of the passerby?

In fact, for all classes of people and all ages of life, pictures will never cease to appeal. The people who haven't the patience to peruse any other part of the Sunday paper invariably turn to the illustrated supplement. Any magazine story is rendered far more effective by illustrations.

What is your specialty? Use your rig to boom it pictorially, as well as in words. Are you, for instance, making a feature of having early fruits in stock a day or two before anyone else? Just set that pictorial artist of yours to work.

Enterprise Pays.

A few years ago there were many comments upon the public spiritedness of the grocer who turned out a handsome rig, while the man who added a picture threw the public into spasms. They looked upon him as people used to look upon Andrew Carnegie when he went scattering libraries through the length and breadth of the land. They said that it cost a lot, but it showed that Grocer S-oand-So was enterprising and progressive. To-day however, grocers are realizing that the man who was apparently throwing away his money in an extravagant display of good taste, may really have been gifted with exceptionally keen business sense. For it is, and always will be, good business to make your rigs so attractive that they will help to draw customers to your counters; just as it is bad business to leave them muddy, uncleanly, decrepit and consequently repulsive.

CANADA'S GREAT EXHIBITION.

Displays of Foodstuffs and Manufactures of Special Interest to Grocers and the General Public.

The Canadian National Exhibition, to be held in Toronto from August 29 to Sept. 14th, always offers an attraction to grocers and provision dealers, as well as the public generally, by reason of the comprehensive displays of foodstuffs and household articles made by manufacturers and agents. For several years this has been one of the most attractive features of the Exhibition, and this year promises to be just as full if not more complete.

This year, also, there will be more than the usual number of foreign exhibits. Several manufacturers of different products in France and Great Britain having signified their intention of sending over exhibits. In addition there will be exhibits of varied character from different islands in the West Indies, from Mexico, and a number of the States in the Union.

Other features, such as music, special entertainment, and novel attractions of various kinds are being well looked after, and the Canadian National Exhibition as a whole promises this year to be as usual better than the last.

LARGE FRUIT SHIPMENTS.

Large shipments of lemons and limes are coming into Toronto the present season and the demand seems to be unusually good. White & Co. received over 1,200 boxes of verdelli lemons this week and also large shipments of fresh limes. W. B. Stringer is receiving quantities of Dominica limes direct from the growers.

NEW PROCESS OF FOOD PRESERVATION

French Chemist Discovers Method of Keeping Perishable Products by Application of Carbon Fumes—Promises to Play Havoc With Refrigerator System.

Recent advices from France report the discovery of a new process of food preservation by a Brussels chemist, Isidore Hislaire, for which most remarkable results are claimed. From tests of the new discovery which have already been made it would appear that the method will work wonders in the business of food preservation, and will, to a great extent, do away with the refrigeration method of preservation now so largely employed.

Carbon Fumes the Preservative.

The discovery may be briefly stated as the substitution of carbon for cold storage. The food, whether it be half a dozen eggs or a hundred tons of cheese, is exposed to the fumes that arise from some tablets prepared by the discoverer. This vapor coats the surface of the food with an invisible film, thus effectually preserving it from the oxidization of the air, and arresting putrefaction. The food thus treated remains for months in exactly the same condition, and it is said that it may be safely kept in any temperature thereafter. It is necessary, however, in order to apply the vapor that the food should first be placed in an air-tight chamber. Then the vapor is passed over it, and in a few moments the embalming has taken place.

The Secret of the Process.

The vapor is obtained from the melting at 170 degrees Fahrenheit of a white tablet, about the size of a 25-cent piece, and about four times as thick. About ten ingredients go to the making of the tablet and the combination of these, of course, is the chemist's secret. The vapor itself is said to answer to the tests of the purest form of carbon. Its presence may be easily detected by a peculiarly pungent smell, and its effect is seen in watering eyes and severe headache. These symptoms render accidental asphyxiation almost impossible. Before the preserved food can be eaten the carbon must be expelled, and this is accomplished by heating in the oven or boiling. The fumes are thus dissipated, and neither the nostrils nor the palate can detect the slightest trace of carbon.

Tests on Bacon and Eggs.

A test of the new process was made in England not long ago by a well-known firm of bacon-curers. Of a consignment received from Ireland four sides were "Hislairized," and four were left untreated. They were then returned to Ireland. In a few days the untreated bacon had to be thrown away, but the other sides were left for thirty-two days. At the end of that time two were sent back to London for examination, and found to be perfectly pure and edible, and free from the first sign of slime or fermentation. They were then smoked, and ten days afterwards were eaten. Another test was made with treated and untreated eggs, immersed in artifically prepared gastric juice. One disappeared as quickly as the other, thus proving that the carbon had not made the food indigestible.

An Effective Germicide.

Another important advantage claimed for the vapor is that it is an effective germicide. Meat once treated is rendered immune from flies and insects. Fifteen minutes' submission to the vapor will destroy all organisms. The bacilli causing typhoid, cholera, pneumonia, suppuration and anthrax all succumb. These results are expected to make the tablets valuable for the sterilizing of linen in hospitals. It is thought, too, that the silkworm industry will benefit by the process. At present the destruction of the chrysalis in the cocoon is an extremely delicate operation. The vapor, however, will destroy the chrysalis without injuring the silken filaments.

So far as expense is concerned the application of the new process seems likely to play havoc with the iceman's business. A ton of meat, for instance can be treated at the expense of about half a dollar, and this is expected to keep the food in good condition for a month at least. The apparatus necessary, when the new method comes into general use, would include only an air-tight box, a tube and a spirit lamb for melting the Hislaire tablets. The discovery has been spoken of very highly by scientists and chemists in Europe and Great Britain, and the developments of its possibilities is awaited with great interest.

"Men Who Sell Things"

The Salesman Should Talk the "Gospel" of His Line and Talk it Hard—Don't Let the Backbone be a Wishbone—Some Considerations Regarding "Territory," Its Treatment and Possibilities—What to do in the Enemy's Country.

By Walter D. Moody—Serial rights for Canada purchased by the MacLean Publishing Co. from the publishers, A. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

Harmonious Conditions.

The second step toward gaining the end in view is for the salesman to put himself as far as possible in entire harmony with all the conditions under which he works. To do this, his relations with his house should be candid and agreeable; there should be no rankling remembrances of differences which he may have had with the manager or others in the house. He should have absolute faith in the product he is selling; he should feel in entire sympathy with every prospective customer with whom he talks.

This last is a most important matter. Some salesmen seem to think that it is sufficient if they preserve the outward forms of courtesy and patience and consideration in dealing with a trying customer.

Perhaps the customer's objections are ridiculous because of his ignorance, and prejudiced because of his narrow-mindedness. It is necessary to get down to first principles and improve upon his education before he can form any conception of the value of what is offered him. The salesman who is not genuinely in earnest will hate this slow and tedious process. He will talk in the kindliest possible manner to his customer, of course, but mentally he will be calling the man a fool, and wondering how such an antiquated specimen managed to survive the flood. The customer, of course, hears what the salesman says, and does not know what the salesman is thinking. Still, he is very likely to be affected by the negative thoughts in the salesman's mind. If he gives his order at all, it is because he has either been beaten in argument or made to feel ashamed of his own conservatism. It is certain that he has not been influenced by the power of attraction.

The salesman who was really in earnest would undertake the same task without any mental reservation. This at least would leave his mind free to devise ways and means by which his prospects might be enlightened. He would have a quicker insight into the circumstances that govern the case. A mutual understanding and appreciation would be established, such as exist when two persons are said to be enrapport—a very necessary condition before one mind can exercise any attraction over another.

No one should confuse the mental action described here with hypnotism. It is not recommended to make an attack on the will power of a customer, for that is neither fair play nor practical business. One can, however, develop a power to arouse the interest and goodwill of others, so that they will sometimes do voluntarily what a hypnotist seeks to make them do involuntarily. Such power, when acquired, assures some measure of success at least.

CHAPTER XIV.

Specializing Efforts.

Is your mind on the real game of salesmanship, or on a dozen outside ones?

This is the age of the specialist. In the world of materia medica the general practitioner is all right in his place; but when you are suffering with some specific ailment that requires a careful diagnosis and more careful treatment, if you value your life, a specialist is called in for consultation.

If you were obliged to engage the services of a lawyer on a difficult case, you would employ a lawyer who had a reputation for being particularly skilful in the very line in which your case is classed. The merchant does not long patronize a salesman whose energy is wavering and whose mind is set on anything and everything but the thing he has to sell. Singleness of purpose is one of the predominating features of successful salesmanship, just as it is in any other profession.

Some years ago a city clergyman of inquiring mind sent a number of postal card inquiries to non-church-going men in the neighborhood in which his church was situated, asking why so few business men attended church. He received many interesting replies, but the one that opened his eyes and set him to thinking hard was from a traveling man. It ran something like this:

"The doctor practises medicine; the lawyer practises law; a politician talks politics, and the business man talks his business; but the average modern clergyman of the so-called new school talks everything and preaches everything but the Gospel, the thing he was ordained to preach. Business men, or any other class of men, except, perhaps, Beau Brummells, do not care to go to church and listen to talks about the boys' brigade, the girls' cooking school, the ladies' sewing society, a treatise on the latest novel, nor side talks on current events of the day."

Talk "Gospel" and Talk it Hard.

The salesman who wanders about in his profession, like the Mississippi river seeking a straight course but not finding it, is not unlike the minister portrayed by our friend the traveling man.

If you are selling shoes talk shoes; dry goods, talk dry goods; clothing, talk clothing. Keep your mind on the one important thing.

Your customers do not care to discuss with you the candidacy of the next President of the United States; whether your baby has a new tooth or a dozen, your wife's disposition, nor the disposition of your neighbors. Neither are they interested in your competitors from your point of view. Their whole mind is centred, so far as you are concerned, on what you can do for them with your goods, not the other fellow's.

Concentration—putting your real thought in your real work; that is it.

You don't need to waste time reading this chapter if you are morally certain that the best that is in you is being used every hour, and used to give your customers, your house, and yourself the best chance possible—maximum results with minimum waste; and that applies to everything pertaining to your work—energy, time, expense, territory, and all.

Among the thousands of salesmen there may be a few that play the game of salesmanship as a good checker-player plays the game of checkers. The few in the thousands do not need to think about the importance of concentration, but a very great majority of salesmen do need to realize what oneness of purpose might mean to them.

The Wishbone Out of Place.

Every salesman wants something that he has not got. "His wish-bone may be where his backbone ought to be," but he wishes just as if Nature had made him right.

There is not a single salesman that is not planning in a more or less aimless way to do something, to get somewhere in life's journey, to be something worthy of the recognition of his superiors; and there is really not one that could not have his heart's desire, or at least succeed in a fair measure, if he would wear that wish-bone in the place for which it was originally intended. Keeping his mind on the essential things in salesmanship, and off other things, will help wonderfully his desire to get, do, and be something more than a wayfarer on the highway of success.

Have you ever seen two salesmen with relatively equal chances—a good salesman and a bad salesman?
